THE TRIBES AND CASTES OF THE HIMALAYAN DISTRICTS OF KOOLOO, LAHOUL, AND SPITI.

THE BRAINANS II -THE KAN, OR KANEIT TRIBE. HI.-THE SUNYAR TRIBE. IV.-THE BARRAOI TRIBE Y.—THE GOSAIN TRIBE YI.—THE AND TRIBE YI.—THE BOTH TRIBE THE THE BOTH TRIBE YII.—THE DAOHT TRIBES. IX.—THE LOHAR TRIBE X.—THE BARRAYAR TRIBE XII.—THE CHAMAR TRIBE XIII.—THE EGGA TRIBE, XIV.—THE BORANS XV.—THE LAMAS XVI.—THE WORS.

Trus tract of country is situated in the upper range of the Himalayas, to o west of Chinese Tartary, having Ladakh on the north, and Bussahir and a small States of Kotghur, Kombarsen, and Shangri on the south. It lies ithin the jurisdiction of the Deputy Commissioner of Kangra, and has a total rea of a little more than six thousand square miles. The mountains are very stry, many of the peaks heing twenty thousand feet and upwards in height. The province, with its population of nearly one hundred thousand persons, came nto the hands of the British in the year 1866. Its inhabitants are divided into he following tribes:—

I -The Brakmans.

These are few in number. Strange to say, they cultivate their own lands, thich Brahmans rarely do on the plains. Brahmanical caste, however, in this imote region, is much less stringent in its influence than elsewhere. This is anifest from the fact that Brahmans sometimes marry women of the Kini tribe, low them, whose progeny are reckoned either as Brahmans or Rajpoots. It is is fashion with some of the principal Brahmans to wear golden carrings. Their vives are distinguished by not wearing on their heads the small round cap outmoutly worn by the married women of the country. The Brahmans of Lahoul as e come from Chumbu and other parts, and are only found in Puttun. They are charge of the Hindeo temples throughout the province, and are said to echildiely superstitions.

IV.-The Bairagi Tribe.

On the plain's Bair'agis are devotees; but in these hill tracts they have there are and families, and are engaged in secular pursuits. A tradition prevails among men that their ancestors came from Ajudhiya, in the reign of Rajah Jagat Singh, put 1640, and settled here with the view of promoting the worship of Vishinu preover, there is good evidence for believing that, some time after this, another all of Bairagis entered Kooloo, and rendered important assistance in quelling a volt. Most of the members of the tribe now found in the province are the spring of intermarriages between Brahmans and Kaneits (a).

V .- The Gosain Tribe.

There also are unlike their namesakes elsewhere, for they are not by profesn a religious people as are the Gosans of the plains, but follow secular occupans, and have wives and families.

VI.—The Tawî Tribe.

Masons. Properly they should belong to the Daghi tribes, but in reality by rank between them and the Kanerts.

VII .- The Bhot Tribe.

The inhabitants of Spiti are described as Bhots, who have largely interngled with the Tartars across the border. "Not many years ago, a colony of to hundred persons emigrated from what the people call China, but which was, all probability, the territory of Great Thibet" (b).

VIII .- The Daghi Tribes.

These are also termed Bagâû, and Koli, the latter word being the designation all Kooloo people by the residents of the plains. It is manifest that dâghi has generic signification, as it embraces a number of separate tribes and castes, nese will be presently given in detail. The Daghi tribes are apparently all those ich come between the Kaneits and the lowest tribes, regarded as outcasts sewhere. The Daghis are called Britûs in Seoraj.

In appearance the Daghis scarcely differ at all from the Kaneits. Some of em are landowners, but on a much smaller scale than the other race. There is naiderable dissimilarity in the inhabitants of the three districts. The people of Kooloo, as well as those of the neighbouring tracts, known as Wuzeeri-Rupi and Seoraj, are not unlike ordinary Hindoos. "The men, as a rule, are of the medium height, and are strongly huilt, with intelligent and pleasing faces. Except in certain localities, the hair is not worn long; and it is rarely that large heards or whiskers are to he met with. The women, more particularly those of the Upper Beas Valley, whether from the greater variety in their picturesque attire, or whether from a really superior style of feature, are more preposessing than the men and many of the children, when young, are quite beautiful. The Lahoulees are not a comely race; and the internaixture of Hindoo and Tartar blood has failed to produce a population remarkable for good looks. Both sexes are short; and the women, perhaps, hear off the palm for ugliness, the Mongolian origin of the race being shown, in many cases, by the oblique eyes, flat face, and large mouths; but the Hindoo type is not unfrequently observable; and there are both handsome men and women to he found in Lahoul. The people of Spiti hear unmistakable evidence on their faces of their Chinese or Mongolian descent. The men are stout, well-huilt fellows, and the women are also very strongly framed. Many of the men resemble veritable Calmucks; and, with few exceptions, fall, as do the women, very far below the European standard of heauty. Indeed, for positive hideousness of countenance, the people of Spiti are, perhaps, pre-eminent in the British empire" (a).

Dense ignorance is a striking characteristic of the inhabitants of these districts; very few, even of the better classes, being able to read. Under native rule, some amount of education was necessary for writing public documents and keeping public accounts. Unfortunately, under British rule, many officials have been strangers from Kangra and other parts, which circumstance has administered a check to the education of the people. However, attention is now being paid to the subject by the Government, and the evil is being remedied. Moreover, schools have been established in various places. But the most important instrumentality for improving the moral and intellectual condition of this community, is that of the carnest and self-sacrificing members of the Moravian Mission at Kielung in Lahoul, of whose disinterested and efficient labours in this respect the English officials of the Government speak in the highest terms.

Polygamy and polyandry are both practised among these mountain tribes.

The frequent festivals held are productive of much licentiousness, and men and women readily hreak the marriage contract. Early marriages are by no means the rule, and, in some places, especially in Spit, young men are not married until they are twenty years of age, and young women not before their fifteenth year. In Kooloo the bridegroom in reality purchases his wife by making a substantial present to her father, and she is esteemed as much for the services she can render her husband in field labour, as for the assistance she renders in the affairs of the house. The marriage ceremony is simple. Presents are given to the bride and the members of her family, a goat is killed and lagri a stupefying and intoxicating hquor, is freely drunk. In Spiti marriages are performed in the open air when the Lama reads certain prayers, and imprints the sacred mark on the fore heads of the wedded pair.

1 The Barhar Tribe

Carpenters They consider themselves a separate caste, but in reality are Daghis. The term barkar is the same as that used to designate the carpenter caste in the North Western Provinces, from whom, it is probable, this hill tribe has taken the name, although it is unlikely that the races are the same, or that they would associate together on equal terms, or intermetry.

- 2 The Built Tribe Basket makers
- 3 The Daugant Tribe.
  Iron smelters
- 4 The Pumbl Tribe
  Wool cleaners
  - 5 The Nath Tribe

These are distinguishable by their enormous wooden earnings

6 The Temple Musicians

They are attached to the temples, where they beat the drum and blow the horn or fife, in honour of the idols, in return for which they receive a small grant of temple lands

The Deghis eat the flesh of animals which die a natural death. They are bound to give service as porters, and to provide a number of things needed at encompments. These residing in Lahoul are said to have come originally from kooloo.

IX - The Lohar Tribe

Blacksmiths Socially, these are of about the same rank as the Daghi tribes, yet the latter refuse to intermarry with them. In some respects for example in not eating the flesh of animals which due of themselves, the Lohirs are superior to the Daghis. In Spit some of the tribe are owners of land.

X-The Barravar Tribe .

Blanket weavers

XI — The Hensi Trube

Professional musicians in Lihoul Their wives and daughters perform as natch girls

XII - The Chamar Trube

Dealers in leather, like their brethren on the plains. The Dighis hold themselves aloof from the Chamárs, and will not intermirry with them

XIII - The Beda Tribe

A low caste race, with whom Lohârs and others of their rank refusa to associate They are the musicians of Spiti, performing the part which the Hensis undertake in Luhoul The Bedas hold no land There is a saying prevalent in Spiti, 'the Beda, no land the dog, no load (a)

XIV -The Borans

Itinerant monks, who are actors of plays and chaunters of legends

XV -The Lamas

In Lahoul, according to Mr Lyall's Census Report, as many as eleven hundred landowners are Lamas, who murry, cultivate land, and 'have very little of the monk about them,' while only seven echbutes fulfilling properly the duties of a Lama, exist in that district. In Spitt, however, the case is widely different. There were in 1868 three hundred and eighty two in that district, all of whom were connected with five large monasteries. The monks of four of these monasteries were celibates, but those of Peen, the fifth, were allowed to marry. All younger sons in the Spitt Valley become Lamas, and unless associated with the Peen monastery, are devoted to celibacy. The state of morality in the monasteries in which monks and nuns live promiseuously, is the lowest possible

The Lamps of Spiti go barehevded, except on certain important occasions, when they decorate themselves with a singular head dress. Their coat is of a yellow colour. They have no trousers Each sect adopts its own colour (a)

The Lunas of Lahoul lave no recognized head, but those of Spiti, in which district Buddhism has been longer in existence, are under the authority of a primate, styled the Head Gelong, and of five other ecclesiastical chiefs subordinate to lum, each of whom bears the appellation of Gelong — The Gelong of the highest rank must visit Tashhumpo or Lihassa, in order to obtain the degree—All the Lamas can read and write

XVI -The Nuns

Every woman or girl among the Buddhists has the right or privilege of becoming a nun. "Generally, says the Rev. Mr. Heyde, one of the Morivian missionaries at Kielung, "the parents decide whether their daughter is to be one or not, when she is still quito a young child. In Lulioul no particular ceremonies or rites are observed when a girl enters the religious order. Her hair is cut quite short, and she wears thenceforth a red cap, and is bound to learn to reid a little. Here, the mins have not, as in Thibet, proper closters of their own. They are attached to the monasteries, in which they live only during winter for one or two months. They may also quit their order either to marry, or for other reasons. They frequently marry Lamas. (b)

In the year 1868, there were seventy one nuns in Lahoul able to read and write, and one of them was skilful enough to calculate an ecluse

CHAPTER II.

TRIBES OF THE NORTH-WEST FRONTIER.

This Frontier commences from the Kaghan Glen in Hazara, on the eastern hank of the Indus, crosses that river below Torbela, runs in a north-westerly direction to the hills opposite Swat, encloses the Peshawur Valley, passes to the east of the Afreedes territory, hounds Kohat on the north and west, advances beyond Bunnoo and Murwut, and stretches southwards by the Wuzeeree hills to the head of the Sulaimani Range, on the west of Dera Ishmael Khan and Dera Ghazi Khan, till it joins the Indus again, on the borders of Scinde and the kingdom of Kohat, its entire length being fully eight hundred miles.

The tribes on this frontier, on both sides of the line, -that is, those under British jurisdiction, and those which are either independent or acknowledge the suzerainty of the Ameer of Afghanistan, - are, for the most part, a wild, fierce, and warlike people. Their lawlessness and impetuosity have been much restrained of late years; and the tribes within the frontier have, under British rule, been greatly changed in habits and character, and have made no little progress in civilization. The tribes beyond the border have imhibed a wholesome dread of British power and intrepidity, and have arrived at the conviction of the danger accruing to themselves arising from the ruthless and unprovoked incursions into British territory, in which, for years after the annexation of the Punjab, they freely indulged. This restraint, which they are now compelled to exercise, has undoubtedly exerted a healthy moral influence upon them. Were it lessened, or were they, from any disaster arising to British dominion in India, or to our armies in war either there or elsewhere, to conceive the idea that our Government had become weak, and was not so able to restrain their violence as formerly, they would not be long in seizing any opportunity which offered to gratify their propensity to plunder, and lav waste the lands of tribes in British territory. In 1856, Sir Richard Temple graphically sketched the character of these independent and semi-independent tribes. His description of them may appear, after the lapse of more than twenty years, a httle too highly coloured Yet it will be nseful as well as interesting to many persons to know the views of so eminent a man on this subject

"Now, these tribes," Sir Richard remarks, "are savages, noble savages per haps, and not without some fineture of virtne and generosity, but still absolutely harharians, nevertheless They have nothing approaching to government or civil arthuring nevertheless with the creeds of the widest races on earth In their eyes the one great commandment is blood for blood, and fire and sword for all infidels, that is for all people not Mahomedans They are superstitious and priest ridden But the priests (Mullahs) are as ignorant as they are bigoted, and use their influence simply for preaching crusades against unbelievers, and inculcate the doctrine of rapine and bloodshed against the defenceless people of the plain. The hill men are sensitive in regard to their women , but their customs in regard to marriage and betrothal are very prejudicial to social advancement. At the same time they and denoted the etyp regiment as section at variance. At the same time they are a sensual race. They are very avaricious. For gold they will do almost any thing, except herry a guest. They are thevish and predatory to the last degree. The Pathan mother often prays that her sen may be a successful robber. They are utterly fauthless to public engagements. It would never even occur to their minds that an oath on the Koran was binding, if against their interests It need he added that they are fierce and bloodthursty They are never without weapons.
When grazing their cattle, when driving beasts of hurden, when tilling the soil they are still armed They are perpetually at war with each other Every tribe and section of a tribe, has its interneeine wars, every family, its hereditary blood feuds, and every individual, his personal foes There is hardly a man whose hands are unstuned Each person counts up his murders Each tribe has a debtor and credutor account with its neighbours, life for life They consider reta-lation and revenge to be the strongest of all ohligations They possess gallantry and courage themselves, and admire such qualities in others. To their minds hospitality is the first of virtues Any person who can make his way into their dwellings will not only be safe, but will be kindly received But as soon as he has left the roof of his entertainer, he may be robbed or killed. They are chara table to the indigent of their own tribe They possess the pride of birth, and regard ancestral associations They are not average to civilization whenever they have felt its benefits They are fond of trading, and also of cultivating, but they are too fickle and excitable to be industrious in agriculture, or anything else They will take military service, and, though impatient of discipline, will prove faithful, unless excited by fanaticism. Such briefly is their character, replete with the unaccountable inconsistencies, with that mixture of opposite vices and virtues, belonging to savages "(a).

I -TRIBES OF THE HAZARA FRONTIER.

SEC I—THE HUSSUNZYE TRIBE. SEC. H—THE KOHISTANCE TRIBE. SEC. HI.—THE TUR-NOULEE TRIBE. SEC. IV.—THE GURKUR TRIBE. SEC. V.—THIP DHOOND TRIBE. SEC VI.— THE SUTTEE TRIBE. SEC. VII.—THE SATURS OF AGGILAN. SEC. VIII—THE SWATELS

The district of Hazara lies between the Jhelum and the Indus, at the northwest corner of the Sind Saugur Doab. It has an area of two thousand five hundred square miles, most of which consists of hills and ridges. Scarcely a tentb part of the whole is level ground. The Murreo sanatarium is situated on a spur of the Suttee Hills. The famous Gundgurin mountain was once infested by a predatory and warlike people, who bave either been driven out, or have settled down in quietness and peace. Hazara originally formed a part of Maharajah Golab Singh's dominions, but was exchanged for a tract adjoining the Jummoo frontier. The tribes inhabiting this region are as follows:—

Section I .- The Hussunzye Tribe.

This tribe occupies the strip of land hetween the extreme northern boundary of the Hazara District and the Indus, in which tract is the 'black mountain,' so called from its dark and frowning aspect. The Hussunzyes made themselves notorious in the autumn of 1851 for the unprovoked and cold-blooded murder of Messrs. Carne and Tapp, two Government officials, whose curiosity had led them to the border, and who were put to death a short distance within British territory. This event led to an expedition being sent against the tribe at the end of the next season, as it was evident that the whole fraternity approved the deed. The chastisement administered cowed the tribe, and eventually tranquillized the border country in that direction.

Section II .- The Kohistanee Tribe.

The tract to the north-east of that held by the Hussunzyes, adjoining Agrore in Hazara and Kaghan, is in the possession of the Kohistanee tribe, and of a people who originally eame from the Swat Valley.

Section III - The Turnoulee Trahe

A Pathan tribe in Hizzar. The small principality of Jehandad lies to the west of the district, and contains in area of two hundred and fifty square inites. It is "held as a fief from the Government, and the chief possesses independent internal jurisdiction" (a). This small territory is conveniently situated between us and the Hussunzyes. The Turnoulees also have lands on the western bank of the Indus. They were stern opponents of the Scikhs previous to British rule in the Punjah.

Section IV -The Gukkur Trabe

An aboriginal race subdued by Pathan invaders from beyond the Indus They are found to the south of the district. The Gukkur chief resides at Khanpoor Formerly, the Gukkurs, secure in their mountain fastnesses, set the rulers of the Punjah at defiance, and even exacted blackmail from them

Section V-The Dhoond Tribe

The territory to the east of that held hy the Gukkurs, as far as the Jhelum, is inhalited by the Dhoonds, a rocky country traversed by torrents, in which a wild and hardy people, led by fanatical priests, could, in former times, successfully defy their enemies

Section VI -The Suttee Tribe

These possess lands in the centre of the district, and onwards in a northerly direction

Section VII -The Saynds of Kaghan

Kaghan is a long and narrrow glen, extending in a north east direction in the district of Hazura for a distance of innety inites, and separating the territory of the Maharuph of Cashmere from the independent tribes of the mountains. For merly, a family of Suyids exercised jurisdation over this tract. At the end of 1852 they assumed an attitude of resistance to the British Government, and "intrigued with the Sitana fanatics, and with the Hussinazyes, then hostile to the British." A small force heigh sent against them the Saiyids surrendered, and were exiled for three years, at the expiration of which time they were permitted to return home, but were not reinstated in the honourable position they had previously held, of administrators of Kaghan. Their private estates, however, were restored to them; to which was added a pension from the Government (a). In a previous period the Saiyids of Kaghan had aided Sayed Ahmed, who was killed at Balakote, at one extremity of the glen, "opposing his hundreds of rude mountaineers to the bayonets of Seikh soldiers under Maharajah (then koonr) Shere Singh."

Section VIII ... The Suratees

These have come from the Swat Valley, but are now regarded as naturalized inhabitants of Hazara. They have extensive lands in some parts of the district, such as Agrore, Mansera, and Gurhee Hubeeboollah.

CHAPTER III.

II ... TRIBES OF THE PESHAWUR FRONTIER.

SEC 1—THE EUSUFFYE TRIBE. SEC. II.—THE KHULEEL TRIBE. SEC. III.—THE LOWER MOINING TRIBE. SEC IV.—THE JADOON TPHIE. SEC. Y.—THE SAINE COLONY OF SITANA SEC. YI.—THE BOON ERE TRIBE. SEC. YII.—THE SWATEE TRIBE. SEC. XI.—THE OSMAN KHEYL TRIBE. SEC. X.—THE UPPER OR UILL MOINING TRIBE. SEC. XI.—THE APRECIDE TRIBES.

Tite valley of Peshawar is about two thousand four hundred unles in superficial area. On the south east flows the Indus while on its northern, western and southern boundaries are the Swat, Khyber, Mohmund and Khuttuk hills It is inter-ected by the Cabul river and its affluents. Peshawar Project has two divisions, one represented by the country lying between the Cabul and the Khuttuk and Afreedec hills, the other, by that which is bounded by the Cabul and Barr river and the Khyber bills, and in which the city of Peshawar is situated.

The term Barduram is applied, says Mr Elphinstone, to the tribes on the north cast of Afghamstan "enclosed between the range of Hindoo Cooh the In list the Sait Range, and the Range of Sobman They consist of the Ensufages Othman Kheyls, Turkolanis, Khyberces, the tribes of the plan of Peshawur and those of Bungush and Khuttuk (a) These tribes have derived their civilization such as it is, from India

Section I -Tle Tusuf-ye Tribe

The Fusuityes are Pathans inhaliting chiefly the north-catern part of the Peshawur District, although found also in small numbers in many other parts of the Province. They are an energetic and powerful people, who in former times played an important part in the destinate of the Punjah. Not inferior in any respect to the independent tribes beyond the border, and historically a warlike race they have cheerfully accepted the British rule, and have directed their talents into a new channel. It has been justly said of them, that while they were once "participators in every war that convulsed the Peshawur Valley, and always were the recusant subjects of the Seikhs, they have now literally turned their swords into ploughshares, and are right good lieges of the British "(e). Under the Seikhs the Eusufzyes never would pay tribute except when levied by force; but through the excellent management of the administrators in Peshawur they willingly pay the revenue imposed upon them without the smallest resistance. Indeed, instead of cultivating their lands strongly armed, and ready for any sudden emergency, they lay them aside, knowing well that, under the British Government, they have no occasion for the use of warlike weapons either for defence or offence. Nevertheless, some of the hest soldiers in the Indian army are drawn from the Eusufzyes. In the battle of Terce, through which the Seikhs obtained the sovereignty of Pesbawur, the strongest portion of the Mahomedan army consisted of men of this tribe. The Eusufzyes are very sensitive on all matters connected with their social usages; and occasionally have shown a hitter and resentful spirit when their prejudices on this subject have not been respected. Mr. Elphinstone remarks, that it is not customary in this tribe for a man to see his future wife until the marriage ceremonies are completed, whereas most of the other Afgban tribes observe a very different usage (b).

Eusufzye has the Indus to the south, the Swat hills to the north and east, and the Cabul and the barren region of the Mehra to the west. The tribe bas been in possession of this tract for upwards of three hundred years. It originally came from Garra and Noshky, and formed a branch of the tribe of Khukkye. It has two great divisions, termed Eusuf and Muhder, the former consisting of three separate and distinct sects, namely:-1, the Akkozyes; 2, the Mullizyes; and 3, the Lawizyes(c). Mr. Elphinstone speaks of at least thirty separate independent communities of Ensufzyes(d). He says, that the men have "fair complexions. grey eyes, and red beards."

Section II.—The Khuleel Tribe.

This tribe inhabits that part of the valley of Peshawur which is opposite the Mohmand hills. Their chiefs hold jaghires, on condition of performing certain services to the Government On occasion of difficulties arising in our relations with the Mohmunds, these chiefs were temporarily exiled for permitting the escape of the enemy through their territory, and their lands were diminished

Section III - The Lower Mohmund Tribe

These live on British territors, in the south western part of the Peshawur Instrict and are related to the independent tribe of Mohmunds beyond the frontier, called for the sake of distinction the Upper Mohmunds who will presently be described. They are cultivators, and on the whole are a peaceable people notwith standing the friendly intercourse which they maintain with the neighbouring Afreedec tribes over the border.

Section IV -The Jadoon Tribe

The Jadoons are in independent tribe, whose territory is on the right brink of the Indus, to the south of the Hinssinzye country, and bordering on Eusufaye in a north westerly direction. Here is situated the celebrated Yount Midralum.

Section V-The Saignd Colony of Sitina

These are fanatics living at the foot of Mount Muhabun, on the right hank of the Indus Respecting them the following observations, taken from a paper pre pared by Mr (now Sir Richard) Temple, Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of the Punjab, dated January 31st, 1856, well be read with interest -" The Sayads of this place,' the writer says, " are the remnant of the followers of that extraordinary adventurer, Sayad Ahmed, who, gathering a handful of Ghazis, (warlike devotees), from various parts of India, raised a formidable rebellion in Peshawur After winning and losing Peshawur and Lusufzye, Saiyid was even tually slam at the mouth of the Kaghan glen by Sheer Singh, the son of Maharaja Runnect Singh Most of his adherents chiefly foreigners to the Punjah dispersed and the remainder settled at Sitana These Sitana people are evil intentioned and evid conditioned. They endeavour to rouse the bigotry of the surrounding Mahomedan tribes, and especially of the Swatees The king of Swat, indeed, was elected to his present position from among these very people. They endervour to intrigue with Wahabees and such like fanatic religionists among the Wahomedan population in various parts of India In 1852 they co operated with the Hus sunzyes against Jehandad, and actually serzed a small fort belonging to that elucf, but evacuated it on the approach of a British force under Colonel Mackeson They harbour murderers and had characters of all kinds Some of their number have been apprehended in the commission of crimes in the British territory, and have been hanged. In 1854 a band of reformed thugs were working on the road near Peshawur, and fled to Sitana. The ferry over the Indus close to Sitana is frequently harassed by the fanatics " (a).

Section VI .- The Boonere Tribe.

The independent tribe of Bunoorwals occupies the country to the north-west of the Jadoon territory, on the lower range of the Hindoo Koosh, having Swat on its western frontier. They seem to hold friendly relations with the Swatees. In 1849 they rendered assistance to some refractory British subjects at Loondkhor. in Eusufzye, who refused to pay revenue. Yet, says Sir R. Temple, "they have generally abstained from molesting our subjects; and we have had no concern with them. On a recent occasion, however," he adds, "they aided the Swatces in punishing the people of Pullee, a large independent village close to the Eusufzve horder. This combined force expelled the Pullee people and their chief, who fled for refuge to a British village in Eusufzye. The force then approached this village. that did not cross our border. They then threatened that if the Pullec refugees were not surrendered, the village should be hurnt. Hearing of this movement, two British officers, with a detachment of the Guide Corps, proceeded to the spot; that found that the hostile force had decamped. The dispute was, however, amically settled by the British officers. The Pullee people were sent back to their homes; and our villages were enjoined to stand aloof from all such affairs, and to avoid the giving of any just provocation to their neighbours beyond the horders" (b).

Section VII .- The Swater Tribe.

The long and fertile valley of Swat, watered by the Loondee or Swat river, is inhabited by this independent tribe. They have an elective chief over them, styled Padshah, or king, whose authority is supreme among the various clans. The high priest of the tribe, who is held in great veneration, is known as the Akhoond. The country is difficult of approach from British territory. It contains upwards of three hundred villages, and a population of perhaps one hundred thousand persons. Rice is ahundantly grown in the valley. Formerly, says Elphinstone, the Swat country extended from the western branch of the Hydaspes to near Islamabad. He also remarks that the Swatees are sometimes called Deggauns, and appear to he of Indian origin (c).

 (c) Elphinstone's Cabul, Vol. I, p. 417.

Respecting the passes through which to proceed to Swat from British territory, the best is Mullakund, to the north of Raneczyc — Castward of Raneczyc also are several passes, leading down into the Loondkhor Valley, in Eusufzye, but these passes "are not available for passing from Swat to our territory, because leading into Loondkhor they can be stopped by my party holding that valley "(a). The passes by the way of Raneczyc and Osmankheyl lead strught to Hushtung gur in British territory.

Formerly, the Swatces were constantly committing depredations among the villages of the Peshawur District, not on a large scale, but like robbers and bundits. Moreover, they harhoured criminals and evil disposed persons, who fied from the various districts of the Punjul to their country. "Our chief fault in their eyes was, that we were infidels by religion, and were the lords of a fur and fertile valley within reach of plunder." But their ways and manners have improved of late years.

Section VIII - The Rance-ve Tribe

On the north west of Lusufzye, over the border, is the country of the Raneszyes, who acknowledge a kind of dependency on the chief of Swat, at whose instigation they several times came into collision with the British Government in the earlier years of our possession of the Punjab On one occasion,—namely on the 18th May 1852,—a force was led out against them by Sir Colin Campbell, and in the hattle that was fought they left a hundred bodies dead on the field When they finally submitted, the border, in their direction, was brought into a condition of tranquility, such as it had not known for many years

Section IX -The Osmankheyl Tribe

To the west and north west of Runeezye is the territory of the Osmankheyls, who also acknowledge a quasi dependency on the Swit chieftan. Like the Raneezyes, they, at one time, gave is much trouble. Sir Colin Cumpbell destroyed Pringurli and Nowadund, two of their important villages. "On this occasion,' says Sir R. Temple, "some letters, believed to be genuine, were taken which proved the complicity of Swat. One letter from the lang to Arjoon authorized him to destroy all Europeans and Hindoos in the Peslawur Valley, and all Mahomedans in the British service, but enjoined him to spare all other Mahomedans" (b) He adds, that the tribe "profited by the lesson impressed upon them."

Section X .- The Upper or Hill Mohmund Tribe.

Their country stretches from the south-western districts of Swat to the hills north of the Khyher, to both banks of the river Cahul, the capital Lallpoora being situated on the left bank just beyond the north-western extremity of the Khyher. The Doaba, hetween the Cahul and Loondee rivers, overlooks British territory, and at one part is only twenty-five miles distant from Peshawur. Four clans of this trine, at the least, have, at times, severally or together, come into collision with the British Government. These are:—

- The Pindee Alee Mohmunds, whose country extends westwards from the right hank of the Loondee, and is naturally a very strong position.
- The Alumzye Mohmunds, to the south of the Pindee Alee's, the capital of which is Gundao. They also held lands in British Doaha, let out chiefly to tenants.
  - .3. The Lalpoora Mohmunds, on the Cahul river.
- 4. The Michnee Mohmunds, a portion of whose country was annexed to the Punjub, forming part of the Peshawur District. They occupy a jaghire, at the junction of the Cahal and Loondee rivers, a fertile tract, which is cultivated by themselves, to some extent, and by tenants of various tribes in the plains. But the jaghire was once more extensive than it is now, and was considerably diminished by reason of the atrocious act committed by some members of the tribe in the murder of Lieutenant Bullenois, of the Engineers, at the end of the year 1852, who had, merely for the sake of amusement, ridden for a very short distance into the lower hills among their lands. His head was sent as a trophy to Lalpoora. This was not the only offence they committed, for they withheld the payment of two years' tribute, and in other ways showed a had spirit. In the autumn of 1854 a force was sent against them, which destroyed some of their villages, and brought the rehellious Michnees to order.

The Mohmunds obtained their present possessions by conquest from the Delazaks, on occasion of the Afghans from the west invading this part of the country; and divided the land by lot among themselves (à). They have a few large villages or towns, such as Lalpoora, Kaumeh, and Goshteh; but, for the most part, the people live in very small hamlets.

Section XI .- The Afreedee Tribes.

Of all the tribes on this frontier,—that is, to the west and south-west of Peshawur,—the most important, if not the most powerful, are the Afreedees,

(a) Report on the Revived Settlement of the Mohmunds, by Lieut Col. Macketon, C. B., p. 21. Selections from the Public Correspondence of the Funjab Administration, No. VII, Vol. II.

Their territory comes sharply between the Peshawur and Kohat Districts, forming the northern boundary of the latter, and approaching the lands in the possession of the Khuttuks. The chief communications in the hills between these two districts are by means of the Kohat or Gullee Pass and the Jewakee Pass, running through the Afreedee country. Above, the territory is bounded by the Cabul river, and contruns the Khyher Pass. "The frontage of the Afreedee hills towards British jurisdiction extends over a length of eighty miles,' while to the west they stretch far back towards Cabul."

Respecting this rice, Sir Richard Temple, with a superior knowledge resulting from sagacious observation, remarks, that "they are entirely independent. Their hills are lofty, steep, and rugged, most ardnous for inditary operations. The villages are strongly posted, and difficult of access. The Afreedees are fierce by nature They are not destitute of rude virtues, but they are notoriously futbless to public engagements. They are split up into factions. The sub divisions of this tribe are numerous They can muster fifteen or twenty thousand fighting men As soldiers they are among the best on the frontier They are good shots Their tactics resemble those of the other tribes They retreat before the foc as he advances, and press upon him as he retires From the size of their country, and the strength of their numbers, the Afreedees, if united, might prove formidable opponents, but they rarely or never combine If their independence were threatened, or if some peculiar opportunity offered, they might act together, otherwise they will usually be found at war with each other We have to deal with one or two sections only at a time. If one be hostile, another will be friendly While operating against some Afreedees, we can always induce other Afreedees to be our allies Consequently, the tribe is not so formidable as might at first appear The Afreedees of the Khyber Pass, among faithless tribes, are considered the most faithless " (a)

To this statement may be added that of Sir Henry Lawrence, Sir John Lawrence, and Sir Robert Montgomery, in their conjoint Report on the administration of the Punjah, for the years 1849 50 and 1850 51 "The hold the kly ber and Kohat Passes The numerous sections of the tribe (kheyls) each headed by a chief, have been spht up into factions and united only to oppose the sovereigns of the Punjah, and of Cabul, and to levy blackmul from travellers and merchants All the great inviders and the supreme potentiates of Northern India have successively had the Afreedees in their pay Ghenguz, Timur, Babur, Nadir Shah, Ahmed Shah, the Barukzyes, the Seikhs, and, lastly, the British. To all, these unmanageable mountaineers have been treacherous. Their hills near the Khyber are difficult for military operations; hut the high lands of Turee, which stretch far back into the interior, and in which the Afreedees, together with the Orakzves and others, take up their summer abode, are accessible from Kohat. and possess a climate congenial to Europeans. They are brave and hardy, good soldiers, and better marksmen. If placed as escort or sentries over treasure, they are not to be trusted; but in action they are true to their salt, even when fighting against their own brethren. In this fidelity they are not singular. Fanatic Mohamedans everywhere will fight against men of their own creed on hehalf of the infidel, Hindoo, Seikb, or British" (a).

Some of the Afreedee clans which have at times opposed themselves to British rule in the Punjah, are the following :-

1. The Gullee.

3. The Bussee Kheyl.

- 2. The Jewakes.
- 4. The Bores. Two great families of Afreedees, the Adam Kheyl and Akha Kheyl, are divided into tribes as follows (b):-

The Khyberees, says Elphinstone, are "lean, but muscular men, with long gaunt faces, high noses and check-bones, and black complexion. They wear, in winter at least, dark blue turbans, and long dark blue tunies, sitting close to the body, but reaching to the middle of the leg" (c).

SEC VIII -THE WUZEEREE TRIRES 1-THE MAUSUD WUZHEREES 2-THE ANMEDIYE WUZZEREES 3-THE OTHMANIZE WUZEERES 4-THE BITHUNNER WUZERRER

KOHAT has to the south of Peshawur Its valley is thirty five miles long and, on an average, four miles broad From Peshawur through the Afreedee hills it is reached by two passes, the Jewakee and the Gullec or Kohat , and from the Indus forming its eastern houndary, it is approached by two pas es the hooshal gurh and the Kalahagh, through the Khuttuk hills Again, it is connected with Bunnoo to the south hy two passes, the Soorduk seven miles long and the Koonh 1 gao, from Nurree to Khurruk, a less direct but safer route The valley is famous for its salt mines

Section I -The Bungush Patl ans

These are the principal tribe in the Kohat District, of which they occupy the truct to the north west. The inhalitants of the Meeranzye Valley are members of this tribe When Kohat was taken possession of by the British Government this valley, which at that time belonged to Sultan Mahomed was overlooked On the Cabul Government making arrangements for its occupation in 1851, the Meeranzyes petitioned the British Government to be included in the Kohat District and their petition was granted The Bungush tribe can muster fifteen thousand fighting men, who are fairly good soldiers Their territory extends beyond the border into the Khoorum Valley within the limits of Cabul

Section II -The Khuttul. Trabe

This tribe occupies the hills to the south of the Peshawur District, the plain between them and the Cabul river, and the eastern division of the Kohat District along the right bank of the Indus. They are the dominant tribe of the Kohat Valley, and have possession of the Kooshalgurh Pass, leading from the Indus into Kohat. The Khuttuks are a manly and spirited people, and from the time of the annexation of the Punjah have maintained a loyal allegiance to the British Government. They are considered to be the best-conducted tribe on this frontier. Near the villages of Buhadoor Kheyl, Kurruek, and Lutumur, in the southern Khuttuk hills, are extensive salt mines. The Khuttuks of Bahadoor Kheyl and Lutumur are of the same tribe. Major Rennell Taylor states, that the Khuttuks of the Loaghir Valley and of the Zeokee, Shawa, Shenwa, and Pukkee, and likewise the Munjaie Khuttuks, are properly subjects of the Khuttuk Khan of Theree.

The Khuttuk tribe traces its descent, says Lieutenant Pollock, from the Kurtanees, styled also Burdooranees, in contradistinction to the Dooranees, from whom the Populzyes, Bamizyes, Suddozyes, Noorzyes, Alekozyes, Eusufzyes, Alexyes, and Barukzyes (divided into Mahomedzycs and Hussunzyes), are descended. The Kurtanecs are the progenitors of the Orukzyes of Thyruh, the Afreedees, Bungushes, Momunds, Khuleels, and Daudzyes (a). The Kbuttuks are divisible into four branches, as follows :-

- 1. The Khan Kheyl, or relatives of the Khans.
- 2. The Fakir Kheyl.
- 3. The Kaka Kheyl.
- 4. The rest of the Khntinks.

The eastern and western Khuttuks were originally one trihe under one chief (b). Sir Herhert Edwards gives the following as Khuttuk tribes :-

- Uzjhdu (or great).
- 2. Lund (little), called also Turki Kheyl,
- S. Nasratti.
- 4. Guddi Kheyl (c).

in number, but very hrave. They are in close proximity to the Afreedees, and yet are in no respect subordinate to them

- Their territory stretches along the north west boundary of Kohat from the Sepah country as far as that belonging to the Zymoosht Afghans They are one of the largest tribes on the frontier, and can muster upwards of twenty thousand fighting men The following are some of the principal branches of this tribe, the first three of which reside in the hills adjoining the Kobat District, the remaining three being the Orukzyes, who have come in contact with the British Government -

Branches of the Orukzyes

- 3 Ti e Meeranzre

- 4 The Shekban
- 5 The Mishtee
- The Pasbeuh Kheyl

The coal table land of Terah is situated in the midst of the Orukzye hills This is the resort of the people with their cattle in the summer serson in the winter they return to the lower hills on the Kohat frontier | The Hungoo Valley is twenty miles long by two or three broad, and the plains of Meeranzye into which it opens, are about nine miles square, and are held by seven fortified villages, which have been taken in charge by the British Government 1 ormerly each village was a commonwealth, and all were at feud with one another

There are a few Orukzves at Peshawur, Amritsur, and in some other parts of the Puniab

Section VI - The Zymoosht Afil ans

A small tribe of about five thousand hrave fighting men, inhabiting the valley from western or upper Meeranzye to the smannt of the Powar Kothul Range

Section VII -Tle Toone Tribe

This tribe occupies the hills to the south of the Zymoosht territory Noni nally they are subject to the Ameer of Afghanistan as also are the Zymooshts but in reality they are both independent At one time the Toorces committed frequent inroads on the Bungush and khuttuks villages of Kohat , but these have ceased for a number of years "They are says Captain Jones for inferior to the Wuzeerees in courage and all manly qualities. With coarse sensual features there is much of the savige about them. On scenting prey, their eyes dilate and they evince all the greet and ferocity of wild heasts. In their rules they are ruthless, and spare neither sex nor age. It was not unpleasing to hear that these men sometimes suffered in their thirst for plunder. On one occasion a party of them wandered off to an encampment, which they believed to he to near our camp to contain Wuzzerees; but they were disappointed. Some of them were killed; and the rest only escaped by the abject suhmässion of placing grass in their mouths, signifying that they were beasts of hurden to the Wuzzerees" (a).

Section VIII .- The Wuzeeree Tribes.

The country in the possession of this great tribe lies to the south-west of the Kohat District, or, more specifically, to the west of the Mecranzye Valley and Buhadoor Kheyl, stretching along the north-west frontier of Dera Ishmael Khan, flanking the valley of Bunnoo and the plains of Marwat and Tank. The Wuzcerees hold the Golaree Pass of the Goomul Valley, a pass of scarcely less importance than the Klayber Pass opposite Peshawar, and the Bolan Pass in Scinde. and the Soorduk Pass. Much of the traffic from Afghanistan and the countries beyond enters India through the Golaree Pass, while the Joorduk Pass is the chief line of communication between Bunnoo and Kohat. "The Wuzeeree hills command the outlets of the Koorum and Goombelie rivers into the Bunnoo Valley," The tribe seems to have come originally from that part of the Snowy Range which is situated to the south-cast of Jelallahad and Cabul (b). They pass the summer months on the higher peaks of the Sulimani Range. In October many descend with their flocks and herds to the lower Range, on the horders of Kohat and Bunnoo, where they spend the winter months, their lands in the upper hills being occupied, in their absence, hy Giljies from further west. The Wuzeerees are thus described by Sir Richard Temple:-"They are," he remarks, "noble savages of pure blood, pastoral habits, fierce disposition, and wild aspect. They are less addicted to internecine contests than other hill tribes. They are hold and ferocious, but as soldiers not equal to the most martial tribes. Many of them live in tents, or in temporary dwellings resembling tents. Some of them have engaged in cultivation, and have encroached on the weaker tribes of the plains. Of these again many will only cultivate during the cold months, and as the heat approaches will reap their crops and retire to the mountains. The tribe generally is quite independent, both of the Cabul and the British Government; but some members of the clan, who have taken up their abode as cultivators in the Bunnoo Valley, have become British subjects (a) Captain Iones Commissioner of Peshawur in 1860 says that the unity of the Wuzeerees is proverhial and that this marked characteristic of the tribe is fo tered by peculiar customs and laws It is well known be observes that among Pathans the avenuer of blood is not only privileged but bound to slay any relative of the man who had committed the deed for which vengeance is sought. But Wuzeeree grey beards of ancient times ruled otherwise With them the actual murderer must be the only victim effect of this wise law is to cement the tribe by avoiding those rumified fends which in other places arise out of indiscriminate vengeance where an account of hlood is handed down from father to son to be blancel at convenience and where the friend of yesterday I ecomes the victim of to day. Again the sums of money which under certain curcumstances are accepted by relatives of the slain locally denominated make up money are fixed at much higher rates than among other tribes Wuzecree life therefore is habitually regarded as something valu able The Wuzcerees also boast that they have no loor man among them Whenever a family is brought low by deaths accidents or raids from without the clan subscribes to re establish it—one bringing a bullock another a camel a third a blanket and so on. Thus there is no incentive to the Wukeeree to leave his home to seek a subsistence or to enter foreign service. I have only heard of one Wuzeeree in our army (b)

The tribe has few regular villages but encamps about il e hills its tents being constructed of stout black woo'len blankets spread over curved sticks with sides of course matting The blankets are costly very durable and utterly impervious to rain C tile and sheep are all kept within the encloure which is guarded by large dogs of remarkable ferocity The Wuzeerees are tall muscular and courageous and endued with enormous pride In 1856 they boasted that they had seen kings coming and going but had never seen the king who had taken revenge from them (c) It is the peculiarity of this great tribe says Sir Herbert I dwardes that they are enemies of the whole world The only traces of the past left by their ancestors consist of tombs which have evidently been constructed with great care. The tribe trides largely in salt the produce of several mines especially that of Pahadoor kheyl a very extensive mine which formarly supplied the whole of western Afgham tan as well as other tracts of country with salt

The Wuzeerees are divided into four principal branches, designated as Mahsud, Ahmedzye, Othmanzye, and Bithunnee.

Some of these have lands within British territory. Major Urmston, formerly Deputy Commissioner of the Bunnoo District, in his 'Rough Notes on that District,' has shown what clans are on either side of the border, and what the number of fighting men which each can command. I shall endeavour to summarize the valuable information he has supplied (a).

The Umarzyes were ejected from Bunnoo for disorderly conduct soon after our taking possession of the country; and for a time some of their men were prisoners in our hands. The Hatti Kheyls "cultivate lands on the Thull, under the Burghonuttoo and Chushmeh springs, and also in the neighbourhood of Goor. Their grazing ground extends from Burghonuttoo on the one side, to near Zerkye in the Khuttuk Range on the opposite side, of the valley" (a). They also trade largely in salt. The Painda and Bodeen Kheyls are intermingled with the Speerkye clans on the Dhummye Thull. The Bizzun Kheyls have also lands in the Peeng hills, between the Goomuttee and Burghonuttoo Passes.

In his "Year in the Punjab" Sir Herbert Edwardes has the following interesting observation on the characteristics of the Ahmedzyes, as contrasted with the Bunnoochees, whom they wronged and plundered:—"Proud, patriotic, and united among themselves, austere and simple in their own manners, but hospitable to the stranger, and true to their guest against force or corruption, the Ahmedzyes stood aloof from the people they oppressed, and looked on in contempt at their cowardly submission, their disunited efforts against the Seikh invader, their lying dealings with each other, their treacherous assassinations at the hoard, and the covetous squahhles with which they converted into a hell the heavenly valley given them by Nature" (b).

The Bithunness in British territory were once notorious robhers, but have much reformed since they came under British rule. An old feud subsists between them and the Meaness.

Respecting the character of the Wuzeeree tribes, Major Reynell G. Taylor quotes the language of Mr. Elphinstone, who says, that "they are remarkable for their peaceable conduct among themselves, and have neither wars between clans, nor much private dissension. Though they are notorious plunderers, the smallest escort secures a traveller a hospitable reception throughout the whole trihe. Their manners are haughty, and their voices are loud and commanding: but they are gentle and good-tempered in their intercourse with their guests and with each other. Such is their veracity, that if there is a dispute about a stray goat, and one party will say it is his, and confirm his assertion hy stroking his heard, the other instantly gives it up without suspicion of fraud." "Though Major Edwardes (Sir Herbert)," Major Taylor remarks, "has taken exception to this last paragraph, I should say that altogether nothing could he more truthful than these passages. The Wuzeerees are, undoubtedly, the most unanimous of all the Afghan tribes that we are acquainted with. They never quarrel among themselves: safeguards are always respected by them; and though, as Mr Elphinstone says, proverbially addicted to plundering, I have known large bodies of them live from one year's end to another without falling into any impropriety of the kind. With regard to their veracity, I consider the eulogy in a great degree correct and deserved. The possession of such an extent of virtue would not, however, make it incumbent on them to adhere to truth in their dealings with Bunnoochees, Khuttuks, or Government officials; their duties towards such being quite another affair in Wuzeeree ethics. I never remember to have heard of a Wuzeeree, or body of Wuzeerees, enticing an enemy into their power by false overtures, and then wreaking their vengeance on him; nor of their undertaking to guide or guard a man or kafilah (caravan) through their country, and then fulling on it I wish I could say as much, in either case, for the Binnoochees or other Afghan tribs of my equantance, who pretend to higher eivilization, and who would speak of the William as ignorant saviges, or, as the often used expression is—animals." (a)

The women of the tribe are not required to below. The custom prevails among the Wizzcrees of a wouldnichoosing a man for her husband. This is done by her sending a lear pin to the man on whom she has set ber affections with the request that he should with it pin a handkerchief on his cap. Should be reciprocate her attachment he carries out her wishes, and when doing so names the woman who has sent the pin, and whom he is obliged to marry forthwith (t)

A RANGE of hills, lying almost at right angles with the Sulaimeni Range and the Indus, divides the district of Dera Ishmael Khan into two portions. In proceeding from one side to the other you must do so by either the Peyzoo or the Mulezye Passes intersecting the Range. To the north of these passes is the Bunnoo

Section I .- The Bunnoochee Tribe (Luhûnee).

This tribe is descended from Shah Farid, or Shitak, who formerly had possession of the Shawal hill, whence he with his sons, about five hundred years ago, made inroads on the Bunnoo Valley, inhabited by Mangels, Hanees, and Khuttuks, whom he dispossessed. Bunnoo at one time belonged to the Kings of Delhi, but afterwards formed part of the kingdom of Cabul (a). It subsequently became

The Bunnoochee differs greatly from the Wuzeeree. He is small in stature, and has frequently a peculiar shrivelled appearance. His habits are low and repulsive. He seems to be unable to speak the truth, even though he may know that the subject on which he is to give his testimony is of great moment "Taken as a class," says Major Reynell Taylor, "the Bunnoochees are vicious, false, backbiting, treacherous, cruel, and revengeful They certainly are the worst dispositioned men I have ever had to deal with A Bunnoochee, either from private spite, or some petty object of his own, will deliberately give false evidence in Court, such as for aught he knows or cares may lead to the execution of one or more men under trial, and this without a shadow of compunction. They are also the class most naturally addicted to assassination that I have met with, hav ing that fatal attachment to the nee of the short kinfe or dagger, which more than anything stamps the character of the true assassin' (a) Sir Herbert Edwardes says of the Bunnoochees, that "they have all the vices of Pathans rankly luxu mant, the virtues stunted Except in Scinde, I have never seen such a degraded people Although forming a distinct race in themselves, easily recognizable, at first sight, from any other tribe along the Indus, they are not of pure descent from any common stock, but are descended from many different Afghan tribes, representing the ebb and flow of might, right, possession, and spohition, in a corner of the Cabul empire, whose remoteness and fertility offered to outlaws and vagabonds a secure asylum against both law and labour Every stature, from that of the weak Indian to that of the tall Duranee, every complexion, from the ebony of Bengal to the rosy check of Cabul, every dress, from the linen garments of the south to the heavy goat skins of the eternal snows,-is to be seen promiscuously among them, reduced only to a harmonious whole by the neutral tint of universal dirt' (b)

The Bunnoo Valley is nch and fertile The only part not cultivated is the Thull at the foot of the monntains The Wuzeerees took possession of a portion of the cultivated tract many years ago, and still retain it The villages are well built, but their fortifications, which once surrounded them, have been removed Formerly, there were four hundred forts within the Bunnoo territory All these were destroyed by Sir Herbert Edwardes when Deputy Commissioner of the district

The Bunnochees are farntical Mahomedans, and are staunch disciples of the great high priest, or Akhoond, of Swat

An intensely interesting and most exhaustive account of the Bunnoochees and their Villey has lately been written by Mr S S Thorburn, of the Bengal

Civil Service, who deserves immense praise, and other good things likewise, for his painstaking labours in the production of so excellent and useful a work.

Section II .- The Murroutee Tribe.

The Murwut territory lies to the south of the Bunnoo Valley, and to the north of that occupied by the Bithunness. It has three divisions, or tuppelus, namely, Dreypelarsh, Baram, and Moosah Kheyl. Formerly, Murwut belonged to the Nawab of Derah, before the Seikhs took possession of the country beyond the Indus. It is watered, but insufficiently, by the Khoorum and Goomul.

Physically the Murwutees are far superior to the Bunnoochees. They are a fine, manly race, tall and fair, and are not guilty of the mean and detestable practices of their neighbours. They will not rob or steal, but are a noble and high-spirited people; yet when once their passions are aroused, it is by no means easy to soothe them again. They are simple and upright, and are more advanced in eivilization than many of the border tribes. This especially applies to the inhabitants of Mennyallee and Esan Kheyi, who speak a broken Punjabee instead of Pushtoo. The worst feature of the Murwutees is the spirit of faction which prevails among them, and which often caused bloodshed in former times. The community is divided into two parties. Sir Herbert Edwardes says of the Murwutees, that "they are one of the finest races of the Trans-Indus—tall, muscular, fair, and often rosy-cheeked." "They are frank and simple in their manners with strangers; and distinguished from all the Pathan tribes, with which I am acquainted, by a more generous treatment of their women" (a).

These have already been described in the account of the tribes of the Kohat District and its borders.

Section IV .- The Chiefs of Dera Ishmael Khan.

The Nawab of Dera Ishmael Khan is of the princely house of the Suddoozyes. The family lost the great power which they once enjoyed when the Seikhs annexed the province to the Punjab; but are now in possession of a large jughire, which they have received from the British Government. They occupy the whole of Chondwan and a considerable portion of Dera Ishmael Khan Proper.

Section V .- The Chiefs of Tank or Tak.

The Tank Valley is like the Bunnoo Valley in fertility and beauty. It is connected with Bunnoo by the Mulizye Pass, and with Murwut by the Pyzoo Pass.

The chief was ejected from his territory by the Scikhs, but was restored by the British Government in 1848

Section VI - The Chiefs of Kolachee

The lands both of Tank and Kolachee are much exposed to the Sheoranees and Wuzeerees Much of this territory has been mortgaged for many years, greatly to the injury of the cultivators

Section VII - The Mithanee Tribe

This is a tribe inhabiting the Ghubber mountain, situated between Bunnoo and Tank Formerly, they were notonous for their plundering propensities, and were in perpetual collision with the Wuzeerees

Section VIII - The Nootkanee Tribe

This tribe has been described in the account of the Belooch tribes of Deri Ghazi Khan and its borders

Section IX - The Lûnd Tribe

A description of this tribe is given in the account of the Belooch tribes of Dera Ghizi Khan and its borders

Section X -The Sheorance Tribe

The Sheorunce hills extend from a little below the Goomul river for about fiven lies southwards. Here is the high square shaped mountain called Tablit 1 Sulamani, or Solomon's Throne, which gives its name to the entire Sulamani Runge, which is the north west frontier of India, and runs parallel with the Indias for three hundred miles. At the base of Solomon's Throne is the Zerkunnee Pass, which is of great importance, as through it much traffic proceeds en route to Kandahar, or from that city to British territory

The Sheorances are a warlike people, with grey eyes, and high cheek bones, but are not equal in stature to Wuzeerces. They are an independent tribe, and can raise a force of upwards of five thousand fighting men. Their character as neighbours does not stand high, for they have frequently come into collision with the tribes of Tak, Kolachee, Durrabund, and Choudwan, arising generally from raids which they have made upon these lands. Their plundering excursions were at length stopped in 1853, when a strong force was sent against them, by which some of their fortifications and thirteen of their principal villages were destroyed, and much property was seized (a). The Sheoranees resemble the Babhurs in manners and customs. Their dress generally consists of a coarse blanket thrown over their shoulders and fastened at the waist. They differ from other Afghans, says Elphinstone, in that a father gives a dowry on the marriage of his daughter, while the rest receive payment for their daughters when married.

Section XI.-The Oshterance Tribe.

A small tribe inhabiting the hill to the south of the Sheomnee territory, where they are independent. Many, however, cultivate the lands at the foot of the hills, and are consequently living within British jurisdiction. They are a bold and courageous people, but abstain from making incursions on the estates of their neighbours, to which the hill tribes are so prone, and to which themselves were formerly addicted. The Oshterances, says Major Reynell Taylor, "are a very fine class of men, brave in fight, and quiet and well disposed in peace. Their possessions, either in our territories, or out of them, are not extensive, and their means of livelihood are limited" (b). Their principal villages are Khoosebharah Pewar, and Wuch Khoosebharah, beyond the limits of British jurisdiction. They have lands, however, below the hills within our territory, in the neighbourhood of Koorwellee.

Section XII,-The Kharot Tribe.

These pasture their cattle in Tak, at the debouché of the Gomul. They are among the principal caravan traders between Central Asia and India (c). Mr. Elphinstone affirms that they are a division of the Ghilji Afghans, inhabiting "the country situated to the east of Kuttawaz, among the branches of the Range of Soliman." He also states, that the entire tribe consists of only five or six thousand funilles.

Section XIII .- The Doulat Kheyl Tribe.

A tribe to the south of the Murwutees. Their chief town is Tuck, by which the great road to Cabul runs, following the course of the Gomul for a considerable distance.

Section XIV-The Esau Kheyl Tribe

Esau Kheyl is a small tract of country forty miles in length, parallel with the Indus, and is south of the Kalabigh salt mines, and north of the Khyssore Range The tribe is divided into four class, namely —

- 1 Zukkoo Kheyl 3 Budunze
- 2 Mummoo Kheyl 4 Uppoo Kheyl

Elphinstone says, that the Esau Kheyls are of a swarthy complexion, and more like Indians than Persons

Section XV -The Khyssore Tribe

A tribe inhaliting the hills to the south of the Esan Kheyls

Section XVI-The Babban Trake

A trihe found at Choudwan, a section of the eastern Daman of the Sulaimani Range Sir Herbert Edwardes says of them, that they are the 'most superior race in the whole of the Trans Indus countries of the Punjab In complexion too they are the fairest, and show the most evident traces of northern extraction (a) They are a callized and wealthy people, addicted to commerce

Section XVII -The Nassur Tribe

A tribe by the Zirkunnee Pass on the border of Kolachee and Darabund They are a wandering tribe like the Kharots with this difference that while the Kharots have a country of their own, the Nassurs have no lands whatever but lead a vigathond life, travelling about in large and powerful companies with their flocks and herds and camels

Section XVIII -The Gundapoor Tribe

These came from Speen in Afghaustun, and are settled in a section of the Daman below the Sulumani Range, having Tâk on the north, Darabund on the south west, and Dera Ishmael Khun on the east and south east, a barren and unpropitious region with scarcely a shrub or tree upon it. The Gundapoors were once divided into the following six class —

- 1 Ibrahimzyes 4 Khûb zyes 5 Umranzyes 5 Umranzyes
- 2 Luqubzyes 5 Umranzyes 5 Umranzyes 3 Husa nzyes 6 Dreiplarahs

The Gundapoors have several large villages or towns, some of which are Kolachee, Takwara, and Longe. They carry on a great trade with Khorassan and India but are rude both in manners and appearance The tribes of the Daman differ considerably from the Bardarânis. The men are large and hony, often fair, and wear long hair and beards. In place of the cap and loose shirt they cover their heads with a turban, and their hodies with a close fitting dress.

Section XIX.—The Mean Kheyl Tribe.

A hranch of the great Lohâni family. They occupy Darâhund, a small section of the Daman Proper, on the south and south-west of the country inhahited by the Gundapoors. The tribe has two branches, the Sot Kheyl and the Hussain Kheyl, each of which is divided into a number of clans, as follows:—

Clans of the Sot Kheyl Branch.

1.	Sayıd Kheyl.	6.	Shâhî Kheyl.
2.	Shādî Kheyl.	7.	Mulla Kheyl.

3. Balooch Kheyl.
8. Gholâm Kheyl.

5. Ubba Kheyl. 9. Passuanee,

Clans of the Hussain Kheyl Branch.

1. Comerage. 1 4. Moosehaye.

Sub-Clans:
2. Vurrooki. i. Tajoo Kheyl. fii. Muddee Kheyl.

ii. Kbanno Kheyl, iv. Mummundzye,
3. Mussha Kheyl,
5. Zukkori.

The most powerful of these class are the Moosehzyes, who hold one-fourth part of the country (a).

Section XX .- The Sturiance Tribe.

This trihe lies to the south of the Bahhurs. They conquered their land from the Beloochees. Formerly, the Stûrlânees were entirely pastoral, but many of them have become merchants and traders.

Section XXI.—The Secretaria Tribe.

A small tribe, nearly extinct; farmerly, in conjunction with the Bakhtiáris, in possession of the Darábund territory, from which they were dispossessed by the Mean Kheyls.

Section XXII.—The Bakhtiârî Tribe.

A tribe originally from Persia occupying a portion of the Darâbund (b), They are now much intermingled with the Mean Kheyls.

V-TRIBES OF DERA GHAZI KHAN AND ITS BORDERS

SEC II—THE MAZARI TRIBE. SEC II—THE DRISHAK TRIBE. SEC III—THE GUNCHANI TRIBE. SEC VI—THE LOUD TRIBE. SEC V—THE LAUGHANI TRIBE. SEC VI—THE MARRI TRIBE. SEC VII—THE MAZARANI TRIBE. SEC XIV—BELOOCH TRIBES—1 JATTUR 2 KORM 3 GORMO 4 HORE SECLATE. SAMMANI 7 MARGIANI

The city of Dera Ghazi Khan was founded in the reign of the Emperor Akhar by Ghazi Khan, a Belooch, who was made governor of the district now called after him. He promoted the cultivation of the land, dug the Kustorec and Manka canals, and was in every respect an excellent ruler. He died in 1573, and was luried at Chorutta, where his tomb may still be seen. The entire district of Dera Ghazi Khan is two hundred and eix miles in length.

The Beloochee tribes occupy this district in great force. Some of them are found also in Scinde, and a short description of them is given in the account of the tribes and casts of that province. Everywhere the Beloochees are an illiterate people, and possess few, if any, books in their own language. They have a small number of books written in the Persian language, from which, and from the songs sung by matrix bands, they take their conditions. Respecting their origin, an old Persian volume, in the possession of the Dûmbki chief of Lehree, in little (Khelat), the acknowledged head of the Beloochee tribes affirms, that the country of the Belooch race was formerly Aleppo, in Arabia and that they are descended from Mir Hamza, son of Abdul Mahtab, who lived in Virbia in the time of Hizrit Imain Husun, to whom they looked as their spiritual ginde' (a). The traditions of the Beloochees are in accordance with the streement that they are of Arabian extraction. The Beloochees were for ages a wandering people scattered about many countries, before they finally settled down in Beloochistan, Scinde, the Punjab, and other provinces, in which they now reside. The irregular habits which they acquired will partly account for the meageness of their literature, and also for their ignorance.

They are divided into numerous tribes and clans, each tribe, or tomen, being under a chief, or tomundar; and each clan, or para, being subject to a superior, or muqaddam. The clans are sub-divided into septs, or palli, each having its head; and the septs again are split up into families. The tomundar and muqaddam are hereditary officers. "The constitution of the Belooch tribes," says Mr. Bruce, "is a sort of limited monarchy. The heads of sections and sub-divisions of sections are responsible to their chiefs. Thus there is a system of responsibility running through the whole body. From ancient usage the Beloochees look up to their chief, or sirdar; and if he is a man of common energy and ability, he has immense power over his tribe. Too often, bowever, from incapacity or laziness. they do not exercise their power; and the consequence is, that the trihe becomes disorganized. When the general interests of the tribe are at stake, they cannot act with impunity contrary to the wisbes of the muqaddams or councils of the tribe" (a). The tomundar is well supported by his tribe, and receives a fifth part of the produce of the soil, and also a fifth portion of the spoils taken in war or on a predatory excursion. Much animosity subsists between the tribes, which is remarkable, considering that they are one and the same race. The families and clans of a tribe, however, live together in great amity and peace.

Physically there is a striking contrast between the Beloochee and the Pathân. The former is "a thin wiry man, while the Pathân is stout and able-bodied." He is distinguished for hospitality, and retains the custom, prevalent among the tribes of Arabia, of receiving the traveller into bis house, and entertaining him, whether friend or foe. His method of fighting is peculiar, and much more efficacious than that of the Pathân. "The Belooch dismounts, and pickets his mare, and then enters the melée, sword and shield in hand; while the Pathân engages with his matchlock from a distance, if possible under cover, and seldom closes with his adversary" (b).

One excellent characteristic of this race is, the respect which they show to the female sex. This is well shown by Mr. Bruce. "In all their wars and blood feuds, which they carry on with the most implacable enmity,' he remarks, "they never molest women or children When the alarm is given in a village that the enemy is near, the men fly with their flocks up the nearest hill, while the women and children remain in the village Finding the prey flown, the invading party enter the hamlet, have a conversation with the women, smoke their hookahs, and then return without committing any ontrage When circumstances on the frontier prevent the Beloochees inside the border from going into the hills they have no hesitation in sending in their women, and at all seasons of the year large parties of Belooch women are found wandering fearlessly about the hills, pulling the dwarf palm, or collecting fuller's earth" This contrasts strongly with their treatment of women when suspected of immorality "They are very jealous of their women, and if they find them holding intercourse with any other man they generally murder both parties. In the bills it is a common custom to murder the man, and tell the woman to go and hang herself, which she does flus the Beloochees under Briti h rule consider that the greatest grievance they are subject to is, our laws about adultery, and that in this one matter it is very hard that they should not be allowed to take the law into their own hands, as, from their customary sensitiveness or shame, they are precluded from bringing their cases into our law courts"(a)

Although Mahomedans, the Beloochees are free from religious bigotry and finattensm. They belong to the Sum sect. So great is their lavity in religion that they pay "httle attention to fixed times of prayer, pilgrimages, alms tithes fasts, and so forth, and delight in the chance of their religious eeremonies being vicariously performed. For instance, the chief is able to keep the Ramzân fast not merely for lumself, but also for the whole tribe. On the other hand, they are prone to superstition and believe in omens, flights of birds astrology, lucky days charms, ghosts, and the like

The Beloochees have many fine qualities, and by reason of them are greatly superior, on the score of virtue, to the Fath in rice. They are farthful and trace ful, and, as has been already stated, are kind and considerate in their treatment of women. "The Afghans (or Fathfus) swore up to molest our troops when retiring from Cabul, and the result is known. The Beloochees (of the Mirree tribe) swore to keep futh with Captun Brown and his garrison in Kahun, and e-corted them safely to the plans of Knitchee, although quite at their mercy, and dependant on them even for water" (a). They have also their had qualities. Arrogance is one; contempt for honest lahour is a second; readiness to take offence is a third. They are, however, improving; and many of them are trying their hands at agriculture, and are gradually overcoming their national antipathy to this means of obtaining a livelihood (b).

Section I.—The Mazûrî Tribe.

This tribe inhabits a small tract of country, forty miles long by twenty broad, the principal town of which is Rajhan, where the chief resides, one hundred and ten miles distant from Dera Ghazi Khan. On one side are the hills, and on the other, the Bhawulpore State, while a considerable portion of the territory is dense jungle, through which flow several streams connected with the Indus.

Formerly, the Mazaris were a turbulent race, and even now do not bear a good character with British officials. They have been kept in order, however, and their warlike spirit has been repressed, mainly by the skill and energy of Imam Bakhsh Khân, uncle of the Chief, Shere Mahomed Khân. He is the acting chief of the tribe, and for his good offices has been made an Honorary Magistrate by our Government. "He has never spared his own clansmen," says a late Deputy Commissioner of Dera Ghazî Khân, "but has invariably seized them, and sent them up for punishment. Few men have ever had so difficult a task to perform in its way as that which Imam Bakhsh Khan has accomplished. In an isolated position, thrown on his own resources, tempted by natural prejudices to fayour his clansmen, and cover their offences, with enemies within the tribe, (not the least difficult to contend against being his own nephew, the hereditary chief of the tribe,) he has always endeavoured to carry on his duties without fear, fayour, or affectation" (c).

By reason of "its numbers, position, and connexions," says Mr. Bruce, this tribe is "one of the most, if not the most, important tribe on the whole frontier." It is divided into four great hranches, the Beluchani, Rûstamani, Masidani, and Sargani, which are again suh-divided into fifty-seven clans, as follows :--

First Branch - The Beluchani Clans.

- 4. Machiani. 1. Gulsherani. 5. Hyderanzye. 2. Mistakani.
- 6. Saidazve. 3.' Azadani.

Section II - The Drishak Tribe

The Drishals affirm that the Maz'nis preceded them in the occupation of the plans. They profess to be descendants of Hath, the son of Jelal This is a frontier trule, and occupies the land to the south of the Garchânis, between the Pitole Press to the north and the Shori Pass to the south, situated entirely on the plans. The chief exhibits praiseworthy energy in "making new cuts from criticals, and hringing new land under cultivation." The tribe is divided into six branches and twenty three clams, as follows—

First Branch — The Kirman Clans 1 Kirman | 3 Mandwan | 2 Nûkan | 4 Isan | Second Branch — The Mingwan Clans 1 Mingwan | 2 Malwan | 3 Al mdan | Third Branch — The Genefax Clans 1 Sandan | 2 Gamdan | (a) Notes on the Dera Chân Khân District by R B J Bruce Eq. p 31

3 Nartani.

6. Plinitani.

Sixth Branch.—The Jiskani Clan.

1. Jiskani (a).

The chief of the tribe belongs to the Kirmani branch. The Drishaks have a reputation for dauntless courage, and for great expertness in the use of the sword. "The tribe is immensely scattered in all the villages between Asnee and Booliwala, in the Jampore Tahsil; and consequently it takes a long time for them to collect. Another serious disadvantage which the Drishaks lahour under, is that most of their estates are situated in the jaghire of Shah Newas Khûn, who takes the revenue in kind, and does not allow them to touch the crop till the harvest is thrashed out. This is peculiarly irritating to the Belloochees, who are always accustomed to pull the stalks which do not hear grain for their cattle "(b). Formerly, all the land of the Drishaks was cultivated by Jhts, who paid their landlords certain does for the same (c).

Section III .- The Garchana Tribe.

This tribe lies on the northern frontier, next in position to the Drishaks. They occupy the country at the foot of the hills, for a distance of upwards of thirty-five miles, with the Pitoke Pass on the south, and the Koorab Pass on the north. They have hereditary right to the Minree and Dajal mountains, to the Shum Plain, and to one-half of the Phylaunie Plain. Many of the tribe live in a wild tract lying between Tibhee and Chotee Bala, and are known as Pachad Gürelânis. The Dürkâni and Lishâri clans are principally found on the Dragal and Marree hills. The Bügtis, Murris, and Khetrans are on the borders of the possessions of the Gürelânis, while the small tribe of the Tibbi Lûnds occupies a tract in the very midst of the Gürelânis, and so separating them into two portions.

These people are only half Beloochees, and according to one tradition, are descended from an alliance formed between the Beloochees and a family of the

Deli caste But there is another tradition current, which appears a more pro hable story. It is said that their common ancestor was Gorish, the great grand son of Bbaung Singh, a Hindoo Rajah who ruled over Niramkote, or Hyderabad, in Scinde, when the Arabs seized that country, and was compelled by them to embrace the Mahomedan religion. Doda, the father of Gorish, married Massumat Bihi Maga, daughter of Mir Shabak, a Rhind Belooch chief. Gorish himself had four sons, from three of whom, namely Shahak, Kahil, and Hoti, the Shikuni, Khahilam and Hütwâni clans, have sprung, the remaining clans of the tribe—that is, the Lishâri, Dûrkâni, Pitafi, Jisklini, Bazrâni, Còring Surāni, and Hūlwâni—are Rhind Beloochees, who joined the Gorish confederacy in the formation of the Gûrchâni tribe which word is pronounced by themselves Gorishâni.

The Guichânis are a warble race, and at one time gave the British Govern ment great trouble Some of the clans, such as the Pitafi and Lishari, were notorious thieves and highway robbers Others had been long accumstomed to border ruds and combats Moreover, the chief of the tribe had, from various causes, become very poor, and consequently was envious of his richer neigh The Durkanis, a pastoral people had a character for peaceableness, except when they came into collision with their old enemies, the Lighters But a great and satisfactory change has come over the tribe, owing chiefly to the generous treatment which it has received from the Government. Mr. Bruce makes the following observation, the importance of which in its bearing on the methods adopted by the Government in securing the good will of the tribe can hardly he overestimated "It has been recorded by all the officers who have had experi once of the Belooch tribe, be remarks "that it is most politic and in the interests of Government, to grant the Belooch cluefs the lease of the estates held by their kinsmen on hight terms, and to allow them to collect the Government share of the produce (that is, the mahsul, or revenue,) in lind It helps to keep up that chain which runs from the cluef through the branches and sub divisions of the tribe, thereby keeping up its organization intact, which is of the utmost value for the well being of the frontier (a)

Section IV -The Land Tribe

The Lûnds, as already remarked, are settled in the heart of the Gûrchâm territory, and geographically divide the Gûrchâm tribe into two great sections, the northern and southern the former being designated Pachad Gûrchâm, in contradistinction to the latter. The principal town of the Lûnds is Thibi, where the chief of the tribe resides. The Lûnds are often called Tibhi Lûnds from their cipital. The British Government has entrusted them with the charge of the Sirigery, Gattee, Chunnee, Peir Choor, and Jhundumee Passes, and makes them a yearly grant of three hundred rapses for the responsible service thus performed.

Formerly, great jedousy subsisted between the Lûnds and the powerful tribe of Gürch'ans surrounding them, and the two tribes were in perpetual feud. But now they live in peace and friendship with each other. The Lûnds are a well organized tribe, and, although few in number, have ever maintained an honourable position, and have commanded the respect, if not always the consideration, of neighbouring tribes. They are divided into three brunches, and twenty three clams, as follows—

Section V .- Laghari Tribe.

These also are on the northern frontier, and inhabit the country from the Sukki Surwur Pass to the Koorch Pass in a southern direction, having charge of all the intermediate passes, for which they are remunerated by the Government by an annual grant of one thousand rupees. The tribe is of great influence and strength. It is intimately connected with the Khetran tribe, with which it has intermarried; and the two tribes unitedly constitute a powerful community. It has also amicable relations with every other large tribe (a).

The Laghâris took their country from the Amdânis. Their principal villages are Chotee (where the tomundar, or chief, resides), Bala Manka, Vildore, Guddaie, Toonea, Bukkerwah, and Khora Booglani; and their country extends from Viddore to Gungehur, hetween Chotee Balla and Hurrund. The Talpurs, who formerly ruled over Scinde, are a hranch of this tribe, and separated from it upwards of a hundred years ago. The estates of the Laghâri chief have heen greatly extended and improved of late years, owing to his energy and enterprise. He has extensive property also among the Khetrans, and may be regarded as one of the wealthiest and most important chiefs of the entire district.

The tribe consists of four hranches divided into fifty clans, as follows :--

Section VI -The Bugti or Zirkani Tribe

The territory inhalited by this tribe stretches along the frontiers of Scinda in the south touches the lund occupied by the Marin and Gürchânis in the north those of the Mazins and Drishaks in the east, and Kutchee, in the Khelat State in the west. Its chief town is Dun Bibrock on the Shafbudy, the residence of the chief

The Bugtis are a warlike people, and for many years indulged their propensi ties in perpetual conflicts with neighbouring tribes, such as the Marris, Maziris Drishaks, and others So constant and so during were their depredations formerly that, on several occasions, troops were sent against them by the British Govern ment At one time Sir Charles Napier proclaimed the whole tribe as enemies and "issued proclamations, offering a reward for any Bugtis brought in dead or alive So bold did they become, that in 1846 a body of about twelve hundred Bagtis penetrated into the plans of Scinde and plundered the country round Mecrooor to within about sixteen miles of the city of Shikarpoor, a distance of nearly seventy miles, and carried off with them an immense booty consisting of nearly fifteen thousand head of cattle" (b) At length their power was broken, partly by a force under the command of Lieutenant Merewether, and partly by the Marri tribe, which on two occasions made a fearful slanghter among them Yet in 1858 they had so far recovered their numbers and strength as to be able to make a for midable raid on the Marri territory, and to encounter a large body of this tribe which they defeated with severe loss to themselves as well as to their fee For several years after this event the two tribes were in frequent collision

The Bagti tribe is an offshoot of the Rhind Beloochees, and is nominally in subjection to the Khan of Khelat

It is divided into six branches, as follows -

Section VII -The Mari Tribe

These also professedly pay allegiance to the Khan of Khelat "They occupy the hills," says Mr Bruce, "which form the extreme northern fronter of his territory, and hold, with respect to him, more the position which the independent hill tribes on our fronter do with regard to the British Government than that of subjects towards their rightful sovereign. Thus for years they have committed constant raids into his territories, coercive as well as conciliatory measures having been used from time to time to keep them in order (b). Their country is divipible into four portions. The first is that of Kahun Khas, which they originally possessed. The other three they acquired by force. One of these is Mundah, consisting of three towns, Mundah, Khwat, and Badun, each being watered by a perennial stream. This tract was taken from the Barozye Pathâns. The second and third,—namely Juntalli, Phylawur, and Aissao,—formerly helonged to the Higgan, but was seized by the Loharani tribe, and from them passed into the hands of the Marris. They have also purchased lands at Kolee of the Zirkans, a small and feelle tribe.

The geographical houndaries of this tribe are these. To the north are Pathân tribes, such as the Makhanis, Marcelus, and others, to the south is the Bûgtî tribe, to the east are the Khetrans and Gûrehânîs, and to the west is Kutchee.

For years the Marris, like the Bûgtis, set the British Government at defiance, and were constantly engaged in plundering expeditions across the border. Nor were they easily subdued, on the contrary, at one time they gained completely the upperhand in the collision which took place between ourselves and them. A force under Major Chibburn was compelled to retreat, and was hadly cut up on its return march, eighty of his men being taken prisoners, while another under Captain Lewis Brown, known afterwards as Kulun Brown, although successful in his attack upon the tribe, was nevertheless so closely besieged in the town of Kahun, which be had captured, that, running short of provisions, he was obliged to come to terms with the enemy, and to surrender himself and his troops into their hands. The Marris hehaved nobly in the transaction, and escorted the British force safely to Poolegi. "Government was much pleased with the Marris for the way in which they behaved to Brown and his party, and sent them letters of acknowledgment, inviting them to come in. A deputation of the headmen of the tribe came to Lehree, where they received khilluts (robes of honours)." Still the Marris were not inclined to abandon their old bad hahits; and long continued to give trouble to the British Government. Of late years a different policy has been pursued with them than that which was formerly maintained, and the result has been eminently satisfactory. Mr. Bruce observes, that "from a perusal of the works and notes of Sir Charles Napier and General Jacob, and of the political correspondence of the Upper Scinde and southern Derajat Frontiers. it will be seen that the Marris and Bûgtis have always been a great thorn in the side of the political officers on both frontiers; while for the last three years (1870) they have given little trouble, and from being enemies to law and order. have turned into staunch friends and allies" (a).

The tribe has three branches, exclusive of the Mazaranis, who, although of pure Marri blood, may be now regarded as a separate tribe. The three branches with their clans are as follows :-First Branch .- The Ghazeni Clans.

to the west of Sewi, on the Bolan Pass

They still, however, pay a tribute yearly to the tomundar, or chief, of the Marri tribe, consisting of the 'panjal.

In other respects they are altogether independent of him (a)

Section IX -The Khetran Trahe

The Khetrans are not pure Beloochees. The original Khetran stock has received additions from other tribes, some of which are Beloochees, while others are Pathâns. Still, the divisions of the tribe, though called by one name, do not intermingle, but preserve their individuality. They are an independent people and are situated between the Bozdar tribe in the north, and the Marri tribe in the south. The Pathân tribes of Shahdozye, Mousi Kheyl, Zirkan and Loom are on the west., and the Laghân and Gârchâni tribes, on the east. The tribe consists of four principal branches, the Ganjara or Khetran Proper the Dariwal, the Hussaim, and the Nahur, each of which has a separate history. The tomundar has a Barkhan, the chief town

The Khetruns affirm that they are descended from Tirm and Atman Kheyl Pathâns, and that their name is derived from the word khathi, which in their dialect means cultivation, a name which they have acquired since coming to bir khan The country of their forefathers is Khorasan on quitting which they first inhibited Derri Ishmail Khan, and then Vehowah, which territory they took from the Magessi and Syal tribes. In the time of the Emperor Akbar they brought themselves into collision with that monarch, and abandoning Vehowah fied for safety to the hills, to Barkhan or Barkhum, their present abode. Afterwards some returned and re-occupied Vehowah, which is still in the possession of the tribe. This branch is commonly called Ganjara, the ancestor of the chief's family.

Second Branch .- The Darmal or Chacha Clans.

1.	Chacha.	3.	Dahmani.	1	ò	Wagga and Towani.
2.	Saman.	4.	Lalla,	1	6	Matt.

These have sprung from the Dadai Belooch tribe, of the same family as Ghazi Khân. "They fornerly lived," it is said, "at Dera Ghazi Khân, but, on account of some tribal quarrel, removed thence, and settled at Kukni in the Khetran country; and the Khetrans made over to them the lands which they at present occupy, which were at the time lying waste"(a).

Third Branch .- The Hussaini Clans.

1.	Shamîranî,	3.	Patwani.	ı	5	Mahrafani.
2	Jamianı.	í 4.	Shebani.		G.	Tigan.

More than one-half of this branch dwell with the Shahdozye Pathâns, the rest heing in communion with the Khetrans. They are pure Beloochees, and formerly were a separate tribe, at which time they occupied the Nisao and part of the Intalli and Phylawar plains, lying hetween the Khetrans and Marris. Addicted to depredations on the Marris, this tribe obtained the assistance of the Khan of Khelat, who so destroyed their power that they were obliged to abandon their country to the Marris, and to seek the protection of the Shahdozye Pathâns and the Khetrans (b).

Fourth Branch .- The Nahur Clan.

1. Nahur.

The Nahurs once ruled over Hurrand, but being completely overthrown by the governors of Dera Ghàzi Khân, with whorn, like the Hussainis, they were in constant collision, they fled from their country, and settled among the Khetrans, a few only remaining behind at Hurrund.

The Khetrans of the present day are not inclined to war, but are industrious agriculturists "The peculiar fatures of their country," observes Mr Bruce, "which is composed of a succession of large valleys lying between purillel ranges of hulls, the soil of which is of the most fatile description, renders their occupation a most remunerative one and makes them the wealthnest tribe on the whole of this frontier. Grain is generally selling much cheaper with the kinetrans than it is in British territory. The consequence is, that the neighbouring tribes buy from them. And hence it is that, although they sometimes have quarrels with them, they cannot afford to keep them up long (a). The valleys in the kinetrin country are very picture-que, and are well watered by provincial streams descending from the neighbouring monatums. They are bestudded with mud forts each the centre of a trivet of cultivation.

There is a close union subsisting between the Khetrins, Bügtis, and I aghitrs All the intercourse of the Government with the khetrins is carried on through the instrumentality of the Lagharis Although so perceibly inclined, yet they have frequently provoked the displeasure of the British Government. The reason of this is to be found in the singular fact, that although not a plandering tribe themselves, they are the recipients of almost the whole of the property stolen from this and the Seinde frontier, and afford protection to absconded erminals and others, whom they are glad to allow to fight and plunder for them (b). As, however, their country is entirely exposed, they are completely at the mercy of the Government, which can at any time compell their submission. This they well understand. Moreover, it is to their interest to keep on good terms with us, as much of their tride is carried on in British territory.

In addition to these four branches of the Khetrans, there is another branch styled Sanghar Khetrans, who live entirely on the plans, and, although originally of the same tribe, have ceased to hold intercourse with their brethren on the hills (c)

Section X -The Kosah Tribe

This is a large and powerful tribe of Beloochees. They held lands in the Khelat State at Sewi Dudur and khanpore, at the first settlement of the Beloochees in that country. On occasion of the Imperor Humayum passing through Dera Ghâzi Khân on his way to Delhi, the Kosahs attached themselves to him, and fought on his side. Afterwards he bestowed on them the lands of Soanee and Miani, at Hyderabad, in Sciende, where the chief portion of the tribe settled, and their descendants are still found. Other members of the tribe, about the same period, entered Dera Ghâzi Khân, and took up their abode in Koh Kuleid, on the frontier. Their leader, Batil Khân, married a woman of the Mirani Beloochee tribe. Subsequently they retired to the plains, where they now reside. "When Batil Khân left the hills he was joined by Yaroo Khân, of the Isain section of the Khetrans, with a large number of his followers. Since then the Isains have been a part of the Kosah tribe, of which they form the largest section "(a). Batil and Yaroo are towns huilt by Batil Khan and Yaroo.

In 1859 Major Pollock said of this tribe, that "there never was such a house divided against itself as the Kosah tribe. Each little family seems to have its petty dissensions. The faults of the race seem exaggerated in them; and a Kosah, who has not been in jail for cattle-stealing, or deserved to be, who has not committed a murder or debauched his neighbour's wife, or destroyed his neighbour's landmark, is a decidedly creditable specimen; and if added to this, he be out of debt, he is a perfect marvel "(b). Formerly the Kosahs, and their neighbours the Bozdars, were at constant feud. Before their country was annexed a Bozdar came to their chief claiming his hospitality, and suddenly endeavoured to kill him. The chief was saved by the courage of a favourite dog, which flew at the secondrel's throat, who quickly escaped from the house. A dozen Bozdar lives atoned for the insult thus offered to the chief (c). This tribe is divided into seven branches, as follows:—

First Branch — The Baleil Clans. 1. Baleil. 2. Kumlain. 3. Jehani. 4. Umrani. Second Evench. — The Mibrowni Clans. 1. Mihrwani. 2. Kulleri. 3. Rakamwala. 4. Chanda. Third Branck. — The Jaggal Clans. 3. Shibani. 4. Hajimi. 5. Gimrani. 4. Hajimi.

Section XI .- The Sori Land Tribe

These are not to be confounded with the Tibbi Lunds. They are bounded by the Knerani tribe on the north, and the Kocah on the south. Formerly, the tribe was of little consideration, but ever since the siege of Mooltan, when it rendered important assistance to the British Government, it has gradually risen to a high position of influence and wealth Its old chief, Fazl Ali Khan, was a man of energy and enterprise. At his own expense he cut a canal through his estates, which has proved a very successful and remunerative speculation. The herdman receives the fifth of the produce of all the estates of the tribe, and is alone responsible to the Government for the revenue. He has charge of the Sori Land Pass, and is paid three hundred rupees annually for the services he thus performs.

An independent tribe, originally a branch of the Rhind Beloochees. The word Bozdâr is derived from 'baz,' the Persian for goat, a term given to them on account of the vast herds of goats and sheep which they formerly kept. Their country stretches from the Sunghur Pass on the north, nearly to the Vidore Pass on the south, adjoining the Kasrâni tribe on their northern boundary, the Kosah and Laghâri tribes on their southern, the Pathân tribes of Mousa Kheyl, Jaffir, and Soth on their western, and the plain tribes of the Lûnds and Kosabs on their eastern. The Bozdârs are a scattered people, and little harmony subsists between their principal claus. Most of them reside between the first and second ranges of hills. They cultivate the land extensively (b).

The tribe was once notorious for its turbulent habits. On this account it was regarded with apprehension for many years by Mahomedan rulers of India, before the l'nglish entered the country. By reison of its strength and innecessibility, as it could with ease, in one of danger, take refinge in the hills beyond the frontier, these rulers thought it better to give the tribe a small annual grant in the way of subsidy, and keep it in humour and in friendly relations thereby, than to attempt its subjugation by force. This system was adopted by the British Government when the province came into its possession. An allowance of three hundred and sixty one rupees was made to the chief together with the instance certain wells rent free. But as they persisted in their plundering ruds on the plains, these grants were stopped, and eventually it was found necessary to send a strong force against them. The Bordars made a gallant resistance but were at last completely subdued. They have since mended their ways and have had their rent free wells restored while the chief of the tribe on one occasion received from the Government a khillut, or robe of honour, of the value of two thousand fixed hundred rupees for important services which he had rendered (a)

Section XIII .- The Kasrani Tribe.

The Kasranis occupy the most northerly position of all the Belooch tribes. They are divided into seven great branches, epread over three tracts of country,—namely, the district on the border lying between Kot Kusrani and Vehowah; the adjoining bills over the border; and a portion of Dera Ishmail Khan. Their country is forty miles in length, and has twenty-one passes, the most northerly of which, the Kowral Pass, is opposite Dowlutwalla, while the remaining twenty are all on the Ghâzi Khân border (b).

In his "Memorandum on the Belooch Tribe" Captain Minchin has made some sagacious observations respecting the management of this and of other Belooch tribes, which have met with the approval of all the officers who like him have had charge of border tribes, and which therefore ought to be recorded for general information. "Amongst the Belooch tribes," he remarks, "the question of maintaining the position and influence of the chiefs is, in my opinion, one of paramount importance, both in the interests of the tribe and of Government. The tribes are subdivided into sections or families, each governed by its own headmen, who are again responsible to the chief for the conduct of their sections. In all police cases, the chief, through their agency, is able to trace out the offenders, and enforce their surrender to Government, whether residing in British territory or beyond the border. The members of the tribe willingly submit themselves to the guidance of their chiefs; and if he is a man of common energy and prudence, he is able to govern the tribe completely. No police measure could ever equal this paternal form of government To enable the chiefs to maintum their influence, it is absolutely necessary that they should be provided with ample funds to exercise that liberal hospitality which is as much regarded by the Beloochees as the Arabs, from whom they are descended If a chief is unable from poverty or other causes to exercise the customary hospitality, he at once loses his prestige, the tribe soon becomes disorganized, the several sections remain intact, but they lose their clan feeling, and the general control is lost for a time Under these circumstances. had chief is better than none at all On these grounds, I advocate that, in the general interests, it would be most politic to grant these Belooch chiefs the lease of the estates held by their kinsmen on light terms, allowing them to collect their shares in kind Their position is very different from that of jaghirdars Their interests are so bound up with those of their kinsmen, and the necessity of maintaining their influence is so great, that there need he no fear of any oppres sion or extortion on their part, while the feet, that they have the power to receive a fixed share of every holding, and to remit my portion, is the strongest hold they could possibly have over their clansmen" (a) After quoting this important statement, Mr Bruce, in his Notes on the Dera Ghazi hhan District, adds "The plan adopted by the Scinde Government with the Mazins, and by the Scikhs with the Gurchanis, appears to be a most appropriate one,—namely, remitting half share of the Government demand in favour of the chief, which he was permitted to collect from his clansinen in kind. If one uniform plan for all the Belooch tribes on this principle is adopted, it will prevent one tribe thinking that it has been hardly treated with regard to another. At present there are many mon enjoying more than the. Just share of the profits, and whose interest it is to keep their tribes disorganized, and who therefore will oppose a proper arrange ment These remarks are applicable to all the Belooch tribes (b)

A much larger portion of the Kasran tribe lives beyond Brush territory than within its borders, which circumstance would increase the difficulty of managing the tribe, in case of disturbance, especially as the clans on the plains and those of the hills are bound together by mutual sympathy and interest. In an emergency of this nature, the clinef and headmen must be held responsible for repressing any disorder in the tribe itself or in any of its headeless.

Their having so many influential connexions both within and beyond the horder would, for political considerations, on a frontier like this, appear to be a strong argument in favour of the measure (a)

SECTION I -THE MAHOMEDAN TRIBES.

The population of the Punjah, according to the census of 1868, the last that has heen taken, was 17,611,498. Of these more than half,—namely, 9,837,685,—were Mahomedans. These are fewest in the Delhi district, where they are only from twenty-one to thirty-one per cent of the inhabitants; but are most numerous in the Dernjat, where they range from eighty-five to ninety per cent of the people. In Rawal Pindee they number from eighty-three to eighty-seven per cent, and in Mooltan from seventy-six to eighty-four per cent of the entire community.

The Mahomedan tribes of the Punjab Frontier have already been described. It remains to give a brief outline of those which are found scattered about various parts of the province.

The Pathans have acquired considerable importance in the Punjab, where they have settled in many places, and have risen to positions of rank and power. Speaking of those residing in Mooltan, Sir Henry Lawrence and his colleagues remark, that "they have won for themselves historical distinction. They originally obtained a grant from the Emperor Shah Jehan, and with this acquisition they thoroughly identified themselves. They excavated canals, improved the condition of the peasantry, and raised the province from harrenness to weight. They defend of their heritage with the utmost gallintry against the aggression of Runjeet Singh '(a). The Pithins often copy the Hindoos in their marriage customs. One half of their daughters are married in childhood, while the daughters of Sheikhs and Sayids are usually grown up before they are married.

1 The Samuel

These are scattered over all the districts of the Punjab and are most minner ous in Rawal Pindee, Scalkote, and Peshawur

2 The Monule

The Moguls are found more or less throughout the province, but are in large numbers in Peshawur and Hazara, where they form a community of upwards of infly thousand persons (b)

3 The Dâûd-ye Tribe

This tribe is chiefly confined to Peshawur and its neighbourhood, where it numbers more than fifteen thousand persons. There are up a relis of a thousand also in the Gurda-pur district of the American Division and a few at Hoshiarpur and elsewhere

4 The Mahomed-ye Tribe

These also, for the most part, inhabit Peshawar and its viennity. They are a larger tribe than the Dâddzyes, and number more thin twenty six thousand persons the greater part of whom are at Peshawar. There are however, three thousand at Rawal Pindee, and a few here and there in other places.

5 The Kamal ye Tribe

A small tribe of less than a thousand persons, chiefly at Rawal Pindee I shore and Peshawur

6 The Saddozye Tribe

A community of nearly five thousand five hundred persons scattered about most districts of the province, but found in greatest numbers at I abore, Amritsar, Googranwals, and Shabpur

7. The Allezye Tribe.

A trihe at Rawal Pindee. A few are also at Mooltan, Jalandhar, the Derajat, and elsewhere. The entire tribe numbers less than four thousand persons.

8. The Popalzye Tribe.

A small community of less than six hundred persons, nearly one half of whom are at Peshawur.

9. The Pathan Tribes of Cutchee.

In Cutchee, on the north of the Leia district, is a large hody of Pathâns, descendants of Trans-Indus tribes. The chief of them are the following:—

- i The Tazee Kheyl tribe.
- ii The Momukzye tribe.
- iii The Kuttee Kheyl tribe.
- iv The Moosa Kheyl tribe.

The Cutchee Pathans are reputed to be quarrelsome, treacherous, and untrutiful, and split up into factions, which live at enmity with one another. Never theless, they hear a good character for hospitality. These Pathans are tall, well-made, but not muscular, and are fond of athletic sports (a).

SECTION II -THE MAHOMEDAN RAJPOOT TRIBES

The Mahomedan Rajpoots have abandoned the detestable habit prevalent among many classes of Hindoos, of marrying their daughters when mere children, and never marry them until they have attained maturity. "This renegade class," observes Sir Herbert Edwardes, "is quite in the hands of the Mecrasees, who may he said almost to be their Pirs. From the time that the Rajpoots embraced Islamism the Mecrasees have fastened on them as their genealogists and masters of ceremonies; and, according to their pedigrees, the Mecrasees arrange their alliances and order the expenditure. The result is, that a Rajputani in these parts is seldom married till she is thirty" (b).

These tribes are intimately connected with the Hindoo Rajpoot tribes bearing the same name, from which they separated in former times when ruled by Maho-medan emperors They are a sample, industrious, and well disposed people Some of these tribes are as follows -

The Bhatts Tribe

A numerous tribe, spread over most of the divisions of the Punjah They have a community of upwards of one hundred and fifty thousand persons The tribe is strongest in Lahore and Hissar, but there are many also in Rawal Pindec. Mooltan, and Amritsar (a)

The Janua Tribe

A tribe numbering twenty one thousand persons, most of whom are in the Rawal Pindee Division

3 The Siyat Tribe

A tribe of nearly fifty thousand persons, nearly the whole of whom are in the Mooltan Division, especially in the District of Jhung, in which more than thirty thousand reside (b)

The Ranghar Tribe

This is a large tribe numbering one hundred and twenty one thousand per sons most of whom are in the Delhi, Hissar, and Umballa Divisions Some thousands are also at Goordaspur, Ferozepur, and Hazara*(c)

The Clab Trabe

A tribe of nearly ten thousand persons, chiefly in Rawal Pindee and American

6 The Gheba Tribe

These are mostly settled at Rawal Pindee, where they number nearly nine thousand persons There are a few also at Huzara and Bunnoo

The Tricana Tribe

The Tiwagas are a small community found chiefly at Shahpur There are a few also at Lahore and Mooltan

SECTION III -OTHER MAHOMEDAN TRIBES

1. The Jats.

Of the numerous Jat tribes of the Punjab, more than two-fifths,—that is, one inilion three hundred and nine thousand,—have embraced the creed of Islam. They are most numerous in Goojranwala, in the Goojrat district of Rawal Pindec, in Mozuffergarh, in Dera Ghazi Khan, and in Sealkote.

2. The Gujars.

This ancient tribe is scattered about the Punjab in great numbers. Nearly four-fifths of the entire community, or four hundred and twenty-four thousand persons, have adopted Mahomedanism. They are an agricultural and pastoral people, of peaceable and industrious habits (a). In some places the Gujars are reckoned among Rajpoots.

3. The Kashmirees.

A large body of settlers from Kashmere, numerous in the Amritsar and Rawal Pindee Divisions. There are many also in Lahore, Peshawur, and Hazara (b).

4. The Raeen Tribe.

These are found in the neighbourhood of all the great cities of the Punjah, where they cultivate the ground with much success. From their excellent gardens these cities are well supplied with fruits and vegetables. They are low-caste Mahomedans, and set a praiseworthy example of industry to their high-caste brethren. It were well if they copied the Mahomedan Rajpoots in regard to the marriage of their daughters, for that ceremony is generally performed among the Raeens before their girls have reached the age of ten.

5. The Meas.

The Meos are mostly settled in Gurgaon, where they number more than a hundred thousand persons. They are a few, however, in many other districts.

6. The Kharals.

This tribe is numerous in the Montgomery district of Mooltan. Some Kharals also are scattered about the Lahore, Hissar, and Rawal Pindee Divisions (c).

THE Hindus preponderate greatly in the Kangra district among the hills. where they form ninety-three per cent of the population; and also in Hissar and Rohtuk, where they range from fifty-eight to eighty-four per cent of the population. They are few in number compared with the Mahomedans in Lahore, Rawal Pindee, Mooltan, the Derajat, and especially in Peshawur, where they only form four or five per cent of the entire community (a).

I .- The Brahmanical Tribes.

As a class the Brahmans are numerous in the Punjab as compared with the other Hindu tribes of the province. Moreover, both socially and politically, their influence is great; and there, as elsewhere, they are more eager in the pursuit of knowledge than most other races. Unfortunately, the Census Report of 1868 makes no mention of the various Brahmanical tribes existing in the Punjah, or of their divisions and suh-divisions (b).

The Brahmans of this province are eight hundred thousand in number. hundred and twenty-one thousand of these are scattered about the hilly tracts of Kangra. They are found more or less throughout all the districts of the Punjab.

(b) For an account of the Brahmanical tribes of India, see the author's " Hindu Tribes and Castes," Vol. I. Part I, Chapters I to XVII.

There are many in the Delhi, Hissar, Umballa Amritsar, and Jalandhar Divisions, but they are least numerous in Peshawur and the Derniat

II -The Rappoot Tribes

There are many tribes of pure Rypoots settled in the Punjab especially in the northern districts. Numerically, however, the Rypoots are few, and amount to less than three bundred and fifty thousand in the aggregate. Of these as many as two hundred and thirteen thousand are on the hills while only one hundred and twenty one thousand are inhabitants of the plains. On the former, they are most numerous in Kangra, Hoshurpur and Gurdaspur, and on the latter in Gurdaspur, Umbulla Hissar, and Gurgaon.

Some of these tribes, as already stated, are related to the Mahomedan Ruppoot tribes

The Munhas Raypoots (a brunch of the Jumoowal family), who inhabit the plans between the purgunnah of Decianing in the Gurdaspur district, and the purgunnah of humilwides, in the Guyrt district, together with the Munhas of the hill tracts are in all probability, members of the same royal tribe as the Mon or Monas rice of Amber, or old Jeypore and as the Mons of the Bhadohi pur punnih of the Mirapore district of the North Western Provinces (a) Socially the Munhas of the hills are much inferior to their brethren of the plans

III -The Jat Trabe

A very numerous people in the Punjab, from whom have proceeded the greatest proportion of adherents to the Seikh religion. But they have spread themselves far beyond the Punjab, and are to be found widely scattered over the country between it and Bhurtpore and Agra. This energetic and industrious race has distinguished itself in various ways especially in agricultural pursuits. The lits are the chief cultivators in the province. They are also excellent soldiers, and as such exhibit all that sturdness and boldness of character which has marked them in times of peace. Their principal seat in the Punjab is the central portion of the Barce Doah, and their chief city is Amritsar. They are in considerable numbers in the Rechinah Doth in the Chiq and in the neighbourhood of Rawal Pindee. In a part of Cutchee in the Lein district most of the people to the south of the village of Koondumari are of this tribe. They are described as a quiet and well behaved race, disturbed by few factions and quarrels.

reigned at Lahore, and also at Bhurtpore. The Emperor Aurungzebe compelled or induced many Jat families to embrace Mahomedanism; and their descendants at the present day are attached to the same faith. Most of the Jats in the south of the province are Mahomedans. The Hindu Jats in the Punjah number one million eight hundred and seventy-six thousand persons.

· The Jats are included in the thirty-six royal tribes of Rajpoots. They inhabit Rajputana in great numbers (a).

IV .- The Gûjur Tribe.

Most of the Gûjars of the Punjab, as already shown, have hecome converts to Islamism. There are only one hundred and twelve thousand who remain true to their Hindu faith. These are chiefly found in the Delhi, Hissar, Umhalla, and Jalandhar Divisions. There are very few Hindu Gûjars in other parts of the country.

I .- The Tagah Tribes.

A small community, found almost exclusively at Delhi, Kurnal, and Umballa.

VI.—The Seilles.

The Seikhs number one million one hundred and forty-four thousand of the entire population of the Punjab. More than a million of these are in the Umballa. Jalandhar, Annitsar, and Lahore Divisions. There are very few in Delhi, Hissar, and on the Frontier—in many places they are not one per cent. of the inhabitants.

The Seikhs have two principal Gurus, or religious guides,—Guru Nanak and Guru Govind Singh—and profess to be the disciples of ten Gurus. They have "ten points of faith,—five affirmative, and five negative. The first are called five K's, and are:—

"A. Karû, Kachh, Kerpal, Kaught, Kes: iron ornaments, short drawers, iron quoits or weapons, the comb, and hair;—that is to say, they are not to be diffeminate, nor to shave, and to be always ready for fighting.

"The negative points, or moral precepts of the faith, are contained in the following formula:-

"B. Nari-mar, Kuri-mar, Sri Katta, Sunnet Katta, Dhir Malia ;—that is to say, they are not to smoke, not to kill their daughters, not to consort with or trust the crown shorn, nor the circumcised, nor the followers of the Guru of Kutar pur" (a)

The Phalkens originally formed one of the twelve misls, or confederaces into which the Sekhis were divided, and occupied the country to the south of the Sutlej, under the designation of Malwa Sekhis as opposed to the Manjha Sekhis on the north of that river. The two bodies of Sekhis, the northern and southern, were never properly united together by the bonds of common interest. The separate misls cought their own welfure, and carried out their schemes of aggran diagram for the most part, distinct from one mother. Indeed, the claim composing one misl would divide and enter upon expeditions of conquest uport. So that eventually it came to pass, that petty chieffundings spring up in all directions, each chieffun evereising a certain kind of regal authority. These small jurisdictions of varied degrees of authority, numbered, stringe to say, many thom-ands. Sir Henry Lawrence says, that they were about sixty thousand, and that in size and importance they differed greatly, "from the sovereignty of Puttiala, worth twenty five lakhs a year, to the pettiest lordship or barony, consisting of the tenth or twentieth share in a single village" (b). The most influential of the twike misls was the Phalkeun, at the head of which was the royal house of Puttiala.

The Sakhs ruled the Punjab as conquerors, receiving revenue, but not ejecting the old landholders, except in a few instances, or cultivating the land themselves. Runject Singh united most of the misls into one confederacy him self heing their paramount cluef or lang.

The Mazabees are the lowest caste among the Seikhs. They have sprong from the Châra class, who were formerly the slaves of the village communities of the Punjab, and were employed as scavengers and executioners, in handling and removing dead bodies, and in other disgusting duties. On becoming Seikhs the class rose greatly in the social scale, and in fact on practising the rehgion of their rulers, and on being introduced as solders into their armies, they found themselves elevated to a position of social equality with them. In the Seikh wars the Mazabees greatly distinguished themselves. They were remorselessly cruel in battle, and regarded war as their legitimate trade. "The Mazabee" says. We Brereton, "cannot, and will not, return to the filthy habits of the Chura, whilst his origin from that slavish class deprives him of any vested interest in the soil, either as proprietor or hereditary cultivator. As incre tenant at will he

VII.—The Khatrîs.

The Khatris are a great and influential tribe or caste in the Punjab, whose vocation is chiefly twofold, that of merchants and writers. A large portion of the trade of the province is in their hands, while many of the castes are found in the courts of law and in the Government offices. As a class they are much superior in point of civilization and refinement to most other tribes of the Punjab. Under the Scikh administration some of the best governors and foremost ministers were taken from this caste. They number nearly four hundred thousand persons, and while scattered over all the districts of the province, are especially strong in Rawal Pindee, Jhelum, Amritsar, Lahore, and Jalandhar. In a former work I have discussed the history and social position of the Khatris (b). Major H. B. (Sir Herbert) Edwardes, in his valuable Report on infanticide in the Punjab, remarks, that the Punjab is "the birthplace and house of the Khatris. Their numbers in this district are only exceeded by Jits, Chamárs, and Brahmans" (c). He also states that the caste has two great divisions, the Sarcen and the Bhánifees, as follows:—

These intermarry with the Sodees and Bedees and all respectable Scikls, but not with the Bhūnjāce Khatris. The Sareens are found in considerable numbers in Rahon, Kurtarpoor, Noomahal, Tulwun, and especially at Hoosheearpoor.

IX.—The Aroras.

The Aroras of the Punjab amount to nearly half a million. They are very numerous in Mooltan, Rawal Pindee, Lahore, and the Derajat.

X .- The Kayasths.

A few Kayasths are scattered throughout all the districts of the province, with the exception of Dera Ishmael Khan, where there are none.

XI.—The Labanas

These are found in most districts, but are numerous nowhere. They are most prevalent, however, in Lahore, Sealkote, Gurdaspur, and Gujrat.

XII .- The Dogras.

A mixed race (descended from a Rajpoot father and low easte mother) of reputation in the Punjab. The reigning family of Kashmere is of this tribe. Its members speak of themselves as Rajpoots. The Dogras are landholders and cultivators.

XIII .- The Ahirs.

These are doubtless connected with the Ahirs of the North-Western Provinces and of other parts of India. They are very numerous in Gurgaon, where they have a community of seventy thousand persons. There are a few thousands also in Delhi, Rohtuck, and Hissar, but only a small number in other districts (b).

XIV .- The Kumbohs.

There are fifty seven thousand Kumbohs in the Punjab, who chiefly inhabit the districts between the Sutlej and the Rayce (c).

XV .- The Súdhs.

The Sûdhs preponderate in the Jalandhar Division. Several thousands are in Umballa and Amritsar, and a few are found in most of the remaining districts.

XIX -The Change

There are forty thousand Changs at Hosbiarpur six thousand six hun dred at Gurdaspur, three thousand six hundred at hangra and scarcely any clsewhere

XX -The Rhabraha

A small community attached to the Jain religion, numbering fourteen thou sand persons, who are scattered over most of the districts, but are most numerous in Umballa, Scalkote, and Hoshiarpur (b)

XXI -The Chamârs

A very industrious and extensive class of low caste cultivators (c)

XXII -The Dogars

A race entirely distinct from the Dogras, already described They dwell near the Sutles, and were formerly notonous for their predators habits

XXIII -The Parsecs

XXIV.—The Sansees.

Professional thieves, of whom there are upwards of forty thousand of this tribe in the Punjah. Most of the districts contain some members. Jhung is the district chiefly favoured by the Sansees, and contains nearly seventeen thousand of them. Kurnal has more than four thousand, Amritsar more than three, and Hissar and Gujranwala more than two (a).

XXV.—The Baorias.

A second class of professional thieres, not quite half so numerous as the Sansees. Seven thousand are at Ferozepore, and six thousand are at Shahpur, more than two thousand are at Sirsa, and more than one are at Lahore. Other districts have also a few.

XXVI.-The Harnis.

A third, but much smaller, class of professional thieves, consisting of only three thousand one hundred and seventy-nine persons. Two-thirds of them are at Loodiana, upwards of six hundred are at Hoshiarpur, and a few are in each of the five other districts (b).

PART II.

THE TRIBES AND CASTES

CENTRAL PROVINCES AND BERAR.

THE TRIBES AND CASTES OF THE CENTRAL PROVINCES AND BERAR

THE Central Provinces include an extensive region of forest land, intersected by rivers, and elevated at intervals hy a succession of steppes, which are followed by corresponding depressions This irregular tract, situated in the centre of India, hy reason of its remoteness and inaccessibility, was for many ages the home of an independent or semi independent race, driven hitherwards by superior and more intelligent tribes, which gradually settled down on the provinces they conquered leaving the primitive tribes to the possession and enjoyment of the mild jungles to which they had retreated These carliest inhabitants may, therefore, in a modified sense, be termed aborgand, yet, it should be remembered, that they were the first occupants not merely of this region, but also of large portions of Nor thern and North Western India, if not likewise of extensive tracts of Southern Isolated and left to themselves they have retuned then peculiar tribal habits and characteristics unchanged from generation to generation. While more truthful and honest, more simple and unsophisticated, than Hindoos, they are far lower in the scale of civilization Their manners are barbarous, their intellect is dull, their spirit is dehased, and they are addicted to drunkenness and gross licentious ness Nevertheless, they are sufficiently vigorous and warlike to ching tenaciously to the soil they consider their own, and to resist energetically every effort made by their Hindoo and Mahomedan neighbours to subdue them

Gradually the Aryans have encroached upon the Gonds and the other ahorn gunal tribes, seizing patches of level country, the valleys, the fertile banks of rivers, and other desirable tracts, over which they have extended their jurisdiction and government. For a long period, in some directions almost coevil with the occupation of the earher inhabitants, they have held important districts, which have become fumous in Indian history for their connexion with them. They belonged, for the most part, to various tribes of Rajpoots. For example, the Haihayas were, doubtless, ruling in the upper part of the Narbuddha Valley in the first century of the Christian era. They formed alliances with the Rajpoots of Malwa and Udaipur, whom as Ponwars, Gahlots, and others, they thus introduced into their own dominions, and who are still found in considerable numbers as wealthy and powerful landowners. There is reason for the belief that the Prunara or Ponwar Kingdom of Malwa at one time stretched as far as the Narhuddha Valley. Many tribes of Rajpoots hold lands in the district of Hoshungahad and its vicinity, where they are more numerous than in other districts of these provinces. The Chandels are in Rappore, the Chandels in Rajpoot. There are many families of Rajpoots in Nimar and Nursingpore. Altogether I have computed that not less than forty-one tribes of pure Rajpoots (and probably there are more), and thirty-five tribes of impure Rajpoots, are scattered over the Central Provinces.

Compared with the entire population the Rajpoots are not numerous; and, except in certain limited tracts, have never, at all events in modern times, exercised that ascendancy over the rest of the people which, by the common consent of multitudes, they have exercised for a long period over a large portion of the North-Western Provinces, Rajputana, and Oudh.

The Brahmans have flourished in the Central Provinces much less than the Rajpoots. They have not lacked the assumption which they exhibit elsewhere: and in their intercourse, not only with Hindoos of all castes, but also with the superstitious, awe-stricken, aboriginal tribes, they have ever heen ready to exert the peculiar subtle and bewitching influence of their order, and to strengthen and increase it, the more they were obeyed. Yet these provinces have not been the legitimate home of the Brahman; and he has pined for the banks of the Ganges and the Jumpa, regarding himself as estranged from his kindred, and leading the life of an exde. Not a few of them have abandoned their special avocations. handed down to them as an hereditary sacred trust, for commercial pursuits, the office, and the bar. Some have gained possession of large estates, to which they devote their time and energy. The Mahratta Brahmans of Berar, Nagpore, and other parts are descendants of the Brahmans who came originally into those territories with the Mahratta maranders of former times. Families of the Sarwariyas Jijhotiyas, and Sanadhiyas, great sub-tribes of the Kananjiya Brahmans of Northern India, have found their way to these central regions, as have also Tailangi, Dakhani, and other Brahmans from the south. The ancestors of many of these Brahmans were prohably pilgrims, who, wandering over the country and visiting its sacred shrines, finally took up their abode here. This has been a fruitful cause of the settlement of members of this caste in a multitude of places throughout the land. Moreover, forests, caves, fastnesses, rocks, and mountains, which are difficult of access, have ever had a singular charm for these people, inasmuch as, removed from human haunts, they were able to carry out their extraordinary ideas of religious ascetteism. In this manner they have gradually gained a foot ing in almost every district in India and in many places their descendants, abandoning the rigid practices of the first immigrants, have become addicted to various secular pursuits like many of the Brahmans now settled in the Central Provinces.

The agricultural eastes together form a very numerous community. Some of the cluef of these are Kunhis or Karimis, Telis, Loddis, Chamārs, Koris,

The agricultural eastes together form a very numerous community Some of the chief of these are Kunhis or Karmis, Telis, Lodhis, Chamārs, Koris, Uriyas, and of course many of the Rajpoots. The most important of these castes cultivators are the kurmis, who are the backbone of agriculture. The Chamārs are populous in Chattisgarh, where they are chiefly found. As a people they are far superior to the Chamārs of Northern India, although doubtless of the same race. They are principally occupied with field work, in which they display considerable energy and skill. Having discarded Brahmanical influence they have a priesthood of their own. Many of them are rich and most live in comfort while as a people they have the character of being the best subjects which the British Government has in those parts. The agricultural tribes are very numer our. Some description is given of fifty six of them, exclusive of the Rajpoots, and it is probable there are others still, of which no account has been rendered

British Government has in those parts The agricultural tribes are very numer our Some description is given of fifty six of them, exclusive of the Rappoots, and it is probable there are others still, of which no account has been rendered. Although the Kunhis and the Kurmis are properly one and the same race, yet there is a difference between them. The former originally came from the Mahratta country, and are distributed among the villages of Nagpore, while the latter came from Northern India, and are found in the Narbuddha Valley and among the Vindhya hills. The Jhari and Vahratta kunbis are Mahrattas, having come, they affirm, from Berar, Khandesh, and the neighbourhood of Poont. Sir R. Jenkins states, that the Mahratta Kunbis are commonly spoken of as descendants of Mahratta horsemen, and as having come in the train of the Mahratta. freebooters Strictly speaking, the Jharis and Mahrattas are the same people, but the Jhans have refuned their name, yet have lost their thread of connexion with the country of their forefathers, which the Mahratta Kunbis, heing later emigrants, have retained 'Old cultivators usually designate the Mahratta Kunhis by the name of Dakham and Deskar' The Lodhis as cultivators come next in rank to the hunbis Many of them came from Bundelkhand in the beginning of the seventeenth century, at the invitation of Hirdu Shuli the Gond Rajah of Garha Mandla, in whose territories they settled down, digring wells, clering away the forest, and otherwise improving the land Gradually they turned their attention to agriculture, which has been long their chief pursuit. The chief of Hatta in Rhandara is a Lodhi (a)

It were much to be desired that the third chapter on "Traders, Merchants, Manufacturers, Artizans, and other Hindu Tribes," were more systematically, not to say scientifically, arranged; lut from the materials at my disposal I found it impossible to carry out my wishes in this respect. The same observation likewise may be made on the sixth chapter, "Aboriginal and Menial Tribes."

SECTION I -THE BRAHMANICAL TRIBES

The Brahmans are most numerous in Jubbulpore, Saugor, Dumoh, Hoshungabad, Nursingpore, and Nagpore. They are found in every district, yet in some places, such as Baitool, Sconee, Mundla, and Chindwara, they are few in number.

The principal tribes of Brahmans represented in the Central Provinces are the following:—

1. Mahratta, or Maharashtra

The Brahmans of Nagpore and Berar are almost exclusively of this tribe, and are chiefly Yajurvedis. There are members of several clans in Hoshungabad,

2. Kanaujiya.

The Sarwariya, Jijbotiya, and Sanadhiya divisions The two former came from Northern India, while the Sanadhiyas came from Bundellhand The Kanauiyas are most numerous in Saugor and Jubbulpore.

3. Gaur.

The Kanaujiya and Gaur Brahmans, taken together in these provinces, are about seventy thousand in number. The Gaurs have come from Marwar.

4. Tailang.

These are a small community, with only about eight thousand persons in all. More than half of them are in the Jubbulpore district.

5. Dakhani.

Of these there are forty-five thousand in the Central Provinces. They are most numerous in the Nagpore Division.

6. Sanyasis, or Devotees.

A small and scattered fraternity of hetween twelve and thirteen thousand individuals.

7. Gola-pûrab.

These came originally from Bundelkhand.

8. Narbuddha-Naramdeo.

The local Brahman of the Narbuddha.

9. Thare, or Tharwa.

Local Brahmans of the Narhuddha Valley.

10. Ojha and Maithila:

A feeble community of only three hundred and forty persons.

16. Chumyati.

17. Sarasût, or Sâraswati.

19 Harama

The Mahrutta Brahmans preponderate in Nagpore and in some parts of the Satpâra hills. They migrated hither, it is conjectured, in the time of the dominancy of Bakht Baland, the Good Raji of Deoguth, and especially under the rule of the Mahrutta. Those at Saugor and Dainoh are of the Karhâde division of this tribe, and are said to have come originally from Poon, Konkan, and other parts of the Dekhan, in the eighteenth century, under the leadership of "Gound Pandit, a Karhâde Brithman, who was sent by the Pesliva as his agent to those parts, and who took possession of the Saugor territory for his mister, from Chhatra Lâl, in 1753 '(a). The Mithratta Brahmans of Hoshingabid do not intermarry, within their own got as

The Sanadhiya and Gola pûrab Bruhmans came from Bundelkhand, Dholpor, and Gwalior

The Gaurs came originally from Marwar

The Narhuddha and Jhare Brahmans are from the Narhuddha Valley II is the common tridition, that the Thire Brahmans have spring from Jhar, a man connected with one of the aborganal rices, whom a Raja transformed into a Brahman The Narandeo or Narhuddha Brahman has, for the most part, alian doned Brahmanical duties for farming and other scenlar pursuits

In some places the Brilinans are great landowners. In the district of Dunoh they are the proprietors of one hundred and forty five villages

The Brilinnas of Nagpor, are priests, shopkeepers, grain sellers, bunkers, seriants, writers, and, in few of them, soldiers, and are often fair scholars and efficient public servants. Those in Nimar have come thather chiefly from the Dekhan. They occupy most of the public offices in that district.

The most extensive landholders in the district of Racpore are Brahmans, who are proprietors of six hundred and six villages, of which one hundred and eighty five are in the hinds of Mahratta Brahmans. A great many Brahmans, especially of the Jharwa tribe, are engaged in agriculture in Sambalpur.

The Uriyas of Sambilpur are lazy and improvident, and are importunate beggers. They refuse to est with the Jharwis, who are hard working and intelligent, cultivating the soil and working with their own hands in many ways. They form a considerable community in this State of more than thirty one thou and persons.

The Brahmans of Berar wear small turbans and long coats coming below the knees, with waits many almost to the armpits

SECTION II -THE RAJPOOT TRIBES.

The Rajpoots of the Central Provinces number about three hundred and fifty thousand persons. They are most numerous in Hoshungabad, Bhandara, and Sconce. There are upwards of thirty thousand in the two districts of Nursingpore and Nimar. The principal tribes are the following:—

1. Chauhan

A few Chauhans are found in most districts; but they are in greatest numbers in Rajpore. Altogether they amount to upwards of three thousand persons. A Chauban chief is at the head of the small state of Rairakhol in Sambalpur. They are also numerous in Rajpore.

The Chauhans claim to have exercised rule over Mandla in ancient times, and aftern that their authority extended over fifty-two castes.

2. Bundela.

These are from Bundelkhand. They are a small tribe in the Central Provinces, and do not number fifteen hundred in all, of whom nearly one-half are in Saugor.

3. Raghubansi.

There are nearly four thousand Raghubansis at Nagpore, and more than five at Nursingpore. Altogether, the tribe has nearly seventeen thousand members in these provinces. They are a numerous class of cultivators in the Rajwara paryannah of Hoshungabad, and in Sohagpore and Sconee, professing to have come there originally from Ajoodhya by way of Bundelkhand and Gwalior, where they were settled for a time. They only intermarry among themselves, contrary to the custom of Rajpoot tribes. Ordinarily, they fraternise with Gajars and Kiraras, but when they become wealthy they wear the sacred cord, and no longer associate with them.

4. Sombansî.

This tribe is strongest in Hoshungabad and Nagpore, which contain one half of the whole. There are six thousand six hundred and fifty Sombansis in the Central Provinces. They possess ten villages in the Dhunturry Tahsil of Raepore, yet are few in number in that district.

Surajbansî;

The Surajbansis are few in number, and are less than seven hundred persons, all told. These are chiefly settled at Nursingpore, Hoshungabad, and Sconce.

6 Rithor

A tribe of three thousand persons, half of whom are at Aursingpore, and more than five hundred at Mundla

Parbhu

These are chiefly located in the Nagpore Division Nimar and in Hoshungabad. They number four thousand in all. They have a small community in Chattisgarh.

8 The Powar, Pramira, or Ponwar Tribe

The Primars or Ponwar kingdom of Malwa prohably extended to the western portion of the Narbuddha Valley seven or eight hundred years ago Nagpore was at one time apparently governed by the Primars of Dhur

They are a numerous agricultural people in these provinces. Those by the Wyngunga are supposed to be a branch of the Devanuggur Powars of Malwa who quited their country in the reign of the Emperor Auringrebe. As a reveral for assistance rendered to the Bhonslas in an expedition to Cuttack, they received lands to the west of the Wyngunga. They also spread out over the northern part of the Wyngunga district, in the Pugannahs of Thurorth, Lompta I angee and Ram pylee, and over fifty years ago entered the waste lands. The tribe is now in the possession of three hundred and twenty six villages.

The Powers are exclusively devoted to agriculture, and are described as hard working and industrious, but, at the same time decentful, untrustworthy and litigious (a)

The Ponwars are by far the most numerous of the Rajpoot race in this tried of India and form a community not far short of one hundred thousand persons. I orty five thousand of these are at Bhandura thirty thousand at Sonice and nearly fourteen thousand at Balaghat, the remaining districts possessing very flow of the tribe. The Ponwars come from Malori to Annology diam near Raintek a little more than a hundred years ago. I rom this place, they gradually extended themselves to Annologish and Chandport, cast of the Wynginga. In sconce they first occupied Largath and Partageach. The war very successful in clearing the jungle, digning tanks and making embank ments. In the last Census Report of these provinces the Ponwars are classified under the agricultural tribes as distinct from Rajpoots, which is a mistake. They are genuine Rajpoots. They are a very enterprising race. The Ponwars and the Lodhis are the chief colonists in the Balaghat districts.

9. Gûjar.

The Gajars are regarded as Kshatriyas in the Central Provinces and in some parts of the North-Western Provinces; but their right to this distinction is by no means universally acknowledged. They are principally settled in Hoshungahad, Nimar, and Nursingpore. The Gajars came originally from Marwar and Gwalior to these provinces, where they hear an excellent character for honesty and industry. They have occupied the south of Harda in Hoshungabad for several generations. There are two classes of Gûjars in that district: (1) the Lilorias; (2) the Mundlas. The former are numerous also in Schagpore, and are a "fine manly set, freer than most from superstitions, eating meat and flesh, and reckoned very good cultivators." These came from Gwalior about ten generations ago. The Mundlas are so called, because they shave their hair and partake of their food with their turhans off. They observe certain religious customs rigidly. For instance, they will not plough on the new moon, or on the eighth day of the month, as it is Krishna's hirthday; and many altogether refrain from eating meat and from smoking. They are divided into two factions. the origin of which is, that a Gûjar father having hetrothed his daughter to one man, the mother married her to another. The whole clan have taken opposite sides, and have excommunicated each other. The Mundlas are in the southern part of the Harda parganna (a).

10. Gangabansi.

The head of this tribe is the chief of the Feudatory State of Bâmrâ, in the district of Sambalpur. The authentic traditions of his family stretch back to the year 1545, when his ancestor, Raja Râm Chandra Deva, was ruler of the State.

11. The Haihaya, or Haihaibansî Tribe,

The Haihayas are among the most distinguished of the Lunar Rajpoot races, According to a copper inscription found at Mundla, the upper part of the Narbuddha Valley was under their rule in the year 144 of the Christian era; and an inscription on a temple at Chattisgarh, of 103 A.D., if the Vikramaditya era be that alluded to, refers to a Haihaya Rajah. Rajah, Raiahs of this line were ruling at Chattisgarh in 1710, when they were overthrown by the Malirativa. From the testimon of inscriptions which have been brought to light, it is clear that princes of this tribe were ruling in the neighbourhood of luthfulpore from the heginning of the eleventh to the close of the twelfth century, and that they formed alltimes with the Ponwars of Malwa the Gablots of Udapur, and the Western Yadavas. Dr. Litz Edward Hall has established the fact that the name of their lingdom was Chedi (a). The meaning of the word Chhattisgarh is thirty six forts the number of forts which the Hadiaya kingdom is said to have contained. Vary lists of the rights of Chattisgarh from very early times to the subversion of their rule in 1710, are extant, and information respecting some of them is derived from inscriptions on slabs. The only surviving representative of this ancient and distinguished Rajpoot dynasty is a pensioner of the British Government.

12 The Jadubansi, or Jadon Tribe

The Jadons are at Sindkher in Berar, the family of the Rajah being of this tribe, and also in Hoshungahad. The Jadons are in other parts considered to be an inferior branch of the Jadons or Jadubansis of whom there are a few fimilies in the Sambaljur Tahsil.

SECTION III.—IMPURE RAJPOOT TRIBES

In addition to the Rajpoot tribes of Hoshungahad already mentioned, Mr. C. A. Elliott gives a list of Rajpoot tribes of impure blood scattered about the Harda and Charwa Pargannahs of that district. These, he says, seldom wear the sacred cord, unless they are in good circumstances, and pay little attention to their pedigree and to the distinctive customs about which Rajpoots are usually very particular. Being worshippers of Rama they will not plough on the minth day of the month which commemorates his birthday; nor will they plough on the day of the new moon. They have the reputation of being good cultivators (a).

SECTION I —THE AGRICULTURAL TRIBES.

The Kunbis.

An industrious tribe scattered about these provinces and Berar In one place, as in Berar, they cat fiesh and drink spirits, and their widows may remarry. All the various divisions of Kunhis taken together in these provinces number nearly half a million of persons

2. The Mahratta Kunbis.

These are the most numerous agriculturists in Baitool, and are located chiefly in the south of the district, having come thither originally from Nagpore and Berar. The Mahratta Kunbis differ from the Jhari Kunbis in that they make dhigent inquiries for young men to marry their daughters, while the Jharis are as anxious for girls to marry their sons. The principal sub-divisions of the Mahratta Kunbis of the Wyngunga are the following:—

- i. The Bounia clan.
- ii. The Tinilab clan.
- iii. The Kaineh clan.
- iv The Demnir clan.

These clans do not intermarry. The Bounias and Kainehs sometimes are associated together at the same feast (a).

3. The Kohera Kunhts.

Cultivators of the sugarcane in the Wyngunga.

4. The Dest or Dhalwar Kunbis.

This is a small tribe, and is found in a few villages of Rampore in Baitool. They speak Hindustani.

5. The Jhart Kunbis.

The Kunbis of the jungles, of Mahratta origin. A considerable portion of the agricultural population of Nagpore belongs to this tribe. They speak Mahratti for the most part, and hut seldom Hindi. In the Wyngunga the Jhari Kunhis are generally found settled in Pownee, Tahangaurree, and Kompta.

6. Kurmt.

The Kurmis and Kunhis are in reality one class of people, and yet are known in various parts of the country by these separate designations, and under them are subdivided into numerous tribes, some of which do not intermarry. They are very industrious and persevering, commonly thrifty and frugal, and living in the enjoyment of health and much social comfort. Some of the Kurmi tribes of the Central Provinces are the following:—

- The Kanoujya Kurmts. These are in Chattisgarh, and keep themselves aloof from all other tribes.
- 2. The Chandnahû Kurmis. A tribe which immigrated into Chattisgarh two or three hundred years ago. They do not intermarry with other Kurmis.
- 3. The Chauria Kurmis. These are the oldest Kurmis of Hoshungahad. They came originally from Gwalior, about eight generations ago.

- 4 The Bandelkhandı Kurmis Found in Hoshungahad, Sohagpore, Seonee, Hurda, and elsewhere
- 5 The Pardesi, or foreign Kiomis A Hindustani speaking race from Upper India, residing in the neighbourhood of Baitool, in Hoshungahad, and in many other places. The Kurmis of Damoh came from the Doah, two hundred and fifty years ago. The Pardesis are excellent cultivators and better kept than those of most other agriculturists nation of Deswiths from des a country, meaning Marwar and Jeypore
  - 6 The Desaha Kurmis A tribe in Chattisgarh
  - 7 The Kurmts of Raepore Consisting of six principal clans -
    - 1  $\begin{tabular}{ll} \it{The Monohas} & \it{The most numerous and enterprising} \end{tabular}$  , found chiefly in the Simgah Tahsil
    - 11 The Charnaos Settled in the centre of the district in the Patun par gannah and in the east of Raepore
    - m The Darrenas In the south west of the Droog and in Dhumturry
      An inferior class
    - 1v Singrowls In the villages of Nowagarh to the north west of the Singah Tahsil
      - These Kurms have been in Raepore for seven generations, or about two hundred years (a)
    - v Tuola
    - vi Chandarya
- 8 The Tilolia Kurmts These are from Khandesh, and are found in several villages of Hoshungabad
- 9 The Mahratta Kurms These have come to the district of Hoshunga bad originally in various capacities, and have gradually settled down to agricul ture They are few in number
  - 10 The Gahot Kurmis In Hoshungabad

7 Bhoyar

An industrious rice of cultivators from Upper India settled chiefly in the Militu pargamath of Baitool, and in Chindwara. They are addicted to strong dunk, but are hard working cultivators. They probably came from Northern India. There is a considerable community of Bhoyars in Warilha.

(a) Report on the Land Revenue Settlement of Respore by Mr Hewitt B CS pr 3° and 38 Settlement Report of Reshaugabad by Mr C A Ill ott

8. Khir.

A tribe of gardeners on the banks of the Narbuddha, where they cultivate melons, vegetables, and the castor-oil plant. The Khirs, the Malls, and the Kachhis are the only cultivating tribes in Hoshungabad which use manure in their fields.

9. Mült.

Good cultivators found in Nagpore, Seonce, Sambalpur, and other districts. The Mâlis of Berar eat flesh and drink spirits; and their widows may remarry. The Mâlis and Kâchhis of Hoshungabad are growers of opium and vegetables, and also of sugarcane. A sub-division of this caste, styled Phal Mâlis, are Mahrattas, having come originally from Berar. The Mâlis and Marars are often regarded as one community.

10. Kirár.

A poor, hard-working, and not very skilful class of cultivators in Baitool, and along the Narbuddha Valley. They probably are emigrants from Northern India. The Kirârs of Hoshungabad have been in the district for eight generations, and are settled in the Riyawra pargannah. They trace their descent from Dal Rawut of Dholpore. The Kirârs, Gûjars, and Raghuhansis smoke from the same hookah, and will drink from one another's vessels.

11. Kalál.

A tribe of skilful cultivators in Bhandara, Berar, and Nagpore. They are also found in Lohara, a chiefship of Sambalpur.

12. Lodká.

A caste of agriculturists in the district of Hoshungabad, distinct from the Lodhis.

13. Lodhi.

Good and industrious agriculturists of Jubbulpore, Saugor, Nursingpore, Bhandara, Chindwâra, Damoh, and elsewhere. Those in Damoh came originally from Bundelkhund nearly three hundred years ago. The principal landowners in that district are of this caste, especially of the Mehdela clan. The Loddus are turbulent and revengeful, and are very unlike the peaceable Kurmis: They possess three hundred and sixteen villages in the district of Damoh. Loddus settled in Mundla more than two hundred years ago. Some of this tribe are in the Saugor district, and also in Hoshungabad.

The Lodhus of the Wyngunga, says Mr Lawrence, "are as a body well set up, fine, powerful men, hvang always in the open air, and following no profession but that of the plough. They are a hardy race. Their women also engage in held labor. The conditions who are unable to continue to hold their own fields, hire themselves out as agneultural labourers, or as drivers of carts. Their conduct is quiet and peaceable. They are more domestic than their neighbours and less given to family discensions. They seldom divide the ancestral property, but generation follows generation without any splitting or breaking up fumilies (a). The Lodhus of the Wyngunga possess about one hundred and righty five vallages. They are divided into two distinct hermelies.

First, the Lodhis from the Donb of the Ganges and Jumna

These are much higher in social rink than the Racpore Lodhis, with whom they will neither intermitry nor eat food.

Their ancestors are considered to have come from the Doab to the Wyngunga by the way of Mundla, where they remined for a time, and where some of their descendants are still found. The customs of these I odhis are said to be somewhat like those observed by Rappoots. The estates of Kompat and Huttah are in their hands.

Second, the Racpore or Maher Lodhis

These are more numerous than the other class, but of lower grade. The Makers are anxious to precure girls to be married to their sons, while the other I odding are anxious on opposite grounds.

The I odhis of the Mehdela hranch in the Damoh district affect an air of superiority over those of the Narbuddha Valley, who are chiefly Maha Lodhis

There are two hundred and forty thousand Lodhis in these provinces

A Tel

These are properly oil manufacturers and deders, but large numbers of those inhabiting the Central Previnces are engaged in agricultural pursuits in which they exhibit great industry and skill Members of this tribe are large landholders in Renore, where they are divided into four clans namely —

1 The Glarrias Clearers of the jungle

2 The hásarias With the exception of the Gonds and Ahirs these are probably the oldest inhibitinits of the distinct and are scattered all over the country.

They are an excellent class of cultivators

3 The Harras Their villages are in the south east of Raepore, and in the northern and central parts of the Dhamturry Tabails

 The Hallias. Later immigrants from Nagpore. Their influence in the district is small (a).

The Telis are found in all the districts of these provinces, but especially in Raepore and in the Nagpore Division. Altogether they number nearly half a million of persons.

15. Bhilala.

A tribe in Hoshungahad, the head of which is the Burkûr of Khupuria, a landowner of very good position. They claim to be partly of Rajpoot and partly of Bbeel descent. They are found in small numbers in nearly all the districts of the Narbuddha, Jubhulpore, and Chattisgarh Divisions, and also in the Upper Godavery district.

16. Kolta.

An agricultural people in the chiefship of Borasamhar in Sambalpur, and in Ghes, Kharsal, Kolahira, and many other places in the same province. Indeed, the most respectable and industrious agriculturists of Samhalpur are of this tribe. They are a considerable community, and number nearly seventy-five thousand persons.

17. Saura. .

One of the principal agricultural tribes of Borasamhar and Kharsal in Sambalpur, of Raepore, and elsewhere.

18. Kaonra.

Cultivators in the valley of the Narbuddha. They inhabit chiefly the western division of Nursingpore.

19. Pahar.

An agricultural tribe from Berar and Telingana.

Ját.

The Jâts are represented in the Narbuddha Valley and Hoshungabad, and have come thither from Marwar and Malwa. They have a great luxuriance of hair and beard, and a wild look in the eyes; in which respect the Rajpoots and Bishnois resemble them. These three races in Hoshungabad, says Mr. Elliott, in their speech sometimes substitute the letter A for s. The Jâts are good cultivators.

21 Lucet

Cultivators of Sonpur in the Sambalpur district

22 Meno, or Manah

Agriculturists, chiefly found in Chanda A few are scattered about other districts. Of their entire number of thirty six thousand persons, nearly twenty five thousand are settled in Chanda. Major Smith has the opinion that they are an aboriginal tribe who have become Hindurized. "Tradition asserts,' he says, "that, previous to the Gond conquest, the Manahs reigned over the country having their strongholds at Surjagrih in Ahiri, and at Munkgarh in the Manikgarh hills, now of Hyderabad, and that, after a troubled rule of two hundred years they fell hefore the Gonds. In appearance they are of the Gond type, and are strongly made, while in character they are hardy, industrious, and truthful Many warlike traditions still linger among them, and doubtless in days gone by they did their duty as good soldiers. But they have long since hung up the sword and shield, and now rank among the best cultivators of rice in the district. The great majority he west of the Wyngunga, but memories of far distant years connect them still with Surjagarh, and the Thakur Deo on its summit remains their greatdain god." (a)

23 Ragwa

A tribe of cultivators from Northern India

24 Bora

Cultivators in Kolabira, in the district of Sambalpur

25 Pai

A class of inferior cultivators in Sumhalpur They number nearly ten thou sand persons, and are chiefly found in the Samhalpur and Bargarh Tahsils

26 Khamar

Cultivators in Kolâbira, Sambalpur

27 Dangi

A tribe of good cultivators in the Saugor district, chiefly in the Kurai Tahsil The town of Kurai was given by Aurungzebe to a Dangi chief who erected a fort there, which in 1753 was beld by Govind Pundit, the agent of the Pesbwa. There are a few families scattered about other districts.

28. Alkari.

Growers of the al, or Morinda plant.

29. Kachht.

These are a branch of the great Kâchhi family of agriculturists spread over a large pert of Northern India. They number one hundred and three thousand, of whom seventy-seven thousand are in the Jubbulpore Division. Some of the best cultivators in the Saugor and Jubbulpore districts are of this tribe. They are also found in Nursingpore and Hoshungabad, where they and the Mhis are the only growers of opium and vegetables, and almost the only cultivators of the sugarcane.

30. Mahto Teli.

The Mahtos are the best cultivators in Ramgarh, in the Mundla district, to which place they migrated from Mybere, from eighty to ninety years ago. They long ago abandoned the expressing of oil, the original and proper business of all the tell tribes.

31. Barayi.

A tribe of pawn-growers and agriculturists in Nagpore and elsewhere. There is a considerable number of this tribe at Râmtek. They form an important community of upwards of twenty-five thousand persons in these provinces.

32. Kapewûr.

The most numerous agricultural class in the paryannah of Rājgarh, in the north of the Chānda district. There are not many members of this tribe apparently elsewhere, for their entire number under the government of the Chief Commissioner is little over ten thousand. Some three thousand of them cultivate lands in the Upper Godavery territory.

33. Goali.

A tribe of inferior cultivators in Sambalpur.

34. Yelma.

A tribe in the Upper Godavery district, speaking Telugu. They occupy a high social position, as many of them are chiefs. The Sardesmukhs of the four upper talukas, and the Ranee of Bhadrachallam, belong to this tribe. The Yelma women live secluded in zenânas. The Yelmas are a proud people, and the poorest of them will not handle the plough (a)

35 Kamencâr

An agricultural tribe in the Upper Godas ery district

36 Areicâr

An agricultural tribe in the Upper Godavery district

37 The Mahrattas

Agricultural tribes in the Upper Godavery district

38 The Telingas

Agricultural tribes in the Upper Godavery district, Nagpore, Sambalpifr and other places All these tribes of agriculturists inhabiting this tract of country speak the Telugu lungurge, and therefore should rather be included with the Telugu tribes of the Madris Presidency than with the Hindt and Mahratti speaking tribes of the Central Provinces

39 Dûra

Cultivators in Kharonde They also serve as soldiers

40 Soraa

Cultivators in Isharonde They wear the sacred cord

Bishnoi

A tribe of colonists in Hoslungabad from Marwar not distinguishable in appearance from Juts. They are settled among the Byrio bills and in villages in their vicinity. The dettes worshipped by them are Bishen and Jhamajee These Bishnois, says. Mr. Elliott, "abstain from the admixture of Mahomedan customs, their chief peculiarity in Upper India (b).

42 Korth

This tribe is settled in Schinguree and Pertabgarh jargannahs in the south of the Wyngnuga, and in Chandpoor, to the west. They are found in all the districts of the Narbuddha and Jubhulpore Divisions but nowhereelse, with the exception of Bhanddar. They are reputed to have come originally from the

(b) Se'tlement Report of Heshungabad by Mr C. A. El ott.

Benares province, "in the suite of a Bhonsla prince of the Chandah branch, who had performed a pilgrimage to the sacred city." They produce sugarcane in large quantities, the production of which is chiefly in their hands. The tribe has distinguished itself for its great enterprise and energy in the excavation of noble tanks and in the formation of numerous embankments.

The Korihs have the excellent habit of settling their own tribal disputes by themselves, and of seldom going to law about them. Their dress is peculiar, especially their head gear. "In their houses, and when at work or on a journey, they are content with a handkerehief, which tightly covers their crowns, and terminates in knots, inelegant and cheap." They are an uncleanly people, and have no high standard of morality. It is said too, that they are difficult of management.

43. The Marars.

The Marars have two divisions :-

1. The Bhorih Marar. From Northern India.

The Phûl Mâll. Growers of fruits and flowers, from the Berars.The Marars and Mâlts are sometimes spoken of as one tribe.

44. Halbah.

Agriculturists, originally Kunbis, hut who have become separated from them in easte matters.

45. Khundaita.

These are a small community in Sambalpur, found in greatest numbers in the Sonpur and Patna States.

46. Bhuinha.

A small tribe in Sambalpun, numbering less than fourteen thousand individuals.

47. Birjia,

An insignificant tribe of three handred and fifty-two persons in Raigarh and the Sambalpur Tahsil.

48. Bhuya.

The Bhuyas are one of the principal tribes of Rampur, in the Sambalpur province.

49 Gaun

A numerous tribe of Samhalpur There are nearly forty thousand in Bargarh, upwards of twenty thousand in the Sambalpur Tahsil, and nearly twenty thousand in each of the three Native States of Sonpur, Kalahandi, and Patni, and altogether in this province number one hundred and thirty two thousand persons

50 Dumal

A tribe in Samhalpur, of upwards of twenty six thousand persons, of whom more than one half are settled in the State of Sonpur

51 Kohl

A small tribe of agriculturists found chiefly in Bhandari and Chanda, who, like the Murihs, are supposed to he Hinduized aborigmes. They are of a distinctly Gond type, and retain many Gond customs. They profess, however, to copy the Mahratta Kunbis. "They have a remrikable faculty for selecting the best sites for irrigation reservoirs, and to possess a large tank is their highest ambition. On the lands watered by these tanks they cultivate sugarcane and rice, and they are the clinef producers of goor (coarse unrefined sugar) in the country "(a)

52 Khangar

Cultivators in Saugor, Juhbulpore, and Damoh They are much addicted to crime

53 Punkah

These are properly weavers, but although many still adhere to their hereditary vocation, the majority of them have abandoned it for agriculture. They are a quest and industrious people, and in religiou belong to the sect of Kahir Panthis They avoid the use of spirits and meat, do not marry their children until they have reached maturity, and hury their dead. The Punkahs make had cultivators, and the villages of which they are proprietors are inserable in the extreme. The Gandas are said to be an offshoot of the Punkahs.

54 Gandla

A smull community, most of whom are settled in Chanda There are a few in Bhandâra, Wurdha, Nagpore, and elsewhere

(a) Report of the Census of the Central Provinces for 1872 p 19

55. Chasa.

A tribe scattered about Samhalpur, being most numerous in the Native States of Bamra, Kalahandi, and Kairakhol.

56. The Chamars.

A numerous body of cultivators scattered about the Central Provinces. Like their brethren in the North-Western Provinces, they are a low caste race (a). They form nearly one-fourth of all the inhabitants of Bilaspur, where they have been settled for so many centuries that they have no tradition of any other home. Mr. Chisholm says of them, that "they possess active and well set figures, are more hrown than hlack in colour, and are less marked in features than the easy and higher classes. They are fairly energetic and industrious cultivators, are somewhat tenacious of their rights, and considerable numbers of them have attained a position of comfort and respectability "(b). In the Central Provinces they number more than half a million of people, of whom considerably more than one-half are settled in Raepore and Belaspore.

Nearly the whole of the Chamars of Chattisgarh are adherents of the Sataāmi religion, which was founded by Ghāst Dās, a Chamār, between the years 1820 and 1830. Idolatry of every form is eschwed, and the Supreme Being is worshipped without any visible sign or representation. Moreover, all the worshippers are socially on an equality. They have no temples, no public religious service, no creed, no form of devotion. The religious act simply consists of muttering the name of God, and asking His blessing. A Sataāmi prostrates himself before the sun, morning and evening, crying 'Sat Nām,' the True Name, or the True One. The Sataāmis will not eat meat; nor will they take water from any one not of their own easte. They drink no spirits. But some smoke tobacco, and as others do not, two separate and important divisions of the tribe have sprung up. The Sataāmis bury their dead without performing any religious ceremony.

A few years ago a serious division arose among the Satnamt Chamars on the subject of smoking tobacco. This and drinking spirits were both forbidden by their spiritual teacher. The latter was easily abandoned, but the former, although given up for a time by all the Chamars, was after an interval resumed by some of them. These did not adopt the hookah as formerly, but, in its stead, a broad pylas leaf was folded into the shape of a pipe, and tobacco was placed in the bowl, and thus smoked This pipe is called choongee, and the smokers are designated choongiyâs The more orthodox Saināmis, however, have resisted the temptation, and the sect has spht into two great sections—the smokers and the non smokers  $\{a\}$

The Chamars of Chattisgarh are not workers in leather as they are in Northern India, but are simply engaged in agriculture. The adoption of the Sathami religion, while it has brought them into collision with the higher castes, has imparted to them in independent spirit which otherwise they would not have possessed. In Hoshungabad many of them are weavers

The Chamars of Raepore call themselves Raedasis, heing disciples of Rae Das, a Chamar reformer, who adopted the creed of the celebrated Ramanand, who flourished three or four centuries ago The Ruedasis assumed the designa tion of Satnamis Ghast Das, in proclaiming the dogmas of this sect in Chattis garh, seems to have revived the teaching of Rae Das rather than to have originated a new creed Chamars are chiefly found in the north west of Raepore Though outwardly, "as Satnamis, scrupulous about their eating, they are slovenly and untidy in their habits, and the houses of even the wealthiest are generally miserable hovels. They are industrious, though careless, cultivators, and frugal in the extreme, indulging in no extravagance in dress or jewellery The dress of the men is usually a single cloth, one end of which encircles their loms, and another their head, and the women wear hitle or no jewellery yet they rarely make money, and seem to want the talent of getting on in the world Their villages are seldom prosperous Though this apparent mahility to improve their position is partly due to Hindin opposition, yet one great cause of the phenomenon seems to be, their individual fickleness and want of perseverance A very slight cruse will send a Chamár cultivator away from his village, and though they generally return after a short interval, yet these migrations must necessarily hinder the accumulation of property (b)

SECTION II -THE PASTORAL TRIBES

1 The Ahtr Tribe

The Ahirs of Central India are probably descendants of the Abhiras, who once ruled over part of this country There is a tradition that, in the beginning of the fifteenth century, Asâ Ahir, a rich herdsman, huilt a fort on a high hill in

Khandesh, now known as Asirgarh, whose ancestors had held estates there for nearly seven hundred years.

There are upwards of fifteen thousand Ahirs in Damoh. Many are agriculturists, and inhabit the wooded and hilly parts of the district. They are poor, and of an unsettled character. There is a small community of this tribe at Nagpore, Hoshungahad, Nursingpore, Baitool, Nimar, and in the Upper Godavery district; but a larger one at Chindwara, Raepore, Samhalpur, and in the districts of the Jubhulpore Division, with the exception of Mundla, where they are few in number. Altogether they form a large tribe of between three and four hundred thousand persons. The Ahîrs of Nagpore are divided into the following clans :--

Nagpore Clans.

- 1. Kanoujiya Gwâlwanshi. Speaking Hindî.
  - 2. Malha. Speaking Hindi.
  - 3. Dûdh Gowars. Speaking Mahrathi.

The Ahîrs of Raspore have been settled in that district from time immemorial. Their clans differ from the above, and are as follows :-

Raepore Clans.

- Jharria.
   Kusaria.
   Old inhahitants of Raepore.
- 3. Kanoujiya. Recent immigrants from the North-west.

The Kanoujiyas, although comparatively of recent date, have greater influence in the district than the older clans.

The Ahirs of Hoshungahad have come originally from Bandelkhand, or from districts further north.

2. The Govern Tribe.

Herdsmen of the Wyngunga and throughout the Nagpore Division generally. A considerable hody is in the Seonee district. All the cattle of the Wyngunga is said to he in their hands. They are also employed as cartmen and in the manufacture of coarse sugar, and are reputed to be an industrious people. They number nearly one hundred thousand persons.

The Gauli Tribe.

The Gaulis are a pastoral people inhabiting the uplands of Baitool and clsewhere, tending flocks and herds and cultivating the ground. They are probably the remnants of the royal Gauli race, which many ages ago ruled over some parts of Central India "From Deogath on the plateau," says Mr Grant, "which, before its subversion by the midland dynasty of Gonds in the sixteenth century. was, according to the popular voice, the last seat of Guili power, the very names of the Gauli chiefs are handed down According to one account the predecessor of the Gonds was Pandu Gauli, but a more detailed tradition sets forth that Jatha, the known ancestor of the Deogarh Gond dynasty, began his career as a dependant on Mansur and Gansur, the two Gauli chiefs of Deogarh, and received from them a grant of land He rose to become their minister, and at length obtained from them the entire management of their country Having thus gained power he went on to depose and murder his benefactors, and to usurp their prin cipality But a Gauli chief still retained possession of the fort of Narnala for a few years longer, when he was slam by the Mahomedans" (a) It is pretty certain that a rice of Ahir or herdsman chiefs had possession of a portion of the Taptee Valley for a long time prior to the fifteenth century Asirgarh is to this day called a Gault fort Sir Henry Elliot states, in his Supplemental Glossary, that "in the Puranic geography, the country on the west coast of India, from the Taptee to Deogarh, is called Ahlura, the region of cowherds "Dr Bhau Dui mentions having found an inscription of an Ahhira king at Nasik, and suggests that the Gauli kings, in the neighbourhood of Nasik and Trimbakeswara, were the same as the Ahhira kings' (b)

The Guilis of Bhandara are a wandering people, encamping in the jungles, and only visiting towns and villages in order to sell the produce of their daines and to obtain supplies. A few are scattered about the edges and slopes of the Chindwara hills. Many of the inhalitants of Rajoli in Bhandara are of this tribe. They are a very simple people in manners and appearance, but are addicted to petity theft and cattle stealing. Some are found also in the Hoshungahad district

4 The Gaulan Tribe

A pastoral tribe in Berar

5 The Golar and Holar Tribes

Pastoral tribes from the banks of the Godavery, which have established themselves chiefly in the districts of Nagpore, especially in the stony tracts of Ambagarh and in the forests around Ramplee and Sahangadhee They cultivate a little land in the neighbourhood of the villages, which they occupy in the ramy

, season. They are said to speak the Canarese language (a). In the Wyngunga they inhabit the sub-divisions of Chakurhaitee and Keenee.

6. Garariya, or Gadariya.

These are shepherds scattered about most of the districts of these provinces.

SECTION III -THE BANJARA TRIBES

These tribes are scattered all over the Dekhan, and are found in various parts of the Central Provinces. There are many in the Raepore district, living in or on the confines of the jungle; and, as it is cleared, they retreat further east. In Southern Berar, where they are very numerous, they have a bad character as highwaymen. They are mostly of the Bhukya tribe.

In the Dekhan the Banjaras are divided into four branches, namely:-

The Banjaras of the Dekhan.

- 1. The Mathûria Branch.
- 3. The Charan Branch.
- 2. The Lahâna Branch.
- 4. The Dhâri Branch.

The first three trihes profess to be descended from high caste families of the north-western tracts of India, through illicit or irregular marriages contracted by some of their members. From the statements of Mr. Cumberlege, Snperintendent of Police in Wûn, who has paid great attention to these tribes, it is conjectured, that "the emigration which settled the Banjara upon Dekhan soil took place when these grain-carriers came down with the great Moglud armies early in the seventeenth century. In fact, they seem to have derived their whole origin and organization from the long wars of the emperors in the south; and the restoration of peace and prosperity is hreaking them up. Neither their trade, nor their trihal system, can survive another generation of English predominance" (b). The whole of the Dekhan is parcelled out by the Banjāras for grazing purposes.

One of the most powerful of these tribes is the Charan; and its influence, especially of the Rathor clan, is strong in Berar. The Charans are followers of Guru Nanak, and worship Bala, Mariai, Tulja Devi, Siva Bhaia, Mittu Bhūkya, and Satti. The Dhāris are divided into twelve clans, and worship Saraswati. They are described as hybrids between Hindus and Mahomedans, and are nominally ranked among the latter (c).

There are upwards of four thousand Banjaras in Sambalpur.

1. Marıçârî

Traders in Nagpore, Bhandara, Chanda, Chindwara, and other places of Chindwara came in with the Maharatta conquerors in the last century. Warwaris are the principal native traders at Hingunghat, Hoshungabad. Kamptee, and elsewhere in the Central Provinces and Bear.

2. Parieûr.

Traders in Bhandâra, Râmtek of Nagpore, and in other places They are mostly attached to the Jain religion.

3. Agarwâla,

Merchants, who are found in greatest numbers in Nagpore and Jubbulpore; some of them cutered the country with the Mahrattas A few Agarwallas reside in most important towns and villages.

4. Komti.

Traders in Nagpore, Juhhulpore, Berar, and elsewhere, from the south. They are a small community.

Lâr.

A Dekhani tribe of traders in Berar.

6. Bohra.

Merchants and traders.

7. Maheshwari.

Merchants and hankers. A community of three thousand six hundred persons in Nagpore and elsewhere.

8. Birwar.

Bankers and traders.

9. Khatrî.

Merchants and traders in Hoshungahad and elsewhere.

10. Kasanda.

These possess twenty-three villages in Raepore.

11. Gaurî.

A small community in possession of one village in the Dhumturry Tahsil of Respore.

12. Oswâl.

Merchants and traders in Hoshungahad.

13. Khandelwal,

Traders in Hoshungahad.

14. Saraogi.

Traders in Hoshungabad.

15. Kassars or Kânsâr.

Workers in brass and bellmetal. Their ancestors lived in Chundehyree in Bandelikhand, whence they proceeded first to Mundla, and afterwards to Bhandâra, Raepore, and other parts of Central India. The Kassars manufacture glass, work in clay, and deal largely in heads and glass bracelets.

16 Panchal

These are not only workers in brass, but are likewise employed in the manu facture of precious metals, generally coming only in the province of goldsmiths. They are settled in Chanda and Sambalpur

17 Sonår

Goldsmiths A caste commonly found in most of the towns and principal villages of India, and already several times alluded to

18 Sona theres

Gold washers They labour in the Sonenuddee and in the Wyngunga The gold obtained is impure, and not very valuable. But perhaps this may arise from defects in the washing process. It is singular that those who search for gold at once quit the places where they happen to find it. This is done from some superstitious dread attaching to such places.

19 Kalhar

The Kalhars are an exceedingly numerous class of traders — According to the census there are upwards of three hundred thousand persons of this trihe in the Wyngunga — They are the shopkeepers of the country, and in other parts of India would be called Baniyas or Banians — In this district they are divided into three classes —

First -The Jain Kalhars

These are considered to be renegades from the pure Bannya castes, who were degraded from the rank they originally held in consequence of evading the strict caste rules of their order. They came from the western coast

Second -The Schorak Kalhars

This branch is stitled to have come from Bandelkhand. For a long time they have the designation of Oomrai Baniyas. The most respectable members of this branch are grain sellers.

Third - The Pardes Kalhars

These are the original Kalhars of the district, although styled Pardesis, or foreigners, in allusion to the tradition of their baying migrated to the Wyngunga from Northern India They are less numerous than the other branches

Kahâr.

A respectable Shudra class in Jubhulpore and other districts of the Central Provinces.

21. The Bhût Tribe.

Bards and genealogists in Hoshungahad and other districts.

22. Kayasth.

The Kayasths have come from Furruckabad and other parts of Northern India. There are some members of this caste in Jubbulpore, who probably settled there in the time of Aurungzebe, when the Mahomedan Gond, Bakht Baland, was Rajah of Deogarh. They are also found in the district of Hoshungabad, and more or less in all the remaining districts. The Kayasths of Şambalpur are said to bear the name of Mahanti, and to have come originally from Orissa. They are clerks in Government offices and school-masters, and are described as an intelligent, though somewhat effeminate, people.

23. Pânhâri.

Sellers of pawn and betel-nut.

24. Tamboli.

Betel-sellers.

25. Jangam.

A small community of religious mendicants.

26. Bairâgi.

Religious mendicants, a much larger community than the preceding, and most numerous in Chattisgarh.

27. Gosain.

These are found weathered doubt the Central Provinces, and are represented by several of their class such as Gir, Band, Bhartî, Pûrî.

28. Dosi.

Astrologers in Kharonde. They wear the sacred thread.

Dhîmar.

Kishermen and boatmen. They are numerous in Bhandāra, Jubbulpore, Nagpore, Raepore, Bilaspore, and other districts, and altogether constitute a community of two hundred and thirty-eight thousand persons.

30 Kennat

Fishermen and boatmen, occasionally traders likewise

31 Bâgtı

Fishermen and cultivators in Kharonde

32 Inphwar

Supposed to be a branch of the Dhimars They are a separate people, how ever, and never reside in the same villages with them. They are found chiefly in the villages of the Luijee district of the Wyngunga

33 Bhoîs

Fishermen They also carry palankeens, fetch water, and perform other menial duties

34 Woddeway

Boatmen and fishermen in the Upper Godavery District

35 Halwar

Confectioners

36 Lohar, or Khati

Blacksmiths and carpenters The Lohârs of the Wyngunga are not only workers in iron, but are also carpenters They keep themselves apart from the Lohârs of Berar and of the Narbuddha Valley, and are known commonly by the appellation of Khâti The Lohârs form a community of nearly one hundred thousand persons

37 Barhar, Sutar, and Wâdhi

Carpenters The designation differs in different localities The Barhais are strongest in Nagpore, Jubbulpore, and Saugor, but are met with in all districts

38 Beldâr

Tank diggers

The Beldurs of Raepore are Unyas, and are under the authority of a jamadar, who is to them a kind of chief, having officers or nails under him each of whom has charge of a gang

These gangs wander about the district to places where their services may be needed

Beldurs are most numerous in Nagpore

39. Kumhâr.

Potters, tile-makers, brick-makers, and the like. There are as many as sixty-six thousand Kumhârs in these provinces.

40. Sutrashi.

Musicians in Hoshungahad.

41. Bajgaria Gânda.

Musicians of Chattisgarh. As they eat meat, drink spirits, and are in other respects impure, they are considered to be somewhat low in the social scale.

42. Gûrwa.

Musicians in Hoshungabad.

43. Rangârî.

An important class of dyers at Bori, in the Nagpore district. The cloths dyed at Bori are much valued for the durability of the dye, which is ascribed by the dyers to a peculiar virtue in the waters of the Wana.

44. Kohri, or Kohli.

Artizans. A small trihe in Saugor, much addicted to crime.

45. Bonka.

Soldiers or pails in Kharonde, who speak the Uriya language.

46. Dhobi, or Warthi.

Washermen. They are called Warthis in Berar. They constitute a community of upwards of seventy thousand persons.

47. Sîpî.

Cloth-printers.

48. Bâri.

Servants in Hindu families. They also make plates of broad leaves.

Nâî, Nâû, Hajâm, or Mahâli.

Barbers. In Berar they are called Mahâlis. They are found everywhere.

50. Dendrawar.

Weavers of tassar silk.

51 Julâi

Weavers

52 Kuta

Weavers of turbans and other fine fibrics

53 Chandar

Weavers of cloth worn hy women of Hosbungabad

54 Koshtı, or Kosta

A numerous class of weavers in Nagpore, Racpore, Berar, Sambalpur, and elsewhere They and the Dhers are the most important non agricultural classes of Nagpore, and are manufacturers of the different kinds of cloth which the come ray produces In Sambalpur and Hoshungabad they are manufacturers of tassar silk. They number more than a hundred thousand persons

The hoshtis are divided into two branches, namely -

1 Koshti

2 Salewar

The chief distinction between these two hranches hes in their workmanship. The Koshtis manufacture white cloth with a silken or gold embroidered border, while the Salewars manufacture parti coloured cloths of various patterns. The last census report gives the following gloomy view of the troubles that have befallen this industrious caste through competition with English traders. "The Koshtis, like the weavers of the finer kinds of cloth in other parts of India, have fallen on evil times. They are untille to compete with the showy goods which Manchester sends in such profusion, and they have of late years emigrated in great numbers, chiefly to Berar, where, as day labourers, they are able to obtain good wages. A few only have betbought themselves of an agricultural life '(a)

55 Bhillia

Wevers of cotton cloths in Sambalpur, where they form a community of upwards of sixteen thousand persons, most of whom are in the Bargarh and Sambalpur Tahsils, and the Sonpur feudatory State

56 Mehra

Weavers of coarse cotton cloths in Sambalpur, Bustar, and Hoshungabad They also perform the duties of village police 57. Gûriâ.

Confectioners in Sambalpur.

58. Gondali.

Drum-beaters.

59. Sânsiâ.

Masons and stone-carvers in Sambalpur, numbering nearly eight thousand persons.

60. Kurli.

Snake-charmers and pipers in Berar.

Meriwâr.

Tailors, in the Upper Godavery District.

62. Simpi.

Tailors in Berar.

63. Dirzi.

Tailors. A considerable community, most numerous in Negpore and Jubbulpore.

64. Balincâr.

Bangle-makers, in the Upper Godavery District.

65. Medariwâr.

Mat-makers, in the Upper Godavery District.

Vb. Upperwar.

Tank-diggers and stone-masons, in the Upper Godavery District. They are divided into two clans.

67. Dagore.

Rope-makers of Hoshungabad.

68. Lora.

Hemp-growers of Hoshungabad. The cultivators of wheat, barley, and other cereals will not grow hemp.

69 Bussora

Basket weavers and musicians Their women are midwives in the Hoshunga bid district. They form a considerable community of forty three thousand individuals, more than one half of whom are in the Jubbulpore districts

70 Zingar, or Jingar

A small community of artisans, found chiefly in the districts of Nagpore There are a few also settled in Sambalpur

71 Bharbhunna

Roasters of grain, and small triders  $\;\;$  Numerically, an insignificant community

72 Garpagarı

These are by profession averters of hail, though in some places they have taken to agriculture. Their numbers are few. They are found in the Wyngunga, Berar, Nagpore, and other places

73 Sudu

In Sambalpur, especially in the Sonpur and Kairikhol States, there are nearly four thousand of the tribe

74 Maharun

The Maharuns are in Sambalpur, where they number four hundred and five persons

75 Ghantera

An inconsiderable body of people, numbering only one hundred and five persons, spread about the Sambalpur territory, with the exception of the Kulhandi and Sarangarh foundatory States

76 Khurûra

A small tribe scattered over Sambalpur, especially in the Sambalpur and Bargarh Tahsils, and the Sonpur State

77 Khurra

These number two hundred and thirty four individuals, of whom one hundred and sixty three are in the Bamta-feudatory State, and seventy one in the Sumbil pur Tabsil

78. Hutica.

A small community in Sambalpur, settled chiefly in the Bargarh Tahsil and in the Sonpur and Patna feudatory States.

79. Kalarant.

Dancers. A low, licentious people. They are very few in number, yet are met with in all districts.

80 Rhandari.

A community of upwards of six thousand persons in the Sambalpur territory. They are in greatest numbers in the Bargarh and Sambalpur Tahsils and in the Sonpur State,

Chipi.

There are between one and two hundred families of the Chipis in Sambalpur, the greater proportion of whom are in the Sambalpur Tahsil.

ABORIGINAL TRIBES;—KOLARIAN

Section I .- The Kol, Kul, or Kûr Tribes.

The Kols of Sambalpur have come from the direction of Chota Nagnore, where they form a considerable community of forty-four thousand persons. They are described as a hardworking, bonest, and 'light-hearted' people, the women working as zealously as the men. The Kols are addicted to strong drink. Some have regarded the Kols and Dhángars as the same tribe; but the Ethnological Committee of the Central Provinces bave drawn a distinction between them. There are unwards of twenty thousand Kols in the Jubbulpore district.

The Kûrs are spread about the Mahadeva hills, where they call themselves Muâsis, and about the forests on the Tapti and Narhuddha, as far as the country of the Bheels. Their food is very poor and scanty, consisting chiefly of a 'gruel made from the pounded kernels of mangoes and flowers of the mahowa tree. They worship the sun and moon carved on wooden pillars. A Kûr bridegroom, unless he can purchase his wife, serves his father in law a number of years for her.

Section II.—The Kurkû Tribes.

The Kurkûs number about forty thonsand persons in Baitool and Hoshungahad, and have their chief seat in the Pachmarhi hills. They are mostly black, with flat faces and broad flat noses, high cheek-hones and thick lips; and it is difficult to distinguish them from Gonds. They are singularly truthful and honest; but their notions of chastity are very lax. These tribes cultivate the ground, cut grass and firewood, and lead, for the most part, a precarious existence. In character and disposition they resemble the Gonds; but they are a perfectly distinct people. Their religion is an imitation of Hinduism, and differs essentially from that practised by the Gonds. There is no social intercourse between the two races, and they do not cat and drink together. They worship their ancestors, have no special priesthood, do not cat the flesh of the cow, and sometimes hury, and sometimes burn, their dead. Their language has no affinity with Gondi. The Kurkûs of the Satpoora hills, says Mr. C. Scanlan, burn their adults, and bury their children.

This tribe is characterized by shyness and inoffensiveness. "It is hard to believe that only fifty years ago they were the most reckless and daring of robbers, and that their depredations filled the whole of the Narbuddha Valley with terror. There has probably never been a stronger instance of the character of an entire race being completely changed in a generation by peaceful government" (a).

The Kurkûs of the Sâtpoort înlis are divided into four great branches 1 Bapcha; 2 Baorii, 3 Rumba, 4 Bondoi. The last is highest in rank These clans hold no social intercourse with one another (a)

Many Kurkûs are found in the district of Numar, the most westerly portion of the Central Provinces They are the same as the Kurkûs of the Gâwalgarh hills of Berar, and of Kalihheet in Hoshungabid

Two days and a half are required for the murriage of a Kurkû "On the first day, the relatives of the bridegroom go to the hride's house, and hring her to her intended husband's house, on the second day, they the together the garments of the two, and cause them to join hands and run seven times round a mahowa tree, after which they are conducted to the bower prepared at the husband's house. Then they are reminded of their having heen knotted together, after which they all feast and drink, and one having lifted the husband, and unother the wife, on their backs, they dance" (b) Kurkûs dress like Hindus, and eat food from their hands, which they will not do from the hands of Gonds and Mhârs. They were fewer ornaments than Gonds.

The Kurkûs of the Kubbheet hills, and of Chandon in Baitool, are called Pothria Kurkûs. They differ from the Mawash Kurkûs of the Narhuddha Valley, in that they reir pigs, which the latter do not, and appear to have a separate language or divided of their own. The two tribes occasionally intermarry. On the southern hank of the Taptee is another Kurkû tribe, which also forms alliances with the Pothrias.

The Pothria tribe are improvident and lazy, and consequently are not good cultivators. Their chief market is at Siralia to which place they bring the produce of the hills in great ahundrine. They are 'in general request as furmer ants and ploughmen, heigh too bonest to defraud their masters of thour or material'. Every village of the tribe has three deties. I Dongar Deo, god of the hills, having his halutation on the nearest hill in the neighbourhood. He is worshipped once a year, namely at the Dasahra festival, when the following offer mgs are presented to him,—a goat, two cocoanuts, five limes, five dates, and a hall of sendir pasts. 2 Mutya, or Matha, Deo, consisting of a heap of stones erected in the village. The same offerings are presented to him, with this difference, that instead of the goat, a pg is sacrificed. 3 Mata, the goddess of small pox, who receives an offering of cocoanuts, but none of blood. Besides these deties, many others are also worshipped, for example, the cholera god, the monkey god, the tiger god, the god of the wheat field, and gods presiding over the growth and health of children (a).

The Pothria Kurkûs have numerous gotras, or clans; some of which are the following:—

The Kurkûs of Hoshungabad have a singular notion of their superiority to all the tribes in their neighbourhood. "Any Kurkû who should drink or eat from any vessel belonging to any of these tribes, or to a Mahomedan, would be put out of caste; hut in the case of the Gonds, it is lawful to drink out of their hrass vessels, though not out of their earthen vessels. The offence would be wiped out by a dinner to his brotherhood, at which one pig, three goats, and seven chickens would be consumed" (d). The Kurkûs have not the same prejudice against Brahmans as the Gonds, and will eat the food which has heen cooked by them.

Section III.—The Bheel Tribes.

These are found chiefly in the Nimar district, yet small communities of them inhabit other parts of the Central Provinces. They are located chiefly in the hills surrounding the Asirgarh fortress. The Bheels are hereditary watchmen among the villages of Nimar Many members of these tribes embraced Mahomedanism in the reign of Aurungzehe, hut their descendants are mere nominal Mahomed in only practising the simplest rites of the creed, while adhering largely to the old lieuthen ceremonies prevalent among the Bheels Not a few are idle and dissonant, yet the character of these tribes has greatly improved of late years, and many have become cultivators of land. See the separate chapter on the Bheel Tribes in Part III

The Bheels of Berar are of the Turvi clan, and extend for into Mandesh They are all Mahomedans, having changed their faith, it is commonly asserted, it the command of the Emperor Aurungzebe These are Bheels in Battool, Hoshungathad, and the Upper Godavery District

Section IV—The Binghal or Bingwar Tribe

This tribe is in Chattisgarh. Its social customs resemble those of the Kanwars and Gonds, and the cast of countenance of the three tribes is very similar. The Buijhâls are found also in the small State of Boresambar in Sambal pur, having come there, it is supposed, originally from the Vindhyan Range, to the west. The chief of Glies is of this tribe; and some of its members are settled in the chiefabip of Kharal. There are likewise claim in Raepore, to the north east. These are cultivators, and are allied to the Baigas of Mandla.

Captain Ward considers that the Binjwars are a branch of the Baiga Tribe and divides them into seven clans, which are given in the account of that tribe

Section V -The Bhunnya Tribe

A colony of Bhunjiyas is found in Raepore, to the east of the district where they are somewhat numerous, especially in the Khanar and Bindra Nawagarh Lamindáits, 'where they hold a good many fairly cultivated villages

Section VI - The Bhuma Tribe

The Bhumas are a wild tribe inhaliting the remote tracts of Chattisgarh. The sole heritage of the Bhuma is an axe, and the veriest shred of cloth attach ed to a string suffices to cover his nakedness. He apparently scorns regular cultivation, and looks upon ploughing as beneath the dignity of man. He rears a crop under the system known as dahya, which consists in cutting down a patch of jungle, firing it in May, and then throwing seed among the ashes. This germinates, and springs up very fast after the commencement of the monsoon. One patch of jungle yields in this way for two years, and then a new truct is taken up, while the abandoned land will not recover itself, and be fit to be occupied, for some twelve or fifteen years" (a). The Bhumias are fond of hunting with bows and arrows. They are a "short, slim, hlack race, often with long shaggy hair, and wild looking, but essentially timid," and living in scattered huts. They mix little with other classes, and seldom come down to the plains. Being satisfied with the spontaneous products of the forest they take only small interest in cultivation of any sort.

Captain Ward states that the two words 'Baiga' and 'Bhûmia' are, in Mandla, synonymous and interchangeable. It would follow, therefore, that the Bhûmias there are the same as the Baigas.

Section VII .- The Baiga Tribes.

The Baigas are one of the most remarkable races of Central India, and differ both in language and appearance from the Gonds. They are in greatest numbers in the Mundla district, where there are upwards of six thousand of them.

Captain Ward divided them into three great branches :-

- 1. The Binjwars, or Bichwars.
- 2. The Mundiyas.
- 3. The Bhirontiyas.

These branches, bowever, differ so much from one another that they may almost be regarded as separate tribes. "One sect, the Mundiya, is known by the head being shaven all but one lock. The Binjwars, on the other hand, wear their hair long, never cutting it, and tie it up in a knot behind; so do the Bhirontiyas. In stature some are taller than Gonds; but as a rule they are all very much below the average height of Europeans. The Baigas to the eastwards, on the Maikal Range, are much finer specimens of humanity than those near Mandla. In habits, too, they are superior, being a fine manly race, and better looking than their brethren near Mandla. They have not the flat head and nose, and receding forehead, so common among the Gonds—the head is longer, the features more aquiline, and the hands are peculiarly small. Some among them have, however, all the types of low civilization—flat heads, thick lips, and distended nostrils; but, on the whole, the appearance of these Baigas of these eastern Ghants is striking, as compared with that of other wild tribes. In character, too, they differ much from the more degenerate aboriginal races. Fearless, trustworthy, independent, ready enough to give their opinion, and very willing to assist, they manage their communities in a way deserving of high praise. Social crimes, such as abduction of women, are more or less prevalent among them; but these cases are always decided by the village elders, generally to the satisfaction of all parties and cother seem unknown, except perhaps in years of secrety of slight, why build, they are very hardy, extremely active, and first rute sportsmen inding traps and pitfalls and capital shots with their small bows and arrows, they soon clear the whole country of game. Unarmed, saye with the axe, they wander about the wildest jungles and the speed with which they fly up a tree on any alarm of tigers is wonderful, yet the courageous way in which they strind by each other, on an emergency, shows that they are by no means wanting in bold ness. Their skill in the use of the axe is extraordinary, and they often knock over small deer, hares, and peacocks with it. It is indeed by no ments rare to see panthers brought in either speared or knocked on the head with the axe. Even when occupied with his fields the love of field sports seems inherent in the Baigand in the rains, when he has little else to do he and his comprimons amuse them selves with running down sambar, and spotted deer, with their dogs, following them not the water, and killing them with their axes when brought to by (a)

The dress of the men is exceedingly scanty, but that of the women is much more decorous. The latter wear bunches of wool tied up in their hun, and are attacoed like Gond women. The Bagas are the priests of some other aboriginal trihes, especially of the Gonds. They direct all their religious observances, and settle boundary disputes. They invoke the gods of the hills the streums and the forests, and perform exoroisms and incantions on great occasions. They are summoned to avert cholera or small pox, and they single out the witch whose end eye has brought trouble on a home or village. It is common for a Baga medicine man to be summoned for the purpose of charming tigers away and saving cuttle from their attacks. Each of the three great branches of Bagas is subdivided into seven clans, as follows.—

These are apparently a branch of the Kols of Chota Nagpore There is a large colony of them in Sambalpur, and a few in the district of Bilaspur, where they are mostly in service. The Dhangars of Berar are sheep farmers, and manufacturers of blankets. They seem to be a different people from the Dhangars of Northern India.

Section IX .- The Gadba Tribe.

A Kolarian tribe, inhabiting the country to the east of Bastar and Jeypore. The women wear a peculiar dress. "A cloth three feet by six made from the fibre of the bark of the Karing tree, with horizontal bands of red, yellow, and blue, each about three inches in width, is secured round the waist by a girdle, then brought over the shoulder and fastened down in front of the upper part of the body. The girdle is composed of from forty to fifty separate cords of about eighteen or twenty inches in length, hashed together at the ends in front. A chaplet of the large white seeds of the Lusa grass strung together is fastened round the hair, as are also sometimes strings of white beads. Large carrings of three coils, of common hrass wire, certainly three or four inches in diameter, are suspended to the upper cartilage of the ear, and hang down to the shoulder; and another earning, resembling a brass button with a stalk to it, is worn in the lobe of the ear" (a). The Gadbas are given to intoxication.

Section X .- The Kanwar Tribe.

The Kanwars are a large and influential tribe chiefily settled in Chattisgarh, numbering upwards of seventy-two thousand persons. All the landowners in the north belong to this tribe. From their wealth and respectability they affect the importance and dignity of Rajpoots, and have become split up into more than a hundred gotras, some of which, such as the Dala, Dhangar, Tilasi or Tawar, and the Sandil or Sarwaya, have adopted the sacred thread. Members of the same gotras, like Rajpoots, do not intermarry. The pernicious custom prevalent among Hindus of the higher castes, of the marriage of mere children, is spreading among the gotras anxious to imitate Rajpoots; but unsophisticated Kanwars only marry when of mature age. They also eat flesh and drink spirits; but the stricter Kanwars abstain from such impare luxuries. Most bury their dead, but the Hinduized Kanwars burn. Altogether these Kanwars are a simple, primitive people, found chiefly in the northern and eastern bills of Chattisgarh, alarmingly superstitious, and marvellously obedient "(b).

A Kanwar is at the head of the state of Kenda, in the Bilaspur district; and another is chief of Korba, in the same district. The Kanwars of Raepore have probably come from the north From documents said to exist at Ratanpur there is reason to helieve that they conquered the north east tract of the Bilaspur dis trict from the Bhûyas There can be httle or no doubt that the chief counsellors and most trusty followers of the Huhu Bansı princes were Kunwars . It was to Kanwar princes that they entrusted the hill fortresses of Bilaspui, on their descent into the plans while the assistance rendered by the Kanwars in the conquest of the south of Raepore and Bastar was rewarded by large grants of lind which are still held by their de cendants in Dhamtari the Gundardehi Zumindar and the Talukdar of Bhutidehi being both descendants of these colo mists. They have always made a claim, though in a half hearted way to be considered as Rupoots connected with the Tunr tribe of the north west and their claim has certainly been recognized in one instance as the first Kannar chief of Narra received his states as a down with the daughter of the Rainoot chief of Khariar (a) The habits of the Kanwars are very similar to other tribes inhibiting the jungles They bury their dead and in their marriage ceremonies avoid Brahmans and obtain the assistance of the elders of their villages

Section AI -The Natur Tribe

A tribe inhibiting the densest forests of Riepore hving on gime and the products of the jungle. They abhor agricultural pursuits

An agricultural tribe at Pahar Sirgin in Sambilpur and also at Khalari on the east of Racpore, and in other districts. They are said to be a very industrious people.

Section XIII -The Agh iria Tribe

These are cultivators in Sumbalpur The chief of Phulihargarh in Sumbalpur is of this tribe. There are many Agharias in Râmpur and Râmpur in the same district. Next to the Koltas they are the most industrious and respect able agriculturists of Sambalpur.

II .- THE KHOND TRIBES.

I,-THE BETTIAN TRIBES. II,-THE BENNIAN TRIBES. III,-THE INDEPENDENT TRIBES,

I-THE GOND TRIBES.

Gondwana, the seat of the Gond tribes, by reason of its dense forests and extended hills, was for many ages an isolated tract in Central India, little affected by the ethnical and social changes which, through the instrumentality fixet Aryan or Hindu invaders, and afterwards, in a much later period, of Semitic of Mahomedan conquerors, were spreading over most other parts of India Although there is ground for the belief that the Gonds were an independent, self ruling people long before the time when their history commenced, yet not much is known respecting them until the sixteenth century. "It was then that San gram Sa, the forty-eighth Rajah of the Gond line of Garha, Mandla, issuing from the Mandla highlands, extended his dominion over fifty-two garks, or districts comprising the country now known as Bhopal, Saugor, and Damoh on the Vin dhyan plateau; Hoshungabad, Nursingpur, and Jubbulpur in the Narbuddh Valley, and Mandla and Seonce in the Sutpuri highlands' (a) The Gonds, how ever, date the commencement of their sovereignty over Garha Mandla from the year 358, but there is good reason for emplosing that from that period down to the sixteenth century it was of a very limited character. For two centuries the three principalities of Garha Mandla, Chândâ, and Deogarh, although under nominal subjection to the emperors of Della, were in a position of considerable power and importance. The Gond princes of Deogarh gained the good will and support of their suzerain by embracing the Mahomedan religion, but their descend ants continue pure Gonds. In the middle of the eighteenth century the three Gond States were absorbed by the Bhonsla Rujahs of Nagpore, and in 1781 their independence was finally destroyed by their becoming incorporated in the Widmatta principality of Saugor. The Gonds seem to have been a quiet and unoffending people, for during the two centuries of their acknowledged sway no instance is recorded of their having enlarged their territory, or of their having engaged in one aggressive war (b). Their country was in a state of great prosperity, 'then flocks and herds increased, and then treasures filled'. Respecting the Chânda dynasty, Myor Lucie Smith, formerly Deputy Commissioner of the district states, that "they left, if we forget the last few years, a well governed and contented kingdom, adorned with admirable works of engineering skill, and prosperous to a point which no after time has revelied.

At various periods there have been four Gond kingdoms in Gondwans namely those of Garha Mandla, Kherla, Deogarh and Chânda The district of Nagpore was in Deogarh, when that country was ruled by Bakht Buland

The Gonds form one fourth of the population of Betul, three fourths of Chind ward, one third of Seonec, and one half of Mindla, where the last Gond kings ruled The real wild Gond, who shuns the sight of strangers, is best found in the unexplored regions between Chittisguth and the Godavery, and from the Wyngungar nearly to the eastern Ghauts More than eighty six per cent of the entire body of Gonds in these Provinces consist of Gonds, who are distributed as follows—

The word 'Gond' or 'Gund,' in the opinion of Mr. Hislop, one of the best authorities on these races, is a form of Kond or Kund, the k and the g heing interchangeable; and the word itself is probably connected with Konda, the Telugu for mountain. Thus the term Gond would signify, etymologically, people of the hills, a designation very suitable to them.

The Gonds are characterized by a flatness of head, shortness of hose, with thickness at the base, and largeness of lip. Mr. Hislop describes them as "a little below the average height of Europeans, and in complexion darker than the generality of Hindus; bodies well proportioned, but features rather ugly-a roundish head, distended nostrils, wide mouth, thickish bp, straight black hair, and seanty heard and moustaches. Both hair and features are decidedly Mongolian," The Gonds ordinarily content themselves with one wife, but those in good eircumstances have several. The women are better looking than the men. In dress, says Captain Ward, in his Settlement Report of the Mandla district, they are "namally decent, though they wear only the dhoti and shoulder cloth of coarse country-made stuffs, white, with a coloured thread border. For ornaments they wear strings of red and white beads, earrings of brass wire in coil, and polished zinc bosses; sometimes nose-rings of the same, and anklets and armlets of copper and zine mixed, or of pewter and zine. Wild as these people are, scanty as is their dress, they are by no means above a certain amount of vanity. On festive occasions they wind long tresses of sheep's or goat's wool in their own hair, which is generally worn long and tied up in a bunch behind, somewhat in the style adopted by European ladies of the present day. They wear no other covering for their heads; but occasionally adorn their hair with small brass coins and glass beads. They are tattooed at an early age, some much more than others. Pardhans and Dholyas are the people who practise the art of tattooing; and some have quite a local reputation for their skill in the art. They usually work with needles, and rub in indigo and gunpowder or saltpetre " (a).

The same writer, speaking of the general character of the Gonds, says, that though "wild, uncivilized, and ignorant, the Gonds are among themselves hones, taithful, and tru-tworthy, courageons in some points, and truthful as regards faults they have committed (as a rule, they plead guilty when brought before the Courts). As a race, they are now well behaved, and very amenable, to authority, however turbulent they may have been in former days. They occasionally exercise their talents in cattle-lifting. The Gond in service is exceptionally Lithful and obedient to his employer, so much so, that he would not he state to commit any crime at his orders, and sooner than turn informer, would himself This description applies only to the really wild Gonds, who have not become contaminated by contact with spurious civilization, for the domesticated Gond is mean, cringing cowardly, and as great a har as any other low class of Indian Under favourable circumstances Gonds are strong and well proportioned, though slightly hult, very expert with the axe, and, though lazy do not make had servants They still like strong liquors, but Mr Hislop's remark, that 'their acts of worship invariably end in intoxication, is too sweeping at the present day '(a)

The dettes chiefly worshipped by the Gonds are Dûlâ Deo, Narain Deo Suraj Deo, Mâtê Devi (goddess of small pbx), Bara Deo, Ahair, Mâta Thâkur Deo, and Ghansvâm Deo Cholera receives divine homage as Mart, or Pestilence The Gonds have seven kinds of marriage. Their widows are always expected to remarry A younger brother has to marry his elder brother's widow A Gond wishing to settle his son seeks a wife for him among the daughters of his sister's family Men are generally hursed, though the hetter classes copy the Hindu custom, and hurn their dead Women are always buried The grave is situated due north and south, the feet lying to the north, and the head to the south with the face turned up The common hehef is, that at death the Gonds go to their deities, who are supposed to inhabit a region somewhere to the north They have no definite idea of the future, or of immortality The sons of Gonds inherit equally, unmarried daughters receive a share (b)

Gonds are found as far west as Nimar, yet very few in number In Raepore the Gonds are very numerous They are a down trodden race, few of them pos sessing villages except in the midst of the jungles, while those inhabiting the open country are almost entirely under the authority of the Hindu population

Although the Gond tribes are in reality numerous, yet the Gonds themselves divide their race into only twelve and a half tribes or branches. These are is follows -

		The Gond T	ribes as classified b	y t hemselves
1	Râj Gond	6	Dhoh	11	Kolam

The first four, with perhaps the Kolâms, are regarded as Gonds of the purest type (a).

Section I.—The Dhur Gonds.

These are the lowest of the race. Socially, they are even lower than the most humble of the Hindu tribes, but rank above the Mhârs and Dhers. They are an honest, straightforward, muscular people, but deficient in intelligence. In the Narbuddha Valley these Gonds are extensively employed in the cultivation of the soil. Having lost their independence they are mere drudges. On the hills, however, they occupy a nuch more important position than on the plains, and are often headmen of villages. They are so remarkably simple and honest, even the wildest of the tribes, that they will fulfil any agreement which they make, no matter the difficulties in the way and the personal distress which they may have to endure.

The Chattisgarh Gonds, who are mostly Dhurs, retain faint traces of serpent worship, to which, in all probability, their ancestors were greatly addicted. As they are fond of having Hindu priests and agents, many of them are fast learning Hindu usages and superstitions.

Section II .- The Raj Gond Tribe.

These are in the highest rank of Gonds; and the title is borne hy most of the noble and governing houses. Probably the Gond kings of former times were of this tribe. There are twenty-seven clans of Raj Gonds in Chanda, as follows:—

IV -Clans worshipping four minor deities

1	Kowa	4	Siram
2	Naitam	5	Sirnaliki
3	Sarátı	6	Talandı (a)

The worshippers of seven detices may intermarry with those who worship five and four, but the worshippers of six, five, or four deities, being regarded as one, may not intermarry

The Gonds of Mandla belong to two tribes, the Rh Gonds and Rawin Bansis. The former imitate closely the highest eastes of Hindus. They wear the sacred cord, and, like the Hindus, carry their passion for ceremonal purification sometimes to an absurd length. For example, Mr Hislop remarks that the wood for the fire on which their food is cooked, is sprinkled with witer hefore use. This desire to hecome ceremonially clean, in the Hindu sense, his had one good effect at the least, in leading their to abandon many of their filthy habits (b). Notwith standing their adherence to Hindu usages, they are obliged occasionally to visit their own detties, and even to put cow's flesh to their lips folded in cloth, to ward off evil from their houses.

The R4 Gonds are numerous in Nagpore They are scattered also ahout Bern, and in the forests south of the Wurdah, and north of the Narbuddha (c) There are some likewise in Hoshungabad, of whom Mr C A Elhott remarks, that 'a few are fine, manly fellows, and splendid shikarls (hunters), but they are mostly a stupid and half tamed lot '(d)

Section III - The Raghuwal Gond Tribe

An agricultural tribe of Chindwara

Section IV -The Dadave Gond Tribe

Like the Raghuwâls, they are an agricultural people, chiefly found in Chind man. The Râj Gonds, Raghuwal Gonds, and Dadave Gonds ent food together, but do not internivry.

Section V-The Katulya Gond Tribe

A tribe scattered about many places They closely mattate the customs of Hindus, and endeavour to intermarry with the better Hindu castes Some of them occasionally become Hindus

Section VI .- The Padal, Pathadi, Pardhan, or Desai Gond Tribe.

The Pardhans are the priests or religious counsellors of the Raj Gonds. They are the Bhats of Gonds of the upper ranks, "repeating their genealogies and the exploits of their ancestors, explaining their religious system, and assisting at festivals, on which occasions they play on two sorts of stringed instruments. named kingri and jantur. For their services they receive presents. The birth or death either of a cat or dog in their family defiles them : and from this nneleanness they cannot be free till they have shaved off their moustache, purchased new household vessels, and regaled their caste with a plentiful allowance of arrack, These have assumed the name of Raj Pardhans, to distinguish them from a subdivision of the same class, which is degraded to the rank of a half-caste, consisting of those who, in the vicinity of Nagpore, speak Mahrathi, play on wind instruments of brass, and spin cotton thread, like the outcaste Hindus" (a).

Section VII .- The Dholi Gond Tribe.

These are musical performers. Their name is derived from the dhol or drum which they beat. The Nagurchi or Chberkya Gonds are a division of the tribe, and are goatherds in the forests.

Section VIII.—The Ojhyal Gond Tribe.

Wandering bards and fowlers. "They sing from house to house the praises of their heroes, dancing with castanets in their hands, bells at their ankles, and long feathers of jungle hirds in their turbans. They sell live quails; the skins of a species of Buceros, named Dhanehidya, which are used for making eaps, and for hanging up in houses in order to secure wealth (dhan) and good luck; and the thigh bones of the same hird, which fastened around the waists of children, are deemed an infallible preservative against the assaults of devils, and other such calamities. Their wives tattoo the arms of Hindu women" (b). A sub-division of the tribe is called Mana Ojhyal, who pretend to great sanctity, and refuse to eat with other Gonds. Their women throw their long cloth over the right shoulder, while other Gond women throw it over the left.

Section XII - The Bhima Good Tribe

Section XIII - The Maria, or Madya Gond Tribe

The Marias are the most numerous tribe in Bistar, where they are also called Jhorra They are a very shy people, frequenting the densest jungles ' avoiding all contact with strangers, and flying to the hills on the least plarm They are said to be stronger, more agile, but less civilized than the Murias, Blattus, Parjas, and Pagaris. Those who pry tribute to the Rajuh of Bastur, do so in kind once a year. The officer of the Rajuh has mg heaten a drum nutside a village, hides himself, and then the villagers bring out their tribute to the appointed spot "a They are a timid, quiet, docide race, and although addicted tadrinking, are not quarrelsonic. Among themselves they are most cheerful and hight hearted always laughing and joking Seldom does a Maria village resound with quarrels or wringling among either sex, and in this respect they present a marked contrast to the inhabitants of more civilized tracts. In common with many other wild races they bear a singular character for trutbfulness and nonesty, and when once they get over the feeling of slipness, which is natural to them, they are exceedingly frink and communicative" (c) The clothing of both men and women is very scanty. The men asually wear no head dress, and keep their hair shaved except a top knot, and are fond of ornaments Young men have broad collars round their necks, worked with red and white beads. Men have a girdle of cownes or small shells round their loins and in it a kinfe is inserted. A hitchet is suspended from the shoulder and sometimes a bow and arrows Ihe string of the bow consists of a slice of bumboo carefully cut from the outer surface. The bow is very powerful, and is often bent by the application of the feet. An arrow discharged from a bow thus bent would, it is affirmed, almost pass through the body of a man or deer. The women are much disfigured by the tattooing of their face, arms, and thighs. They wear white beads set in large bunches round their necks, and also an iron ornament decorated with brass and iron rings; and are said by Mr. Hislop to wear only bunches of twigs fastened to a string round their waists. The Marias are very observant, and are quick in imitating others. They have broad faces and flattish noses; and are of the same stature as a middle-sized Hindu (a).

In the district of Chanda there are four tribes of Gonds, one of which is the Mâria, inhabiting the wild bills and forests beyond the Wyngunga. The men are constantly seen with a battle-axe in their hands. In the north, the tribe changes its name to Kohitûr. It is said to have a language distinct from Gondi. The tribe has twenty-four clans, as follows :-- and present offerings to them. During the marriage ceremony the young people are brought into a bower specially made for them where standing together water is poured inpon their heads from above. A dagger is placed in the bride groom's band, which he holds to the end of the ceremony, the garments of bride and bridegroom are tied together at the corners, a white mark is applied to the forchead of each, and water mixed with saffron and lime is carried round them three times and then thrown away.

Section XIV -The Mars Gond Trile

These are really the same tribe as the Marias that intermarry with them, jet practically the two tribes are distinct. The Maria are poorer and less civilized They do not shave their beads hie the Mirrs. In height they are about four feet four inches, and are muscular and well knut together. The dress of the women is even more scanty than that of the Maria women, and consists of a women is even more scanty than that of the Maria women, and consists of a tiny strip of cloth tied round the loins, or sometimes of only a small patch. Then hair is gathered up in a knot behind, and secured by a bamboo comb. Their skin is freely tattoocd, which process is performed on girls at ten years of age. The Maria are truthful and honest, and so exceedingly timed that the whole population of a village will flee on the approach of a stranger, and will be thrown into terror by the sight of a horse. They have no cattle of any kind, and a hatchet and an iron hoe are their only agricultural implements. These singular people live in a remote and imhospitable tract of country known. These singility people live in a feature and inhibition trace of centrify knowledges and the walls being composed of a strong high grass neatly put together, and afterwards daubed with mind' They cultivate the castor oil plant, tobacco, and losra The Maris are a nomadic race, remaining in one spot only for a short time (a) Both the Maris and the Marias are said to have been once addicted to the offering of human sacrifices. They are grossly superstitious, and are firm believers in necromancy and sorcery Every trouble and calamity is attributed to witcherift

Section XV -The Kolam Gond Tribe

The Kolams are rather ugly in appearance

The men werr 'silver or hrass chains round their ears, and a narrow bangle at their wrists'. The women tie up their hair in a knot behind, with red thread.

ancles are profusely decorated with heavy ornaments, while their thighs and legs behind are covered with tattoo marks. The bridegroom carries off his bride from the house of her parents by force. The Kolâms do not intermarry with the rest of the Gonds generally, although they are present at their marriages. They inhabit the Kandi Konda or Pindi hills, to the south of the Wurda, and the 'table land stretching east and north of Mânikad, and thence south to Dântanpalli, running parallel to the western bank of the Pranhita'(a).

Section XVI.—The Khatolwar Gond Tribe.

These have the same family names as the Råj Gonds. Their ambition is to bear the dignity of Rajpoots, and to be reckoned as Hindus. They wear the sacred thread in imitation of Hindus of high easts. Those in Chânda came originally from Raepore. They are found in the north-east of Chânda.

Section XVII.—The Rawan Banst Gond Tribe.

These, together with the Râj Gonds, inhabit the Mandla country. They are divided into the following clans:—

Clans of the Râwan Bansî Gonds.

and acts as black-muth to the whole community, no light task where the iron ore has to be dug from the hill, carned to the village forge, smelted, and then worked up to meet the wants of the people. The Agharias may be set down as the laziest and most drucken of all the Gond. (a) The Ghasias of Jagdalpur obtain their livelihood by keeping horses, making and mending hruss vessels, and by the cultivation of the soil

Section XVIII - The Nail or Dhurice Good Tribe

A few of these Gonds mhaint the country situated in the southern part of the Chanda district. Their uncestors were soldiers under the Gond princes, and consequently they prefer this kind of life to agriculture. They speak a peculiar dialect of Gondi. The Dhurwe Gonds are divided into seventeen class, which are classified according to the number of deities they worship. This is the second tribe of Gonds in Chanda.

Section XIX-The Guit Good Tribe

The chief peculiarity of the Gatti Gonds, who call themselves also Kontar Gonds, is that their villages have a separate house for hachelors, and sometimes another for unmarried women. Their chief festival is after the in gathering of the rice crop, when they perform certain curious ceremonles in the thickest part of the jungle, where the 'great god' is represented by a pice enclosed in a piece of bamboo and hung up on a tree (a).

Section XX .- The Moria Gond Tribe.

These inhabit the cultivated tracts in the neighbourhood of Jagdalpur, and from 'Nagtoka to the boundary of Jeypore, and from Sitapur to about thirty or forty miles north of the Indravati.' They have the character of being excellent cultivators. They wear little clothing, and do not usually cover the head. The Morias keep pigs in great numbers, and will eat the flesh of all animals, except that of the cow. They are more civilized than the Marias, and form the chief portion of the agricultural population of the northern and central portion of Bastar. Those in Jeypore, Kharand, and Patna, are less civilized than these, They wear their hair tied in a knot helind, their arrows depending from it by the harh. The Moria villages commonly contain families of other tribes. The men of this tribe are robust and intelligent, and are also honest and trustworthy. The ceremony preceding marriage among the Morias is curious. Two grains of rice are dropped into a vessel, and if they come together, the marriage is proceeded with, not otherwise. They worship three deities, Bhû Deo, god of the earth, Dongar Deo, god of the hills, and Bhimfen, or Bhima, the peculiar deity of the people of Bastar (b).

Section XXIX -The Halba or Halica Gond Tribe

These are scattered about the level and cultivated tracts of the State of Bastar, and though numerous in the north, are scarcely seen much below the Indravat They affect the strictness of Hindus, for they neither eat the flesh of cows nor of swine, and wear the sacred cord "They are said to gain their hving chiefly by distilling spirits, and worship a pantheon of glorified distillers, at the head of whom is Bahadur Kalal In the Raepore District, where they hold thirty seven flourishing villages, they have settled down as steady cultivators, and unlike other shoriginal tribes, are quite able to hold their own in the open country. Their religious observances are very simple. All that is necessary for a good Halba is, that he should sacrifice once in his life three goats and a pig, one to each of the national deities called Narayan Gosain, Burha Deo, Sati, and Ratna Of these the two former are male, and the two latter are female derties, and it is to Narayan Gosain that the pig is sacrificed"(c) Both Halwas and Badiyas have ahandoned the Gond language The former hury their dead, and worship their ancestors The chief of Palasgaon, in the Bhandara district, is of this tribe. The Halles of Raepore are a colony from Bastar, and are settled chiefly in the south west of Droog

The Halbas are divided into numerous clans, some of which are as follows -

These clans intermarry. Members of the same clan are regarded as belonging to the same family, and do not intermarry (a).

Section XXX.—The Kon Gond Tribe.

The Kois are found in some parts of Bastar. They form a considerable portion of the population of Jigarganda on the Chintalnar estate. Thy are numerous also in Kotapalli, a sub-division of Bastar, and in Lingagiri. Almost the whole population of Potikall, in Bastar, is of this tribe. There are colonies of the Kois in Lunkam, in the same district.

The Kois are called Koiwars in the Upper Godavery District; but they call themselves Koitors; and by the Telinga population they are termed Koidhoras. They are aboriginal inhabitants of the district. In those parts of the country where they come in contact with the Telinga population, they have adopted many of their manners and customs.

Section XXXI.-The Naikude Gond Tribe.

The Naikudes of all the Gond tribes have most conformed to Hinduism. They dress like Hindus, and will not cat beef; but will eat, however, the flesh of most other animals usually caten by the Gond. They are found in the jungles to the north and south of Pain Gunga, especially between Digaras and Umarkhed; about Aparawa Pet, as far as Nirmed, whence, 'intermingled with Hindus, they are scattered westward nearly to Bidar' (b). Brahmans assist at their marriages. Widows are not permitted to marry again. Both customs of burning and burying the dead are practised. The worship of ancestors is common among them. The poor are given to thieving, and are fond of strong drink.

Section XXXII.—The Bhatra Gond Tribe

The Bhatras are cultivators in the tract of country eastward of Bastar. Although an aboriginal tribe they wear the sacred cord like higher caste Hindus; lust unlike them, will cat nearly nll kinds of meat, except the flesh of the cow.

Section XXXIII .- The Agarmande Gond Tribe.

A small tribe in Berar.

Section XXXIV .- The Badiya Gond Tribe.

The Badiyas appear to be Gonds, yet they conform, to some extent, to Hindu usages, and speak the language of Hindus. They inhabit Chindwara, between

Section XXXV -The Bharia Gond Tribe

This tribe has been discovered by Mr. C. Scanlan in the Satpura Hills, who has no hesitation in placing it among the Gond family. It is somewhat suspicious however, that they neither eat nor drink nor intermarry with other Gond tribes. They refrum from enting the flesh of the cow and wild buffalo, but feast readily on deer, pigs, and other wild animals. The Bharrias usually burn their dead, yet bury such persons as have been killed by wild beasts, while they entirely abundon those killed by the tiger, and will not so much as touch their bodies. Their chief object of adoration is the Saj tree. The Bharia swears by the leaf of this tree which is broken and placed on his head. The tribe is divided into eighteen claus as follows.—

II-THE KHOND TRIBES

18 Amoria (a)

The bulk of the population of Kharonde or Khlahandi, in Sambalpur, consists of Khonds, who are too fickle and restless to remain in one spot more than a short time. They bear a high character for veracity and fidelity "Their word, it is said, may be wholly relied on , and they will never desert those to whom they have promised to adhere, or betray those they have engaged to protect" (b) The Kharonde Khondo belong to two tribes, Koehando and Pahdaro or Dongria. The former are the more evaluated. The two tribes do not intermarry. Khonds are found more or less in all the sub-divisions of the Sambalpur territory.

These Khonds are connected with the great family of the same name occupying the hill country of Orissa. The territory inhabited by them is about two hundred miles in length and one hundred and seventy in hreadth, and is unequally divided by the Mahanadi. They are found on the borders of the Chilka Lake, on the east, in the district of Bastar, and as far west as Berar.

The word Khond means mountaineer. The Khonds who dwell on the hills are called Maliah Koinga; and those of the plains Sassi-Koinga; while those found to the south of the Mahanadi are styled simply Koinga or Kwinga. Lieutenant Hill remarks, that, in their own language, they term themselves Knee. A single Khond is called Kwinga. By Uriyas they are termed Khonds; and by the Telingas, Kodibla, and often Kodhwanala, or bill people" (a).

The Khond tribes are divided into three principal branches :-

 The Bettiah Khonds—servile or subjugated tribes scattered about the plains below the Ghâts, in dense forests, and in small hamlets.

The Benniah Khonds—a free people retaining their lands, for which they pay rent to landowners, and which are situated in the woody skirts of the hills.

The wholly or virtually independent Khonds, occupying the central table land of the Gbats, at an elevation of about two thousand feet above the plains.

The members of the same tribes do not intermarry, but members of different tribes do. Boys of ten or twelve years of age are married to girls of fifteen or sixteen. The hridegroom's father purchases the bride with a certain number of cattle. The marriage rite is very simple. "The father of the hridegroom with his family and friends bears a quantity of rice and liquor in procession to the house of the parents of the girl, the priest dashes the bowl, and pours out a libation to the gods. Immediately the parents of the parties join hands, and declare that the contract is completed. An entertainment, to which both families contribute equally, is then prepared, of which all present partake. To the feast succeed dancing and song. When the night is far spent, the principals in the scene are raised by an uncle of each upon his shoulders, and borne through the dance. The burdens are suddenly exchanged, and the uncle of the youth disappears with the bride. The assembly divides into two parties. The friends of the bride endeavour to arrest those of the bridegroom to cover her flight; and men, women, and children, mingle in mock conflict, which is often carried to great lengths. Thus the semblance of forcible abduction attends the withdrawal of the bride among the Orissan Khonds, as it did among many nations of ancient Europe. and now does among the tribes of the Caucasus" (b).

The social organization among the Khonds is strictly patriarchal. All the sons, together with their wives and families, are in subordination to the father, and obey his authority. They possess no property of their own, and all that they may acquire by labour or in any other way, helongs to the fither. Their common mother prepares the food for all. A village consists of a number of families under the headship of an hereditary patriarch. A cluster of villages will have another head. Several clusters form a tribe, which is under the guidance of a petty cluer. And all the tribes in a given triet are grouped together, and are governed by a superior cluef, who is styled Khonro or Bisaye.

coverned by a supernor cluef, who is styled Khonro or Bisaye

Concerning the physical characteristics of the Khonds, Captain Macpherson siys, that they are "distinguished by hodily strength and symmetry. Their height is about the average standard of Hindias in the Peninsula. The muscles of the limbs and hody are clean and holdly developed. The skin is clear and glossy, its colour ranging from a light bamboo to a deep copper shade. The forehead is full and expanded. The check bones are high and rather prominent. The nose is seldom, though occasionally, arched and is generally broad at the point. The lips are full, but not thick. The mouth is rather large. The whole physiognomy is generally indicative of intelligence and determination blended with good humour. In their personal demeanour they exhibit the easy bearing of men who are unconscious of inferiority, and rarely employ expressions of merceourtesy. In salutation they raise the hand perpendicularly above the head. In meeting on the road, the younger says, 'I am on my way,, and the elder rephes, 'go on'" (a). The Khonds are possessed of great determination and courage. They respect the rights of one another, but, until taught by severe measures pad no heed to the rights of one another, but, until taught by severe measures pad no heed to the rights of one another, but, until taught by severe measures pad no heed to the rights of one another, but, until taught by severe measures pad no heed to the rights of other races. Hospitable to strangers, sensitive, and high spirited, they display a mixture of kindices and vindictiveness, often found among an independent and semi harbarous people. A Khond village consists of a group of houses boarded and thatched, constructed on a uniform pattern, and saturated on a well selected site—a knoll, a climp of trees, by a stream, or on the fringe of a a well selected site—a knoll, a climp of trees, by a stream, or on the fringe of a forest. They have their own rude arts, and manufacture their cloths, ploughs, bows, arrows, and personal ornaments, for which they exhibit great fondness

The Khonds worship the earth goddess, the 'god of hinits, the sun and moon, the 'god of arms,' the 'god of hinting,' the 'god of hirth,' the 'god of small pox,' the 'god of the hills,' the 'god of the forest,' the 'god of showers,' the 'god of fountains,' the 'god of rivers,' the 'god of tanks, the village god, and a multitude of inferior and local derties. But they have no images and no temples

The principal divinity is the earth goddess, to whom formerly human sacrifices or Meriahs, were offered, in order that being propitiated she might cause the soil to hecome fertile. These sacrifices were of a two-fold character, that is, were either public or private. As this subject, however, has been so frequently and fully written upon, it is unnecessary to dilate upon it here (a). The thanks of the civilized world are due to General Campbell, and to the noble men associated with him, who by their wisdom, firmness, patience, and unceasing kindness, induced these wild races to abandon the horrid and inhuman rite.

2. Dhanwar.

The Dhanwars have many branches, and display many of the characteristics of Kanwars.

3. Goté.

An aboriginal tribe of the Upper Godavery District. They are a wild people, little affected by the civilizing influences in their neighbourhood, and are said to be 'timid, inoffensive, and tolerably truthful.' "Their restless habits, however, do not admit of their settling down as good agriculturists, and, generally speaking, they move from one spot to another once in every three or four years, but on the banks of the Sabari, and in the neighbourhood of Saroneha and Dumagudem, there are numbers of them who have settled down, and have accumulated some wealth in flocks, in herds, and in money" (a) Like most aboriginal tribes the Gotés are fond of strong drink

Lajar.

These are found on the fringes of the Satpura hills They are chiefly hewers of wood.

5. Nehāl.

Menial servants to the Gonds of Berar. In Khandesh they were formerly a very wild people, hiving as savages. In the Khandesh records they are regarded as helonging to the Bheel tribes. Nehla families are settled among the jungles and hills of Hoshungahad.

6. Rajjar.

An ahoriginal trihe cultivating patches of ground in the jungles and on the hills of Hoshungahad.

7. Hatlar.

The Hatkars of Berar profess to be Bargi Dhângars, and therefore to be connected with the Dhângars. But they are a tribe distinct in themselves. "The general idea," says Captain FitzGerald, Assistant Commissioner of Berar, "is, that originally there were twelve tribes of Bargi Dhângars who came down from Hindustan, and that from them the country about Hingoli was called Bar Hatti, which the Hatkars say is a corruption of the words Bâralı Hatkar, or country of twelve Hatkars" (a). The Hatkars are divided into three clans, as follows:—

The Hatlar Clans.

Poli.

2. Gurdi. 3. Muski.

These three clans are found in Berar, Hingoli, and the neighbourhood. The Hatkars are described as an 'obstinate and quarrelsome' people. They bury the male dead, if they have not died of a wound received in the class or hattle. The body is placed in the grave sitting cross-legged, with a small piece of gold placed in its mouth. The hodies of those Hatkars who die from wounds received in hattle or in the chase, are burnt, their feet heing placed towards the east. The Hatkars eat all kinds of meat, except that of cows and pigs. The hair of their head is never cut. These people uncertain to 'be fine,' able-bodied men, 'naving a most wonderful resemblance to one another, which may be accounted for by the constant and exclusive intermarriage of their three great families. They are most independent in bearing, pretentious in character, and are the stuff of which good soldiery is made. They inhabit, speaking generally, the hills on the northern bank of the Paingunga. Their villages are placed like a line of outposts along our frontier with the Hyderabad Territory "(b).

8 Koor

The Knurs are usually regarded as aborganes, although claiming to have been originally connected with the Tuar tribe of Rajpoots in the North Western Provinces "Their claim," says Mr Hewitt, "has certainly been recognized in one instance, as the first Kaur chief of Nurra received his estate as a dowry with the daughter of the Rajpoot chief of Khurnar" (a) Nevertheless, their customs are not like those of Rajpoots, but like the aborganal tribes of jungles. They worship Doolar Deo and Boorha Deo, Gond detties, and, as a class, avoid intercourse with Brahmurs. Their marriage ceremonies are performed in the presence of the elders of a village, and they bury their dead. The Kaurs are good and industrious cultivitors.

9 Tâgarâ

A destitute tribe eating everything procurable, even snakes and other reptiles. They subsist chiefly on the produce of their fields, and on the chase. They inhabit the country south of Jagdalpur, from Suppur to Sunkam. The Tagaras are probably an offshoot from the Gonds.

10 Parjá

A tribe occupying the same country as the Tagárás, and exhibiting the same characteristics—They too, in all likelihood, are related to the Gonds

11 Similar

These are found in most parts of Bastar. They are dealers in spirits and are distillers from the Eastern Gh'its. They are also settled in Samhalpur

12 Arakh

A tribe in Berar

13 Jhurra

A somewhat numerous tribe of cultivators and hunters They are seen for the most put, shout Naranpur and Pratappur, and in the direction of Kanker in Bastar In manners, customs and appearance, they resemble the Murias The Jhurias are probably of Gond descent

14 Kanjar

A small community living in hamlets in the jungles between Nagpore and the Wurda They make course courses and ropes, rear donkeys, carry grun, repair hand-mills, and generally have no fixed calling or pursuit. Formerly, they were incorrigible cattle stealers and highway robbers (a).

(a) Report of the Settlement of Raspore, by Mr Hewitt BCS p 3.

15. Bandarwâ.

A wild and savage tribe in the remote tracts of Chattisgarh, some of them, of both sexes, it is rumoured, wandering about in a state of nature, and living mostly in trees. The word bandarrat is derived from bandar, a monkey, and indicates, it is said, the monkey habits of these strange people. They are represented as cannibals by Sir R. Jenkins, in his report on the Nagpore territories, as armed with bows and arrows, and as being ignorant of the comforts of hut or house, satisfied with the shelter which the jungle affords (b).

16. Morar.

The Morars are found in Bastar.

17. Nath.

Wandering jugglers and rope-dancers.

18. Panga.

A tribe inhabiting the Salehtekree Hills.

19. Gandla.

A tribe inhabiting the Salehtekree Hills.

20. Koli.

These are scattered about the Nimar and Berar districts. Some are weavers and village police in Hoshungabad. A few are found elsewhere. In Berar the Kolis are said to be divided into two tribes, which have been reclaimed from a wild life at different periods. They are agriculturists in that province.

21. Kamár.

The Kamars are found in the remote jungles of Raepore, where they lead a wild life, subsisting on game, and on the products of the forest. They have a great aversion to agriculture.

22. Khander.

An outcast tribe in Chattisgarh.

(a) Sir R Jenkins' Report on Nagpore, p. 42.
 (b) Ibid, p. 34.

23 Gassîah

An outcast tribe in Chattisgarh They are found in all the sub divisions of Sambalpur

24 Kondra

Basket makers working in bamboo, in various parts of Sambalpur especially in the Bargarh Tahsil

25 Kummar

Basket makers and fowlers in Kharonde

26 Ragar

A low caste people in Baitool

27 Holia

A low caste people in Bhandara

28 Kailan

Notorious, skilful, and determined thieves in Wardha, Berar, and elsewhere They make mats, repair hand mills, let out donkeys, and in general pursue miscellaneous kinds of occupation. Their women are famed as fortune tellers

29 The Ramos: Tribe

A predatory tribe in Berar

30 The Kûlatnî

"A peculiar sect of females, walkers on stilts, wrestlers and sword cutters
They generally hve with bad characters Their numbers are recruited by the pur chase, or theft, of illegitimate children (a)

31 Godrá

Labourers in Purara, of the Bhandara district, and in other places

32 Dher

Lahourers in Nagpore, Bhandâra, Sambalpur, and other districts. They are a large tribe in these provinces, numbering upwards of half a million of persons. In Nagpore they are weavers and cotton spinners, and together with the Koshita, are the most important non agricultural class in the country. The Dhers are found in Nimâr and Berar. The Dhers are the most numerous class of people in Bhandara or the Wyngunga, where they perform many forms of menial service, and occupy a corner of every town and village. They are the day-labourers of the country. See an account of this tribe in Part III—The Tribes and Castes of the Bombay Presidency, Chapter VII.

Respecting the origin of the Dhers in the Central Provinces, the compiler of the Census Report of 1872, makes the following observation:—"Their present position and distribution over the province would suggest the idea of their having immigrated in great numbers from Western India at some remote period, and having been of consideration in olden days; but newer settlers found them more intimate in their relations with the people of the country than seemed good to the stricter rules of caste; and the new settlers being the more powerful, and carrying with them the prestige of more recent connexion with their homes in the west, looked down on the Dhers, and reduced them gradually to the state in which we find them"(a). I fear this observation, though interesting and somewhat ingenious, would not he horne out by facts. The Dhers in the west are as low in social position as those of Nagpore. Moreover, there is not, so far as I am aware, any safe record of the Dhers of former times in these provinces heing of higher rank or of greater account than those of the present day.

33. Mar.

These are very numerous in Berar, Chânda, Hoshungabad, and other parts of the country. Their occupation is, in the main, two-fold. They are cetton-spinners and weavers of coarse cloth; and are also village watchmen. Some suppose the Mhārs and Dhers to be the same tribe. There are a few in Sambalbur.

34. Dom.

A very low caste, whose occupation and duties are similar to those of the Dhers. They seem to be identical with the Doms of Northern India. They are numerous in Kharonde.

35. Khatik.

An outcast race in Nagpore, Chânda, Berar, Juhbulpore, Saugor, and elscwhere, similar to the Khatiks of Northern India.

36. Bahelia.

These rear pigs, manufacture castor oil, collect lac, and pursue various other occupations.

37 Mâdgî

A low tribe in Chânda and Berar

38 Bhangî or Khâkrob

Scavengers in Chânda They are called Khâkrob in Berar

39 Mehtar

Sweepers A useful class scattered about all the districts

40 Mâng

A low tribe in Nagpore, Nimâr, Berar, Hoshungabad, and other districts They make brooms, sell grass and wood, and pursue various occupations of a similar nature. They are also employed as musicinas and singers at the great festivals of other tribes.

41 Sunkarını år

An outcast race in the Upper Godavery District

42 Bhamta

These manufacture ropes, mats, baskets, and the like They reside in the Wyngunga, about Nagpore, and in many other places

43 Mannepuwâr

An outcast race of the Upper Godavery District

44 Nelkânıwâr

A low tribe of weavers of course cotton cloth in the Upper Godavery District

45 Muge

Fishermen and quail catchers

46 Dâsrt

In Berar

47 Arm

A few families in Berar

48 Oja or Ojha

Singers and beggars in Chânda, Raepore, Hoshungabad, and elsewhere They are said to be the Bhâts, or genealogists, of the Kurkû tribe

49. Keot.

A considerable tribe of more than forty thousand individuals, scattered over the Sambalpur province, of whom more than one-half are in the Bargarh and Sambalpur tabsils, and ten thousand more are in the Sonpur State.

50. Patra.

An insignificant community of only ninety persons in some parts of Sambalpur.

51. Dhanukh.

A low caste, settled chiefly in Narsingpore and Raipore. They probably correspond to the Dhanukhs of Northern India.

52. Majhia.

About two thousand Majhias are settled in Sambalpur, of whom more than half are in the tahsil of that name.

53. Teor.

The Teors number less than a thousand persons. They are settled in Sambalpur, especially in the Bargarh and Sambalpur tahsils.

54. Zarra.

These are also in Sambalpur, and are about twice as numerous as the foregoing. Nearly one-half of them are in the Bamra State,

SECTION III -THE PARSEES

SECTION I-THE SECT OF THE MAN BHAU DEVOTEES

This is a numerous fraternity, of rigid morals, and clothed in black garments The gloominess of their dress gives them a singular, not to say extraordi nary, appearance in a land of excessive light, in which all classes of native society are accustomed to array themselves in robes of whiteness, or of divers bright and gorgeous colours Even ascetics, of whom there are numberless sects. commonly assume a yellowish dress, which is both striking and picturesque. The Man Bhrus, however, men and women-for although unmarried, the two sexes are admitted into this community-wear garments of a sombre blackness

The sect is not confined to any one caste, but admits persons of all Hindu castes, especially Sudras, but Brahmans, even Mahomedans, on changing their religion, are occasionally received likewise. Children also, girls as well as hoys, are frequently set apart in early hie, by a kind of consecration, to this religious order, are handed over to the monks, and are brought up in their maths, or monasteries. The morality of this people is professedly of a high character They wander about subsisting on charity, are very abstenuous, refrain from eating tlesh and fish, and from drinking spirits, are virtuous and pure, abstain from marriage, and are gentle and moftensive The women have their separate apart ments, distinct from the men, yet in the same hallding Should any impropriety arise between the sexes, as sometimes happens, the guilty parties are removed, and compelled to reside by themselves in villages with other Hindus, and while not altogether excommunicated, are for the future regarded as secular members, and are no longer designated by the term Man Bhau, but bear the name of Gharbar and Grist, the former word meaning 'confusion,' and representing the disorder they have brought into the society; the latter designating the fact that they have handoned a life of celibacy, and have entered into family relations. Such persons are permitted to accumulate property in money and lands. Although no longer wearing the black dress, they continue to observe the peculiar customs of the sect, Indeed, all who belong to it constitute a family, and speak of one another as brothers and sisters.

The Man Bhaus are exclusively devoted to the worship of Krishna; pay no reverence whatever to any other Hindu deity; and abhor tutelary gods and painted stones. Their sacred book is the Bhagawad Gita; and they reject all other sacred books. It is remarkable, that the most licentious deity of the Hindus, whose worship is almost everywhere associated with gross sensuality, should be the object of veneration by a people of strictly moral principles. There are two forms of Krishnaism however, - one sensuous, the other meditative. The sensuous they choose to ignore; and to the latter direct all their attention. Those portions of the Bhagawad in which the divine goodness, benevolence, and purity are pourtrayed, they delight to ponder. The mantra, or sacred words, which are secretly communicated to those who wish to be initiated into this religion, are taken from the Gita. No one under the age of fifteen or sixteen years, though it may be living within the walls of the monastery and wearing the black dress, is admitted to its full communion, or is considered discreet enough to have the mantra whispered into his ear. At death the body of a Man Bhan is buried. lying on his left side with the face to the east, and the head to the north. Unlike other Hindus, these people do not regard a dead body as impure, or as imparting any ceremonial uncleanness to those who touch it; nor do they perform the sraddh, that is, they do not present offerings to, and worship, their ancestors.

Some of the customs of this sect are very curious. They are careful not to take animal or insect life; and even the water drunk is first strained through a cloth, and whatever remains upon it is delicately removed lest a minute insect should be injured in the operation. In asking alms a Min Bhau will take nothing himself except from the hand of the giver, will pluck no fruit, no ear of cora, and no vegetable, and will not put his hand into a basket for a handful of grain, or remove anything that is there.

These singular people are scattered over a considerable extent of country, chiefly to the east of the Berars, in the direction of the Saidrai Hills, on the banks of the Kishni, and to the north of Malwa A small number have been traced even in the Punjah They acknowledge two spiritual heads, Kaviswarbi and Upadhya, the former designating seven claus, the latter eight, as follows—

•	_	Same Same	course, one mitter f	agat, as lonor
2	Kar	nswarta Clans	]	padhya Clans
	1	Daryaput kar	1	Paturkar
	2	Balapurkar	2	Dharashukar
	3	Idunashı	3	Waiyadeshkar
	4	Ambil 2	4	Sul enykar
	5.	Khumnaikar	5	Birkar
	-		6	Bhojnai
	6	Kapataikar	7	Seorukar
	7	Panjibî	8	Akulnaurkar

The sect has two principal maths, or monasteries, at Roodhpore, shout twenty inventions called Rasy gaunkar, Balapūrkar, Daugnpūrkar, Birkar, Tahkar, and Panch Rahut This town, therefore, is reguladed as sacred by the friterinty. They have also not a few monasteries in other places. Each has its Mahant or religious superior, who is held in great, and almost divine, reverence, and exercises immense author ity over the community of which he is the head. At his death his successor is elected by the monks of the monastery (a)

A little additional information respecting this sect is furnished by Mr. Lyall in his Gazetteei of Berar. He says "they are divided into two classes, the Ghar hâris, or lay members, and the Baragis, who are both monks and nums. Both classes are received into the community by a guru, who recites a mantra as he clips off a lock of their hur. The Ghurhars do not shave their hur any more than other Hindius, but the Bairagis, monks and nums, are clean shaven. The Bairagis generally wear clothes stained with layal, or lampblack, a colour prohibited to the Gharbars.

"They are to be found in a great many villages, and their laws and customs are peculiar. They are prohibited from drinking the water of, (and consequently are not supposed to live in,) a village in which there is a temple dedicated to any goddess. They are prohibited from drinking for three days of the water of the village where a man has been murdered or possoned, or killed by falling down a well. If a man dies a natural death, they may not drink till they have visited a graveyard. They will neither cut nor break down a tree, large or small. They are believed to deal largely in charms and philters, especially if they want to get anything out of a person.

"They are naturally hated by the Brahmans, betwixt whom and themselves there is a long standing bitter feud. Their free thinking consists mainly in their batted of the Brahmanical yoke. They observe the laws of caste so far that, although they will allow any Hindu to become a member of their lay community, they will not admit any Mhâr, or person of equal or inferior caste, among their devotees" (a).

SECTION 11.-THE MAHOMEDAN TRIBES.

1. The Pinjaras.

Cotton dealers and cleaners in Bhandara.

2. The Kanchars.

Manufacturers of glass ornaments.

3. The Bohras.

A sect from Gujerat, engaged in trade at Burhanpur, in the district of Nimur, and in Berar.

4. The Sheikhs.

There are upwards of seventeen thousand Sbeikhs in the Nagpore district, and in the province of that name there are thirty-four thousand; and twenty-three in Jubbulpore, while in all the provinces of this Administration there are upwards of eighty thousand.

5. The Saiyads.

These are much less numerous than the Sheikhs, and number about fifteen thousand five hundred individuals, who are scattered among all the districts.

S. The Moghals

These are a little more than half the number of the Saiyads, and like them are scattered in all directions.

The Pathans.

The Pathans form a considerable community of fifty-four thousand persons, more than one-half of whom are in the Nagpore and Jubhulpore Divisions. A few are found in all the sub-divisions of Sambalpur.

Eventually they mostly returned to their native villages in Hoshungaball and other districts. They are an irreligious people, knowing little or nothing of the faith of Islam, and, at the same time, not practising the creed of their forefathers. They cultivate lands in the jungles and on the hills.

SECTION III -- THE PARSEES

These intelligent, enterprising, and most useful merchants and traders, to the number of seventy-four, have taken up their residence in some of the principal cities and towns of the Central Provinces, where they pursue their calling to the benefit of the people generally, as well as of themselves.

BOMBAY PRESIDENCY.

THE TRIBES AND CASTES OF THE BOMBAY PRESIDENCY

In presenting an account of the distribution of tribes and castes over a large tract of country like the Bombay Presidency, it is necessary to pay proper respect to the distinctions of race pertuning to its several localities. Were the same classes of people found everywhere, the narrative would have a continuous char acter, and would demand only a complete description of these classes, the same statement respecting them being applicable to their condition in all places when it is ascertained that, while a few prominent tribes are scattered over every district of the country, there are fundamental differences in many of them, so that certain provinces have certain tribes peculiar to them it is impossible under such circumstances to give an analysis of the class of one province under the supposition that it will be suitable to all the rest. It will be truer and more satisfactory to consider separately the various districts represented, so far as they manifest great distinctions in the races inhabiting them. This process will be much more laborious than the other, and will, at the same time, lack the pleasant feature in all disquisitions of this nature of homogeneity and uniformity great differences in these races, however, should be carefully exhibited, and no good can result by a forced attempt at uniting together tribes which the habits of many generations have kept asunder I have, therefore, given a separate account of those provinces and districts of the Presidency which display marked distinctions in their tribes and castes, and, in addition, have devoted three several chapters to the Bheels of Khandesh, to the Koli tribes, to two tribes of the Satpura Hills, and to many wandering and predatory tribes, which have promoted the literary interest, though not the reputation and honour, of this great division of India

Clamed by brahmans. Divure and doubtful brahmanical castes.

In the year 1826 the Governor of Bombay issued orders that the representatives of all the Hindoo castes in Poons and its neighbourhood should be assembled. in order to give information respecting the castes with which they were connected. Accordingly, large numbers of natives of every section of the community were gathered together, and were interrogated by European officials respecting the divisions, sub-divisions, and peculiar customs of their several tribes. No similar opportunity for learning the condition of Hindoo castes has ever occurred in any other part of India, though, considering the interest which, when the matter was explained to them, the native inhabitants of Poona took in the subject, it is strange that a similar experiment has not been tried by the Governors and Lieutenant-Governors in the other Presidencies. The amount of information gained on this occasion was considerable, especially relating to Hindoo law regarding the castes and the customs prevalent among them. Yet in respect of the castes themselves it was meagre. I shall furnish an outline of the results thus ohtained concerning the castes of Bombay, which are, doubtless, in much the same position now as they were fifty years ago; and shall supplement the knowledge thus acquired by that which I have derived from other sources, especially from the excellent and elaborate papers of Mr. W. F. Sinclair, B. C. S., inserted in the "Indian Antiquary" in the year 1874, from the late Rev. Dr. Wilson's "Indian

Caste, and from Mr Hearn's Statistical Report of the Colaha Agency It will he seen, however, that other works have been consulted on this important subject I have, moreover, arranged the castes according to the classes to which they properly belong, so far as the information at my disposal would allow

1 The Deshasth Brahmans properly belong to the tract of country lying above the Sahya Ghauts, but they are also found in many other parts of India They are said to be of darker complexion than the Konkanasth Brahmans, which is probably owing to intermarriages between themselves and the other three great

Hindu castes of lower rank than the Brahmanical, namely, Kshatriya, Vaisya, and Sudra, a custom allowed in the earlier ages of Brahmanism. Most of the Deshasth Brahmans pursue secular occupations, and make no pretence to the learning for which some other tribes are famous.

The Deshasth Brahmans, says Mr. W. F. Sinclair, "inhabit the table land above the Ghauts,—that is, the des, or open country. They are said to be divided into three branches:—I, Rigwedi, or Deshasth Proper; 2, Yajurvedi; 3, Karhâde. They are intelligent and industrious. The first and third branches are darker and smaller in stature than the Konkanasths" (a).

2. The Konkanasth or Chitpawan (pure-hearted) Brahmans inhabit Konkan, from the Vaitarani river in the north to the Suhrabmanya river in the south, and from the sea to the Sahya Range. Tall and handsome, with a keen eye and large, expressive nose, of singularly fair complexion, learned, shrewd, intellectual, and high-spirited, they are, perhaps, the most distinguished of the entire Brahmanical race. Under the Mahratta rulers they displayed great administrative genius. They still are fond of secular employment, and are noted for the talent they exhibit. In their villages in Konkan many are farmers, and bear the appellation of Khot. These Brahmans are supposed to have originally come by sea to Konkan from North-Western India (b).

The Konkanasth or Chitpawan Brahmans are inhabitants of Konkan. "Physically and mentally," says Mr. Sinclair, "they are very high in the scale of humanity; often tall and well formed, light in colour, and sometimes greef-eyed. Their women are considered beautiful among natives, and some families are accused of making the marriage of their daughters a source of revenue. They are as a body remarkable for ability and industry in public affairs, and ever since the foundation of the Mahratta empire, have enjoyed a great share of the Government of the country. When the power of their caste-fellows, the Peshwas, became supreme, this share grew to be a monopoly; and to this day they hold, perhaps, three-fifths of all now hereditary appointments under Government, for which educated natives are 'eligible'" (c). The notorious Nana of Bithoor was a Konkanasth Brahman.

The Karhâda Brahmans are so called from Karhâd, a town to the south of Sattara, near the junction of the Krishna and Koyana rivers, from which place they extend as far north as the Vedavati river — Formerly, it was a custom of the tribe to secrifice annually a young Brahman to the Shakti deities, which horrid custom was observed as late as the commencement of the present century. But no instance has occulred since 1818 when the British took charge of the Pesh was territories. The Arthâdas are in intelligent people of the same mental characteristics as the Konkanasths. The celebrated Mahrathi poet, Moropaut was a karthâda.

- 4 The hand Brahmans are chiefly found in holapore and in other tracts of the Mahratta country where they frequently go by the name of Pratham Shakhi meaning the first (surviving) shakhi (or branch) of the white layur each. The Badavas (or cudgelists), who strive to preserve order at the Pandhar pur temple are of this caste. (a)
- 5 The Wadhyanduns are scattered over the land from Nasik to Kolapur and the southern Mahritta country. They perform their devotions commonly at midday. The Gara or spiritual teacher, of the Maharijah of Kolapur, and also the titular Pratimidu of Sattari are of this caste.
- 6 The Padhya Brahmans are few in number, and are said to live on the highlands above Konkan as well as to some extent, in the country below. They are reputed to have belonged originally to the Karhadas. The Pal highs have been fimily priests to the ignorant tribes on the Ghauts. Hence their name.
- 7 The Devarukhas are inhabitants chiefly of the Ratnagari districts especially Devarukha and Rhispit, but some are also found in Alabagh and the Northern Konkan. They seem to be poor, and consequently insignificant and are much devoted to agriculture.
- 8 The Palashas are regarded as an inferior rice by Brahmans of high rank. They have spring from the village of Palasha and its neighbourhood and are numerous in Bombry, where they perform the duties of family priests physicians, and astrologers.
- 9 The Kurvinta Brahmans are found in Northern and Southern Konkan, and are prosperous cultivators. Moreover, some of them have a reputation for learning
- 10 The Tirgula Brahmans are regarded as renegades by the c Brahmans who adhere stringently to the rules of their order. One great cause of officies, has been that, as cultivators they have been in the habit of destroying insects which injure their crops. They inhabit the banks of the krishna at Indipore, Salapore, and other places, and are especially engaged in the cultivation of the piper-betel. The imputation of ignorance cast upon them may arise from the prejudice against them referred to above.

- 11. The Javalas are said, perhaps groundlessly, to have been created Brahmans by the Mahratta rulers; and consequently other Brahmans will not cat or internarry with them. They are numerous in Konkan.
- 12. The Abhira Brahmans are priests to Ahiras or Abhiras, who are herdsmen. They are reputed to have come from Gujerat and Rejputana to Khandesh, where they have settled.
- 13. The Såvashås are descendants of excommunicated Brahmans "defiled by partaking of a funeral shråddha given by a Brahman who had been living with a Châmbhārin" (a). They are a numerous hody in the southern Mahratta country, where they are prosperous traders.
- 14. The Kâstas are not recognized as Brahmans by the Mahratta Brahmans, and are of lower rank than the Sâvashâs. They are found at Poona and elsewhere, and are famous for their skill in imprompts poetry.
- 15. The Kunda Golakas are descendants of illegitimate Brahmans, yet maintain their order pure from contact with Brahmans of similar descent. They are engaged in secular pursuits as 'money-changers,' 'shop-keepers,' 'astrologers,' and 'cultivators.'
- 16. The Rânda Golakas are descendants of Brahman widows, and therefore are of illegitimate birth like the preceding, who, however, affect to he of higher rank. The occupation of the two castes is the same.
- 17. The Brahmana Jais are impure Brahmans, descended from Brahman fathers, and Vaisya, Sudra, or low caste mothers. It is singular that they are recognized as Brahmans at all.
- The Sapâras cultivate the palm, and rank as inferior Brahmans. They belong to the village of Sapâra and its neighbourhood, north of Bassein.
- 19. The Khistis are chiefly found at Ahmednuggur and Paithan, and are said to he a colony of Gujerat Khedavala Brahmans. They are money-lenders, and in habits are similar to the Deshasths.
- 20. The Huseinis are partly Brahmans and partly Mahomedans, conforming to the customs of both, and being recognized by neither, intermarry only in their own community. They are settled near Ahmednuggur.
- The Kalankis or spotted Brahmans are, as represented by their name, impure Brahmans. The caste is numerous in the districts of Nagpore.

22 . The Shennyi or Sårıswata Brihmins are settled on the coast of Konkin in Goa, and at Bombay

The greater portion of the above account respecting these eastes, I have condensed from Dr Wilson's description of them. He says hittle about the remaining twelve. The first nine he regards as offshoots of the Shenavis, and states, that they do not hold social intercourse with one another. The Maitraya niyas are on the bank-sof the Godavery, especially at Nasik. The Jhâdes are at Nagpore, and are called Brahmans of the forest. The Varadis are in Berar, and are divided into two branches, which do not intermarry.

It is manifest, however, that many of these various classes of Brahmans have nothing whatever to do with Mahratta Brahmans, are totally distinct from them, and would be repudiated by them. In all probability Dr. Wilson's intention was merely to furnish a list of Brahmanical tribes distributed about the Bombay Presidency. Yet it is unfortunate that in the excellent work of this distinguish ed oriental scholar they should all be lumped together under the general heading of Mahrashtra Brahmans.

The Yapuredis, in the first list of Mahratta Brahmans are for the most part traders. They are "darker the nose is much less apt to be aquiline and the whole physiognomy is inferior to that of the handsome, Konkanasths and acute looking Rayacis and Karhades. (a)

SECOND -THE GURJAR TRIBES OF BRAIMANS

For a list of the eighty four tribes of the e Prahmans see the first volume of this work, and for a description of each tribe and of many more their ider is referred to the chapters in the present work on the Castes and Tribes of Gujurni

THIRD -THE TAILANGA BRAHMANS

These are numerous in the Carnatic, where they are mostly engaged in trib. See the first volume of this work

FOLTH -THE KANOUJIVA BRAHMANS

The Kanoupy as are from North Western Index. Many are sepoys and police men, and some are railway servants. Being away from their own country, they are ready to hold positions which are declined by other Brahmans. They are an intelligent, good looking and enterprising people.

A detailed account of these Brahmans is given in the first volume

(a) The Ind an int part I chroner 18 4 Notes on Cas es in the Dikhan by Mr W F S relair Born C &

FIITH.-THE SARASWAT BRAHMANS.

These also are from North-Western India (a). They do not bear a good character for loyalty and good conduct. Both the Săraswat and Kanoujiya Brahmans, true to the had custom of their race in Northernf India, seclude their women in zenanas, or compel them to he veiled when appearing in public, a custom not practised by other Brahmans in Bombay (b).

SIXTH -THE GAUR BRAHMANS

(See the first volume,)

A few families are in Poona, which originally came from Cashmere.

SEVENTH .- THE NAGAR BRAHMANS.

The Nagars are from Gujerat, and are engaged in trade. They are a people of little influence. For an account of them, see the chapter on the Gujerat Brahmans.

EIGHTH-THE SHENVI BRAHMANS

A low Brahmanical tribe, from whom most other Brahmans hold themselves aloof. Yet they are intelligent, cultivate English literature and western science, and are free from many prejudices which heset Brahmans of higher social rank.

NINTH-THE KONKANI BRAHMANS

These are not to be confounded with the Konkanasth Brahmans of the Maharashtra family. "They belong," says Dr. Wilson, "to the Panch Gaur division of the Brahmans, and are Saraswatis of kin to the Shenavis. Goa was originally their principal seat. With them are associated the Huhu Brahmans, holders of some of the lands near Kârwâr" (c). The language spoken by these Konkanis seems to be a mixture of Mahrathi, Canarese, and Tulava. They are chiefly shopkeepers, writers, and cultivators.

TENTR.-THE HUBU BRAHMANS.

The Hubu Brahmans, as stated above, seem to be connected with the Konkani trihe. They are in possession of lands which formerly helonged to Jain landlords. Their profession is two-fold. The almanacs used by the people in their neighbourhood are prepared by them. They are also priests of temples. Buchanan speaks of them as miserably ignorant.

BRAHMAN MATHS OR MONASTERIFS

There are four great Maths Sansthins, or Monasteries, of Brahman Swams or leaders, which are called by their names —

1 Sankarachari

These wear a longitudinal mark on the forchead — Their jurisdiction extends especially over the Smart, Arhati, or Shivabhakt Brahmans — that is worshippers of Shiva

2 Madicachari

These are supreme among the Karhatt or Vishnuhlakt Brahmans that is worshippers of Vishnu They wear a perpendicular mark on the foreheal

3 Ramanujaci arı

The disciples of the eclebrated Hindoo leader, Râmanui

4 Vallabl achar

Supreme among the Gujerati Brahmans

SPIRITUAL AND SECULAR OFFICES AMONG THE BRAHMAN TRIBES

1 Watund ir

The Watind it has authority to inquire into alleged infractions of cretical scipline, and custom, to presente penance, to levy fines and to ordan exclusion from caste. When unfit for the office, an hereditary successor is sometimes put aside in favor of a person more competent.

2 I you hare Jose

This Brahman exercises the priestly office in his own and other erites in which his authority has not been superseded by the priests already appointed as for example, by the priests of the Lingayat, Parbhū and Sonar easts. His dittes are—

- 1 Have the wor-hip of extran divinities
- n Kavi, Sraddh, and Pakh h performance of ceremonies in 1 nour of necestors
  - m Wanamantram attendance at festivals on invitation
  - is Sanskir attendance at certain family ceremonies especially marriage
- Panchang keeping the calendar, and making a trological cilculation of birth, fortune, lucky days and hours

11 Dia dharm alm en m

In Poona the Vyovhâri Josî officiates at funerals. In that city and district the waten of Dharmadhikâri is farmed out by the Vyovhâri Josî, he heing professor of both watens, which are alienable on general rules.

3. Bhat.

Performs duties similar to those of a Vyovhâri Josì. The term is strictly applicable to readers of the Vedas; but it is also used to designate the following persons:

- i. Bhikshuk, or mendicant Brahman.
- ii. Puranik, reciter of the Purans.
- iii. Vaidyas, physicians. Used as a prefix.
- iv. Panchangi, professional astrologer. As prefix,
  - v. Pujārī, officiating priest in temples. As prefix.

vi. Gosain. As prefix.

If the Bhat be an hereditary watandar, he receives fees or dues from certain villages.

4. Dharm-upâdhyak.

A title applied to receivers of dues or fees payable on account of dharm, or the performance of duties prescribed by religion or caste. Brahmans with this title usually live at a Kshetra, or place of pilgrimage, and are watandars. These are termed Tirth-upadhyak. They also perform in villages the duties of Vyovhāri Josi or Dharmadhikāri.

5. Upâdhyaha.

A general term for a family teacher and reader. One who teaches to read in a house is designated an Adhyapak. Such Brahmans may be salaried teachers to their patrons' children, or may subsist by begging, or may be watandars. When also performing the religious ceremonies of the family, and the worship of the household god, they bear the appellation of Kulgurh.

6. Kshetr-upâdhya and Tirth-upâdhya.

These are spiritual guides to visitors at places of pilgrimage, all ceremonies on account of pilgrims heing performed by them. Individuals of a particular caste, gotra, or name, coming as pilgrims, attach themselves to a Tirtli-upādhya. Their names are kept in a hook as a memorial, which may be transferred by gift or sale to another Upādhya, who thereby acquires the claims which his predecessor formerly possessed. Occasionally, several relations divide the leaves of the book, taking their chance of visitors. Women, becoming entitled to such teatans, or rights, by inheritance, may adopt a child to receive them, or may appoint an agent to attend to them

7 Agnikotri

This title is properly applied to one who possesses the materials for the hom, or burnt sacrifice All Brahmans are directed to perform this ceremony, nevertheless, it is usual to employ an Agrahotri, who lives on alms, and receives fees and presents

8 Acharya

A term denoting superiority applied to the priests of Vishiu, and Bhats. To the south of the Krishna it is used to distinguish Brahmans performing religious duties from those who follow worldly occupations.

CERTAIN CUSTOMARY DUES CLAIMED BY BRAHMANS

- Jaladhikár —Payable on the pilgrim's performing worship and ablution in a sacred stream, and giving alms to Brahmans
  - 2 Seladhikar Payable at the pilgrim's place of residence
  - 3 Gramadhikar Payable in the pilgrim's village
  - 4 Kulalıkan Dues on calculating nativities of children
  - 5 Brahmasanam Dues on performing the hom sacrifice at marriages
  - 6 Dand -Fines from Brahmans for infractions of caste rules
- 7 Purchit—Dues on pronouncing prayers during the puya, or worship, of the stream
- 9 Someatti—The right to all money, pearls, and other jewels, left by women on making the circuit of the peopul tree, on occurron of the new moon falling on a Monday
  - 10 Arktvivaha Dues on second marriages
- 11 Ashwateudyûpan —Dues for feeding Brahmans, and distributing dakh shina, or presents, it the time of throwing the wood of the peopli tree
  - 12 Prasadvasta Feeding of Brahmuns at the time of building a new temple
  - 13 Waptudyapan Dues on digging a well
- 14 Dues on building a Dharmsåla, or rest house for pilgrims and other travellers
- 15 Dues on erecting a Samadhi, or tomh, on the decease of a Sanyası or devotec

IMPURE AND DOUBTFUL BRAHMANICAL CASTES.

Kást.

This tribe assumes the Brahmanical rank and name, but is not recognized by Brahmans as in any way connected with them. Indeed, they are rendered eeremonially impure by the touch of a Kast. The members of this caste do not perform Brahmanical rites in households, and their own customs are similar to those practised by Sudras. Under the Peshwa's government they received no public money as dathshina, or presents, as Brahmans commonly received. In any case, their Brahmanical claims are suspicious and unproven.

Kunda-Golak.

These are descended from a Brahman father and mother, yet not by lawful wedlock. They are generally regarded as above Sudras in rank; but by Brahmans they are placed in the same grade as Sudras.

While the Brahmanical origin of this caste is in most places the prevailing opinion, yet in Poona it is uncertain from what source it has sprung. The Golaks are astrologers, sharrfaffs, or money-changers, and the like.

· Randa-Golak.

A caste whose ancestors were Brahmans, but unmarried, the mother being a widow, and therefore, although living with her lusband, yet not permitted by Brahmanical law and usage to marry him. The caste is held to he inferior to the Kûnda-Golaks.

THE CASTES OF BOMBAY AND ITS NEIGHBOURHOOD -(Continued)

RAJPOOTS KAYASTHS OR PARBHUS MERCHANTS BANKERS AND TRADETS SMALL TRADERS GOLDSMITHS SHIPPERSHITES AND JEWELLETS AGRICULTURAL TRIES AND CASTES HERDSMIEN SHEPHERDS REARERS OF CAMELS LTC PRIESTS BARDS DEVOTEDS AND RELICIOUS MENDICANTS

RAJPOOTS OR KSHATRIYAS

Mostly soldiers, a few are traders. They have come, for the most part, from Northern India. The Rappoots of Bombay are said to perform the karm of Sudras (a). They are of various tribes in the Dekhan, but many are of the Kachluv'ha family, and are supposed to have gone there with Jai Singb, of Jey pore, when he fought with Sivaji, in the seventeenth century

KAYASTUS OR PARBHUS

These are Kayasths They are found in the Law Courts as pleaders, writers, and in other capacities, and profess to be strict Hindoos, to practise religious ceremomes punctiliously, and to abstain from meat, although they bear the character of being found not only of flesh, but also of ardent spirits. It is certain that some have aspired to the priesthood, an office everywhere carefully retained by the Brahmans, and so to whisper the sacred formula, perform sacrificial rites, and to officiate at the hom, or burnt offering

They are called Kayasths in Bengal, the North-Western Provinces, and the Punjab, but Parbhû in the Dekhan The caste has three divisions, as follows —

- 1 Kayasth, or Parbbû Proper
- 2 Upa Kayastb, descended from a Parbhû father and a Parbhû mother, hemr a widow
- 3 Parbhå, descended from a twm brother and sister of the Kshatriya caste
- (a) For a description of the Rappoot tribes of Northern Iadia see Tribes and Castes of India Vol. I Part II Chapters I to XIII pp 117—213.

The second and third branches are much lower in rank than the first. The third ranks even below a Sudra. The Parhhûs Proper wear the sacred cord and the tuft of hair on the crown of the head.

In Poona there are the Chandrastni Parhhûs, who claim descent from a posthumous son of Chandrastat Rajah, and thence the right of performing the Kshatriya karm, or ceremonics of Yajan, Udyan, and Dân. Many, in consequence, practise among themselves the Vedukt karm, or ceremonies enjoined by the Vedas, like Brahmans. Some, however, eat fish, like the Kayasths of Northern India.

Besides these there are two other sub-castes of their tribe, namely :-

- 1. Patant Parhhu: found in Bomhay, Surat, and Cheool.
- Douni Parbha: found in Goa.

The Patani Parhhūs of Bombay are so called from their residence in Puttun. They practise the three karms, or religious ceremonies, of the Kshatriyas through claim of descent from the Solar Race. The Brahmans of Bombay, like those of Northern India, repudiate the claim of the Parbhus to have sprung from Kahatriyas, and rank them among Sudras, and even sometimes helow them (a).

MERCHANTS, BANKERS, AND TRADERS

Maricart and Gujerati Want.

There are numerous traders, merchants, and bankers in Poona, Bomhay, and elsewhere, in the Bomhay Presidency, who are designated as Marwari and Gujerati Wants, according to whether they have come from Marwar and Gujerat. They are properly Vaisyas, and in religion are mostly either Jains or worshippers of Vishnu. Many of the latter follow the chservances of Vallabhachari. The customs of the Vaishnavas are similar to those practised by Brahmans. Wants are strongly opposed to the destruction of life. "The men are usually gross in the face, and the women are featureless and clumsy' (b).

They are of different habits. The Güzars congregate in the same place in considerable numbers, while the Marwaris are found in all the villages, a few here, and a few there. The latter have a bad character as exorbitant usurers, destitute of principle and honour. Many poor cultivators are entirely in their hands, and are so immersed in debt that they remain in a condition of bopelessness and ruin. As the Marwaris are good enough to pay their rent as it becomes due, they retain their grip upon their wretched victims The Wânis speak Gujerati or Marwari but are only imperfectly acquainted with Mahrathi

Bhatiyâ

Traders in cloth and cotton They come from Gujerat, and resemble the Wants in not destroying life, and in also being chiefly followers of Vallabhachari

Smde Vashnava

Traders in Cashmere cloths, Delhi embroidery, and fancy articles

Vaisya

A small caste of traders in the Dekhan

Oswal

A numerous caste of traders in Poona and elsewhere A well known tribe in Northern India

Danglt

Gosavi traders of Poona

Khatrı

These come from Gujerat and Rajputana, and are cotton and cloth merchants, salk cleaners, and dyers They also manufacture ptambar and other varieties of silk. In Poona they deal in gold and silver lace. The Khatris eat flesh They generally attach the title of Sah to their names

Agarwald

These are traders from Northern India flies are Vaisyas, and are chiefly worshippers of Vishnu (a) Their customs are like those of the Marwaris and Gujernts

Brahma kshati iya

Traders in cotton goods, money changers, and the like Some est animal food, others not They are chiefly residents in the Nizam's territory and the Carnatic

Mahomedan Borah

A prosperous trading class in Bombay and other parts of the Presidency They are engaged not only in increantile pursuits but also in agriculture. The (a) For a descript on of this extens we caste as it exists in Benares see. It has and Castes of India. Yol I Part II Chap V pp "85-"88.

Borahs are very numerous, and a large portion of the trade of Western India is in their bands. Sir George Campbell states, that Boorhanpore is, in his judgment, the city of the Borahs, to which they attach peculiar importance, and where they desire to lay their bones; and they are found in Ellichpfe, Nagpore, Indore, Nusserabad, and many other places in those directions. They are generally a fair, good-looking people, and deal largely in all sorts of "Europe and foreign goods" (a). These Mahomedan Borahs, in the opinion of the same writer, are a cross between immigrants from the Persian Gulf and 'Hindu Borahs.'

The Parsees.

It were much to he desired that some one sufficiently acquainted with the subject would write an essay on this enterprising and intelligent race, with especial reference to their ethnology, their families and clans, and their social distinctions and customs. Not a little has here written on their religion and history; but scareely anything is known of the inner life of this small, yet very important and influential, hretherhood. With a natural talent for husiness, with almost the common sense of Englishmen, shrewd, far-sighted, practical, and honest, quite equal in general civilization as a class to Hindoos as a class, and loyal to the hackbone, the Parsecs, so different in their habits and ways to all other Indian races, are a social phenomenon exciting the curious attention and the unfeigned admiration of all intelligent foreigners residing among them in India. Their personal appearance has been thus described by Sir George Campbell. "They are, I think, in feature, in the main, of a high Aryan type, somewhat intermixed perhaps after a very long residence in India, and somewhat hlunted and thickened as compared with the sharper and more chiselled northern faces; but still there is generally the prominence of feature which we might expect from an extraction originally Persian" (b). This description is incomplete, yet is true so far as it goes.

SMALE TRADERS.

Bharbhûnja.

Grain-roasters. They also prepare rice, and grain for confectionary.

Halwai.

Sweetmeat-makers and sellers. They are of two branches:

Hindustani Halwais.

- Dekhani Halwais.
- (a) Ethnology of Indus, by Mr. Jüstice Campbell. Journal of Asiatic Society, Vol. XXXVIII Part I, p. 490.
   (b) 15td, p. 140.

Kamii

Traders, manufacturers of necklaces of the sacred tulsi plant, and also of snuff In their customs they resemble Sudras

Castes of Paun sûparı-sellers

These are three in number -1

2 Trigul Sálmal

The Irigula are said to be descended from a Brahman whose children were brought up as Brahmans by wives taken from lower castes, contrary to Brahmanical rules They call themselves Brahmans , but the latter do not eat or intermarry with them

3 Tamboli * . . .

This is a common designation of pawn sellers in Northern India

Dealers in oil, which they extract and bring to market. They also manu facture and sell oil cake. There are many sub castes of this numerous tribe in Northern India In Bombay they are confined to four, as follows -

1 Telt Mahrathi

2 Jeshwar

ers, by means of bullocks and buffaloes

The Mahratha Telis express and sell vegetable oils, but are very particular in ot meddling with other oils In some parts they pursue the occupation of car

Castes of Spirit sellers

These are two in number -

1 kalal

Distillers and sellers of arrack and other spirits

Bhandârı

These manufacture the spirituous extracts known as Tari, Mari and Sindi They re ide in the Konkan.

The Bhandaris are one of the ancient tribes of the city of Bombay are much attached to the use of a long trumpet called Bhungali, which, says Mr Murphy, "ever since the dominion of the Portuguese, they have had the privilege of carrying, and blowing on certain state occasions." Fryer, in a letter written from Bombay between 1672 and 1681, describes the Bhandaris as forming a sort of honorary guard or heralds to the Governor. And even to this day they carry the union flag, and blow their immense trumpet before the High Sheriff, on the opening of the Quarter Sessions. "This singular privilege," he adds, "receives considerable illustration from a fact stated in the manuscript histories, that shortly before the Portuguese occupation of Bombay, a race of Bhungali, or trumpeter, chicfs seized upon and maintained the Government of Mahim, to which Bombay and Salsette were then subject. This, then, would appear to have been a dynasty of Bhandari princes, whose humble representatives are still to be seen blowing their trumpets, and carrying their standards, in the pageants of another royalty "(a).

Mr. Murphy's supposition of a 'dynasty of Bhandari princes' is a conclusion bardly warranted by his premises. From the evidence of an old manuscript, which be has consulted, it is, however, plain, that the Bhandaris expelled the Mahomedan ruler, Nagar Shab, from the Government of Salsette and Mahim, and were in turn subdued by a Mahomedan force.

The Bhandaris are Maluratta Sudras. They are robust and well formed, which physical condition is doubtless owing to the exercise of climbing trees, by which they obtain their livelihood. Although engaged in making toddy or arrack in many places, yet they seldom drink it themselves; and it is forbidden to be drunk by the members of the caste while in its unfermented state.

GOLDSMITHS, SILVERSMITHS, AND JEWELLERS

Sanar.

Caste of goldsmiths, silversmiths, and jewellers. Everywhere throughout India this caste occupies a high social position (b). In Benares it is placed among the Vaisyas. These Sonars profess to be descended from Kshatriyas. Among the Mahrattas of Poona, however, the Brahmans state that they are sprung from a Brahman father and Sudra mother, and are superior to Sudras in rank. The principal branches of this caste in Bombay appear to be the following:—

1. Kanari.

3. Konkanasth.

Panchal.

- Aurangahad.
- (a) Remarks on the history of some of the chiest races in Bombey, by R. X. Murphy, Esq. Transactions of the Rombay Geographical Society, Vol. 1, p. 131.
- (b) For a description of some of the devisions and class of the Sonar caste, see "Tribes and Castes of India," Vol. I, pp. 314, 315.

The Sonars wear the janes, or sacred thread, bothe and redress after going abroad, and clothe themselves with a silken girdle at religious ceremonies. They shave the heads of their widows, who are not permitted to remarry except in an indirect manner.

In Nuggar and Poon, the Kanari, Panchal, and Konkinasth Sonars perform the Veda Karm through Bhats of their own caste, whereby the prescriptive dues of the Vyovhari Jose have fallen off The Aurangabud Sonars are numerous in some parts of the Poona district

Jarahm

Traders in jewels These also are from Northern India

Nich Sonai

An inferior tribe of Sonars, with whom, in public estimation, they are not to be confounded. They are, like them, manufacturers of jewellery, but in social habits they differ from them greatly. All may eat flesh, even the flesh of impure namels of the forest. They have four sub divisions, namely.

1	Dewagan	1	3	Lar
2	Ahır		4	Vm

In addition to their special occupation as jewellers, they are manufacturers in various metals, traders, and money changers

Jhankan

Their occupation is to re-melt the dross of metals left by Sonars, and to extract and sell the produce

Tanksarlı

Corners They com metal which has been first melted by Sonars

AGRICULTURAL TRIBES AND CASTES

Kunbi

The agricultural caste It is known by this name, or by that of Kumbhi, or Kurmi, in most parts of India These people are pure Sudras They are the chief cultivators of the soil They are also employed in several other ways, in tride, or as sepoys, as servants, and so forth The Kuntis are divided into a great many sub-castes (a). In Bombay they are five in number, as follows :--

Mahrathi Kunhi.

Kunbi-vani.

5. Hindustani

Kanari Kamati.

4. Tailang Kamati.

i Lodhi Pardesi.
ii Chapparband.

They are very numerous in Colaba, and form nearly one-half of the population. Although industrious, they are without enterprise, and take no interest in the permanent improvement of their lands, or in banking them up so as to prevent the fresh water which accumulates in the rains from flowing to the sea. They have two principal divisions:-

1. Agris.

The Mahratta division has also two branches: -

I. Pure Mahrattas. 2. Akarmashis.

The Akarmashis are said to be descendants of slaves. The Agris are supposed to be an aboriginal race. They are the lowest of the Kunbi caste, and are cultivators of the salt lands, and sellers of spirits. Many of them have two or three wives apiece, whom they marry chiefly for the help they render in cultivating the land. The Mahrattas and Akarmashis hold no social intercourse with each other, and do not intermarry.

The words 'Kunbi' and 'Mahratta' are frequently used indiscriminately in the Poona district. The Kunbis of high families, as of the family of the Rajah of Sattara, and of other houses of pure Mahratta descent, do not allow their widows to remarry. Their children, born of slave girls, are termed Kam-asal and Sinda. Agriculturists in Sholapore are termed Mahrattas, and in Khandesh, Dekhanis, or people from the South.

The Kamatis of Poona are rice-cleaners, grinders of corn, cutters of sticks, and dealers in snuff.

The Lodhi Pardesis keep carriage-bullocks, sell sya leaves and grass for chappars or roofs of houses. The Chapparhunds are employed in tying up dry grass in bundles to serve for thatch.

Kachhi.

A tribe of cultivators, somewhat similar to the Kunbis. In Bombay they sell vegetables and fruits, and also flowers, especially for temple purposes. In (a) For a description of the Kunbis, or Kumbhis, in Northern India, see the "Tribes and Castes of India," Vol I, Part II, Chap. X, pp 323-5.

Northern India they are subdivided into many branches In Bombay they have two sub castes, namely —

Kachlu Bundeli

2 Kachhi Narwari

Bı ahmanıaı

These cultivate the land, and act as servants to the four cluef castes Some engage in trade others are general servants

Mal.

Gardeners Their gardens are irrigated by water drawn from wells. The Malis are divided into five sub-castes as follows —

1 Mali

3 Jim Mali

2 Pahar Mah

4 Halad Mala

5 Phul Mah

The Jin Malis and Halad Malis are found in the Balaghat country. The Phul Malis only ruse and sell flowers and fruits. The word phul is Hindustani for flower

The Kunhis eat with these castes

Bınyarı

Cultivitors of the soil, and manufacturers of course hempen cloth. The Hindustani Banjaris trade in grain with bullocks. For an interesting account of the Banjaris of the Dekhan, see Mr. Sinclair's Notes on Castes in the Dekhan in the Indian Antiquary for July 1874.

Lamban

A race inbabiting the south Mabritta country, resembling the Banjaris, fur ther north

HERDSMEN SHEPHERDS REARERS OF CAMELS &C

Gauli

These are similar to the Gwâlâ of Northern India in regard to their occupation, but rank lower in Bombay They are cowherds and sellers of milk, butter, and so forth They are divided into three sub-castes

1 Ahr Gault

2 Inokam Gauli (a)

3 Lingayat Gauli

(a) For a description of the Ahirs or Cowherds of Northern Ind a see the "Tr bes and Castes of Ind a Vol. I Part II Chap XI pp 333-337

Dhangar.

The shepherd and goatherd caste. Its members are said to resemble the Kunbis. There are several divisions of this caste:—

1. Asal Dhangar, or pure Dhangars.

2. Dhangar, Kâtikar.

These sell sheep's and goats' milk, butter, and wool. They also make and sell certain kinds of earthen vessels.

3. Dhangar Kartik.

Tend sheep and goats, and trade in them.

4. Segar Dhangar.

These are weavers of blankets, as well as shepherds.

Thilâri.

Wandering shepherds.

Sangar.

Sheep-shearers.

Rábart and Karhikar.

Traders in camels, and sellers of camel's milk. Some are also cultivators.

Mehumjogi, or Warhari.

Traders in buffaloes.

PRIESTS, BARDS, DEVOTEES, AND RELIGIOUS MENDICANTS.

Lingayat.

Descended from Vaisya ancestors by an illicit intercourse, and regarded as superior to Sudras. They wear the lingam, or emblem of Shiva, tied to the neck, and worship it. There are five divisions of the caste, as follows:—

Jangam.

3. Bangar-vânî,

Pancham-vânî.

Tilali-vânî.

5. Gulvi-vânî.

The Jangams are the priests of the tribe. They profess religious abstraction like Sanyâsis, worship Shiva, wear yellow-coloured clothes, and usually reside in maths, or monasteries, abstaining from marriage, and keeping the succession of superiors by electing a disciple to supply his place after death. The principal Jangams have authority to levy fines on those who bind the lingam irregularly, commit adultery, or in any other way break caste rules. They also receive fees on second marriages Some of them, Virilt swimis, in the Carnatic, often possess great property, and make pilgramages or carcuits round the country, receiving alms and exacting fines

In the Carntue re maths, or monastenes, for murried Jungums and their fundies. The Linguy ats of Poona are comparatively few in number, and follow, in many respects, the customs of other Hindu casts. It is not uncommon in the South for Linguyats and other castes, even those of low rank, on occasion of the success of a vow for the birth of a son or recovery from sickness, to devote their sons to serve in the monastery of the married Jangams. Persons of various castes also are sometimes adopted into it. All the property of its individual members belongs to the monastery.

The members of the other four branches of the Lingayat caste are chiefly traders and shopkeepers

Mendicant Castes

1 Wasudeo, or Dhakot

They wear a percock's feather in their cip. Their occupation is to go about the streets and villages early in the morning, striking the tal (two metal cups) and manners, and begging. The term Dhakot is applied to them in Northern India.

2 Sarwadi Josi 3 Dakoti Josi 4 Balsantoshi

These three castes study a Mahruth Shastra or treatise, on seasons and for tune telling, composed by Sahudeo Mat They are all prognosticators and beggars

- 5 Holar Perform on a musical instrument
- 6 Nanakshan
- 7 Kanphati Pretenders to magic They wear large pieces of wood in their ears

The last three castes are much lower than the others

Patol

These persons wander ahont the streets early in the morning shouting the name of a favorite deity, or climb trees and vociferate to the passers by, and beg

Gûraxa

The Gûrawas act the part of puy tris, or priests of the temples of Shiva and Maroti or Hanuman (the monley god) and receive the food brought as offerings for the idol. Such offerings are termed mixed. They also beat the drum and officiate in other ways at great festivals, when Brahmans are fed, and tales in honour of the god are recited. Some are sellers of the broad leaves used by Brahmans for placing their food upon at dinner. A few are cultivators and heads of villages.

The Gûrawas worship Shiva, and besmear their bodies with the ashes of burnt cowdung and the pigment called rudralshardhan.

Kavî, or Bhât Rajpoot and Bhât Kunbi.

The Kavi is properly a poet. The Bhât Rajpoot and Bhât Kunbis are Kavis, or poets, who recite the praises of Brahmans, Rajahs, and other persons at marriages, births, and other festivals; compose songs, and contrive amusement for their patrons. The Bhât Kunbis are found in the Mahratta country as attendants of Brahmans and Mahratta chiefs. Some are also cultivators.

Dhârî, or Jangar.

Their occupation is to sing early in the morning, and awaken the Rajah, the god, and the Brahmans. They also sing in the processions of chiefs, and act as bards.

Bairági.

They are not a separate caste, inasmuch as persons of many castes may join their fraternity, but are a rebigious order. They worship the Säligräm, a stone, and sing songs in bonom of Vishnu. They adorn their forcheads in various modes. Ramanand and Nimhaditi are said to have been the founders of the order. The Bairagis do not marry. Their disciples succeed to their teacher's station and property. The bead of a monastery of Bairagis dying, his successor is chosen by lis disciples, who place around the neck of the person elected the necklace of the deceased. Bairagis, on being excluded from the privileges of their sect, marry, and are called Bhat Bairagis. Women may also become Bairagis (a).

A 2

Mit Lonari, and Upar.

They drain salt-marshes, and manufacture salt. They are designated by the term 'Upar' in the Carnatic, where the caste is very numerous. The word 'Lonart' is derived from lon, salt.

Châni-Lonâri.

Manufacturers and sellers of chunam and charcoal.

SMITHS. WORKERS IN BRASS, COPPER, ZINC, IRON, AND TIN.

Kâşâr.

Workers in zinc, copper, brass, tin, and other metals. In Northern India the Kāsārs are called Kaseras. They pretend to be descended from Kshntriyas. In Bomhay they are held to be above Sudras, and in Northern India to be equal to Vasyas, if not superior to them. They worship the goddess Kāli. The Kāsār Bangars are an inferior caste to the Kāsārs.

Kâsâr Bangar.

A caste lower in position to the Kāsārs, yet pursuing the same occupation. They manufacture and sell armlets and various kinds of vessels. They worship the goddess Kāli.

Tambat.

These make and sell copper vessels. The caste seems to be somewhat similar to the Thathern caste of Northern India.

MASONS, CARPENTERS, BLACKSMITHS, &c.

Patarwat.

Stone-masons and artificers in stone. They are divided into the following branches:--

1. Sâlkar.

Pankar.

Sûtar.

Carpenters, house-builders, and artificers in wood. The caste has several branches, some of which are as follows:—

- 1. Mahrathi .
- Pardesi.

Badhî.

4. Mârwâri.

The Pardest brunch, or caste of the foreign Sûtar, comes, it is said, from Northern India Sûtars in villages make plonghs for the ryots, and perform all other carpenter's work. The Badhus are found in Poona

Silalghar, or Karamar

Sharpeners of weapons, turners, and the like They are also skilful m lacquering with the lathe There are two divisions of the caste, namely, those who reside in villages and towns, and those who wander about the country in the pursuit of their calling The two classes hold no social intercourse with each other (a)

Panchâl!

"A wandering easte of smiths, living in grass mat huts, and using as their chief fuel the roots of thorn bushes, which they batter out of the ground in a curious way with repeated strokes of the back of a very short handled axe peculiar to themselves. They are less common in the Dekhan than in Khandesh' (b)

Grsådi

A tribe pursuing the same occupation as the last, and formerly also leading a similar vagabond life, but are now, for the most part, settled in villages

Lohâr

Blacksmiths, and workers in iron, from lohd, iron. The caste is divided into many branches in Northern India. In Bombay they form four sub-castes, two of which are the following —

1 Lohâr Mahrathi 1 2 Lohâr Bûndeli

They make plough hares and all kinds of tools.

Barhar

In Northern India 'these are the carpenter caste, but in Bombay, although carpenters, they are pud by the job, and are not, like Sutars, kept on wages. They are, therefore, regarded as much inferior to Satars (c)

POTTERS, DIGGERS, QUARRYMEN, BRICKLAYERS.

Kumhár.

Brick and tile makers, potters. This caste has seven sub-divisions in Northern India, but only four in Bomhay. These are the following:—

- 1. Mahrathi.
- 2. Baldt (a).
- 3. Pardest.
- Sekwati Râjwati.

These divisions are distinct as castes. The Sckwati Rajwatis are held to he lower than the others in rank. They make earthen images of men and animals. They are also potters, plasterers, and builders.

Reldår.

Diggers. They dig wells, blast rocks, work on the roads, and the like.

Wararî.

Wandering navvies. They also sell heavy stones for huilding purposes. They eat rats and other vermin. The Warâris are of two handhes:—

- The Gar Warârîs, quarrymen.
- 2. The Mat-Wararis, diggers and excavators.

A people of very low caste.

Gaundi.

Bricklayers.

WEAVERS, THREAD-SPINNERS, DVERS, TAILORS, ROPE-MAKERS, TAPE-MAKERS, TASSEL-MAKERS.

Kushtl.

These are of two grades, as follows :-

1. Kushti Proper.

Manufacturers of silk and silken thread for necklaces, jewellery, the trappings of horses and palankeen furniture. They also manufacture undyed cloths, silks, dresses, and the like. Their occupations are also pursued by other castes.

2. Nich Kashti.

These are of inferior rank to the other caste. They weave silks from the shreds of prepared silks.

(a) For a fuller description of this caste, see "Tribes and Castes of India," Vol. I, Part III, Chap. IX, pp 313, 319.

Sârli Castes

Weavers of cloth They are divided into three separate castes -

1 The Sarlt Proper Weavers of white cloth

2 Mahrathi Sârli 3 Tailang Sârli

Weavers of all kinds of material

Khatri

In Colaba these are sulk weavers. They are a fur race and are very prone to polygamy, their excuse being that the women are needed in spinning sulk. These Khatris claim to be descended from certain inhightants of Delhi, and there fore of course to be related to the well known tribe of Khatris of North Western India and elsewhere, who are traders, and apparently of higher social rank than the sulk weavers of Colaba.

Simpl Castes

Tailors and dyers. These castes are six in number and are altogether separated from one another

- 1 Mahrathi Simpî Tailors
- 2 Tailang Simpi Tailors
- 3 Rangârî Sımpî Dyers
- 4 Simpî Kapra bikanârı Chiefiy sellers of cloth
  - 5 Asal, or Dekhan Simpi
- 6 Numdey Simpl

"In the wild native states of the Dangs, says Mr Sinclur, "and in the Mawks States, north of the Taptee, the Kārbhārts, or managers, are chiefly Simpts, generally unable to read and write, and only one degree more intelligent than the half savage Blieel chieftains whose affairs they misminage

Râaul

Manufacturers of param, strips of coarse cloth, and nam, type

Kanjâri

Cotton and hemp rope-makers The women of this caste are famous as story tellers

Nıralı

Some of this caste prepare indigo and other dark dyes, others weave dark coloured clothes

They are also dyers in indigo

The word niráli is derived from nil, indigo

Rangârî.

Dyers. In Khandeslı the Rangârîs are tanners.

Patwigar.

Silk fringe and tassel-makers.

SERVANTS AND PERSONAL ATTENDANTS.

The Nhavi Castes.

The Nhàvis are similar to the Nâûs or Hajâms of Northern India. They are barbers, and are divided into three separate castes, which are perfectly distinct from one another:—

1. Nhâvi Kasbekar,

These shave the hair from the head, to the middle. They rank with Sudras.

2. Nhåvi Gangatirkar.

At cclipses of the sun, the death of parents, the Agnihotra sacrifice, and on occasion of penances, they shave the head, the upper lip, and other parts of the body; and especially pursue this avocation at Nasik and other sacred spots.

3. Nìch Nhâvi.

These shave the hair off all parts of the body; and likewise perform some of the duties of surgeons in applying the tumri, or cupping-horn, and also leeches, to the body. The Nich Nhâyis are much lower in rank than the other castes.

The Nhavis of Khandesh cut off the hair of camels and buffaloes.

Achart.

These cook food for the Brahmans, and consequently are regarded as belonging to a very respectable caste. In reality they are Sudras.

Chairdhar.

Their proper vocation is to hold the umbrella over the Rajah, and to fetch water for the four castes; but now-a-days many castes carry the umbrella, and each one has its own water-carrier.

Rájgurů.

These people teach the sons of chiefs the use of weapons. The title is used also as an affix by certain of the Kunbis, though unconnected with this profession. The Rajguru caste is little known.

An jamai dant

Their occupation is that of shampoors They amoint the limbs with oil, and then rub them

Cholda

These stand at a great man's door, or accompany him on a journey, holding the chob, or staff of dignity, in their hands. They also manufacture chobs, which are generally silver or gold headed, and occasionally are entirely of these metals

Bhot Mahratht and Kahûr

Palankeen beavers, watermen, fishermen, sellers of wood, porters, and the like They form a large and respectable community in Northern India, where they are called Kahârs, and are divided into many sub-castes Mr Sinclair says that the Bhoi Kahârs are inferior in appearance, character, and social status to the Kolis "The rivers are divided among their tribes and finishes, by custom and courtesy, and although their rights are improtected by any law, they very seldom pouch upon each other's ranges, or infringe the rules of their caste as to size and species of nets, and the like" (a)

Unch Partt

Washermen of the clothes of high caste Hindoos Some of the caste are cultivators on the Guna river in Khandesh

Nich Post

Washermen of the clothes of lower caste Handoos

Kırar

Sellers of grass and other horse food They also exercise horses

(a) Indian Antiquary March 18"4 Mr Sinclairs Notes.

MUSICIANS, SINGERS, AND DANCERS.

Gondhalt.

These sing and dance at Gondhal festivals in the houses of Brahmans, Kunbis, and others. They also wander about the country as dancers, tumblers, and the like.

Kalâwant, Kawaltapi, and Ganihari.

Different castes of dancers and singers, devoted to these occupations. Hindoos of other castes and Mahomedans also engage in them. The Kalawant is divided into five branches, namely :-

- Pâtra.
- 2. Râmjant.

- Ghtkari.
   Ranganli.

These sub-castes eat together, intermarry, and follow the same profession of singing, dancing, and prostitution.

Utak, or Kathain.

Instructors of dancing-girls. The term 'Kathain' is derived from Northern India.

Dauri Gosani.

Sing songs in honour of Bhairo, and beg alms, beating the daur.

Min Jogt.

Their occupation is the same as the Dauri Gosawis.

Basphor

Musicians who attend dancing girls They heat the pakieây, and play on the sâringi They also prepare the skin for the pakieây, a kind of draim They come from Northern India, where they are regarded as a very low caste

Gmst

Performers on the tom tom, a kind of drum. They are numerous at Pandar pore. In Poona, Gûrawas and Nhavis chiefly follow the occupation

JUGGLERS TUMBLERS ROPE DANCERS SNAKE CHARMERS WRESTLERS

Kolûti

Tumhlers and rope dancers

Dombára

These pursue the same profession, and are chiefly found in the Carnatic

Khûmsûtr1

These perform evolutions on a rope attached to a wooden post

Kalasûtrt

Exhibit dancing dolls.

Chitogathi

These draw figures on paper, which they exhibit, accompanied by dancing

Bånåmathi

Conjurers

Most of these castes, especially their women, lead a heentious life

Garart

Snake exhibitors, tumblers, and beggars. Their huts are made of grasmats, and are constructed in 'a ridge and gable form'. They affirm that they came originally from Bengal

Bhaad and Bahurûpt

These wear disguises of persons male and female, of various ranks and castes, tell stories, and imitate the voices of animals for the amusement of their patrons

Jetha and Gopal

Wrestlers Many are scattered over the Curnatic The Mahrattas following this occupation are styled pahaluâns

n 2

Vaidva, or Hakim.

Snake-exhibitors. "They also profess a knowledge of simples; but their chief practice in that line is the compounding of intoxicating draughts," from opium and a bean found in the Konkan. They snare small game, poison fish, and eat almost everything (a).

BOATMEN, FISHERMEN, WATER-CARRIERS.

Koli.

Fishermen. They reside on the sca-coast between Rewdunda and Rewns. The boats which they use are "very sharp in the bows, with hollow keel, well-rounded in the stern, with masts sloping a little forward, and are considered to be among the swiftest sailing vessels known." The Kolts and their wives also carry grain from the interior to the coast. They wear the Marhatta dress, but do not intermarry with Marhattas. Most of the men wear a skull-cap in place of a turben.

In appearance the Kolts are somewhat short in stature, and are stout and muscular. They have a character for inveterate drunkenness.

This tribe has many divisions. Koli boatmen are called Nawari, and in the Carnatic, Ambigar. They are not only fishermen, but also boatmen and water-carriers, and pursue many other callings. See the Chapter on the Koli tribes.

HUNTERS, FOWLERS, SNARERS OF GAME.

Thakûr.

A mixed race of wild habits, found in Gujerat, Northern Konkan, and in the Māwals of Mid-Dekhan, descended, it is supposed, from Rajpoot and Kolt parents. "They are very dark, with hroad flat faces and wide mouths, and unmistakably non-Aryan. The likest people to them are the Gonds. They are great hunters, using often fire-arms, but chiefly a broad-bladed pike, nets, and snares" (b).

Phánsi-Pardhi.

Snarers of birds and wild animals. They also inveigle deer and other beasts; and gather honey. They live in seeluded places, and are irregular and wild in their habits. Many are thieves and poachers.

Komti.

A tribe allied to the Phansi-Pardhis,

EXTRACTERS OF CATECHU

Kathlart

An aboriginal race inhabiting the mountain fastnesses in Konkan and the Sahyadri Range. Their name is derived from Latha, or critechin, which they extract from the their papenica, or kliair tree. In Colaha, they are chiefly found on the declivation of the hills between Pocenar and Oomtai and Chowra, especially in the villages of Beedwagla and Koordoos.

The Kathkaris are a people of low foreheads, small statute, and very dark complexion, yet of well kint, muscular frames. The hair of the women is exceedingly curly. There are two principal branches of the tribe, namely—

I The Dhor Kathkari | II The Marhatta Kathkari

These are sub divided into various clans, such as-

1 Helum 3 Gosavî 2 Powar 4 Jadaya

5 Sındlu

The Kathkarts of Coluba are of the Mahratra branch, and chiefly of the Powar clan They believe in the existence of mahignant spirits, practise incantations, invoke curses, and perform strange superstitious rates, and are consequently much drended by Hindus Socially, there is much more equality between the sexes than is generally seen among the Hindu castes. They live in miserable huts, in the neighbourhood of small villages, and are regarded with abhorrence by the people generally. Fond of ment, they will cat the flesh of all animals, with the exception of the cow and the brown faced monkey. They are expert in snaring game, and also in the use of the bow and arrow. Formerly, they were notorious therees and highwaymen (a)

WORKERS IN LEATHER.

Chamâr

Workers and traders in leather The caste is very numerous in Northern India, where it numbers several milhons of people They are an indiastrons race, but from their connexion with leather are obnoxious to the pure Hindu castes. Their origin is obscure, but there is good reason for behaving that they have sprung from the intermingling of Hindus with aboriginal tribes. In Northern

(a) Statistical Report of the Colaba Agency, by W M. Hearn Selections from the Records of the Bombay Government No. VII New Series pp 0-3

India many are employed in agriculture (a). In Bombay, as elsewhere, the caste has seven sub-divisions, which differ, however, from those existing in other parts of the country.

- 1. Saltangar.
- 2. Mahrathi Chamâr.
- Pâradosh Pardesi.

- 4. Halâlbhak
  - Dabâli.
- 7. Chaur.

The Saltangars dye sheepskins. The Paradoshes are manufacturers of tents. The Halaibhakts dye skins red. They are lower in position than the Saltangars. The three last sub-castes are much below the rest in social rank. They eat the flesh of bullocks and of other animals, which have died a natural death. The higher Chamars do not associate with them. All these sub-castes, with the exception of the Paradoshes, are shoemakers. Some make hridles and other kinds of harness.

Other Leather Castes.

1. Dhor.

These make large leathern buckets for drawing water from wells, hand-buckets, and the like; and also dye leather.

2. Katâi.

Cobblers, tent-makers: eaters of carrion.

3. Daphgar.

Bottle manufacturers ; eaters of carrion.

SERVANTS AND VILLAGE WATCHMEN, BASKET-MAKERS, AND MILL-STONE-MAKERS.

Mang.

An outcast race resembling the Mahârs. They are professedly rope makers, but many keep pigs and donkeys, and pursue other avocations. They have the following sub-divisions:—

Bûndi.
 Uchli.

- 3. Gâc
- 1 Del6
- 5. . Kokalwar

(a) For a more extended account of the Chamars of Northern India, see the author's "Tribes and Castes of India," Vol. I, Part IV, Chap. IV, pp. 393-393.

All these are village servants, and are entitled to certain village dues in consequence. Of the two first divisions some are witchinen, others are thieves. The two list are of lower rank thin the rest

6 Nich Mang

Professional exercists

7 Garûrî Mang

Found in Potraj and Dankun, and also in Konkan and the Tulang country. The women of the Dankun also sing and beg (a)

Râmust and Bedar

Two tribes of village watchmen They were formerly notorious theres See the chapter on Wandering and Predatory Tribes of the Bombay Presidency

Burur, or Burud

Makers of eages haskets mats, and the like

Kaikâri

These also are basket makers. They likewise make measures for holding grain. The haikfirs have three hranches, which do not intermary. Of these the Gauranis are basket makers, and the Kunchekarls manufacture brushes used by weavers.

Gond, Blicel

Abornand races See the Chapters on the Gonds and Dheels

Chor Rakhshak

Thief eatchers

Kolhântı

A people of repulsive halits, who by profession are basket makers. The men are this ves and kidnappers of gurls, while the women are prostitutes

Bamtya and Uchaki

Manufacturers of millstones, but in reality theeves. They wander about singly or in small parties. Persons of this caste exercise their profession of placing, on the banks of rivers, in bizars, and so forth. The e designations are applied to theeves in general. The caste has two divisions. The Baoityas and most other predatory tribes are found chiefly about Ganesh Khind, Bhamburda, and Dapuli, west of Poona (a). "This bit of country, indeed, is the very head-quarters of the rascality of Western India."

(a) Summary of the Sawand Custom of Hundu Castes within the Dikhan Provinces subject to the Presidency of Dombay Ordered by the Governor in Council 25th July 1846.

SCAVENGERS, BUTCHERS, BURNERS OF THE DEAD, EXECUTIONERS, &c. Halálikor, Bhanol, Mehtar.

Scavengers and nightmen. Eaters of carrion. They also receive the clothes of dead persons. A very low caste. There are two divisions of these scavengers: the Halalkhors, who are Mahomedans; and the Bhangis, who are Hindus. But these terms, as well as that of Mehtar, are often applied to them indiscriminately.

Mhár

A numerous low caste people of coarse manners and coarser habits, who are held in abhorrence by the Hindus. They are a very useful class, however, of woodcutters and grasscutters, and removers of garhage and carrion from villages, in the outskirts of which they reside. Like the Kolis, the Mhârs are very fond of spirits, and drink it to great excess. Formerly, they were addicted to highway robbery, and to plundering in gangs, and were held in great terror by the government under native rule. But a strong check has heen given to this and other predatory trihes, through the stringent regulations of the British authorities, so that life and property are incomparably more secure throughout those districts which were at one time infested by them.

Some of its sub-divisions are as follows:--

1. Swapak.

Remove ilead animals from villages, and then eat them.

2. Antya-wasidong.

Perform services for the dead. They also sell the wood used for the funeral pyre.

Plahawastir-sâni.

Remove from villages dead horses and asses, and eat their flesh.

4. Kauwiadi.

Watch the ashes of funeral piles. They are also village watchmen, and keepers of village boundaries.

(a) Indian Antiquary, July, 1874. Mr. Sinclair's Notes.

5 Hastak

Bird catchers

6 Kayak

Clean the sewers of villages

7 Hashak

Remove the clothes and wood from funeral piles

8 Nich Mhar

Executioners

In the smaller villages one caste of Mhâts is generally found. In addition to occupations already referred to, they bury the dead bodies of low caste persons who have no friends to perform the office, receive dues at marriages, discharge duties under the orders of village head men, such as assembling of the ryots, carrying letters, collecting rents, and the hke

In the Dekhan, the MhAr is a personage of considerable importance, arising not from his caste, which is very low, but from the official position he occurries ' He is the watchman and guardian of the village, and the hving chronicle of its concerns His situation or his curiosity males him acquainted with everyhody's affurs, and his evidence is required in every dispute. Should two cultivators ountrel respecting the boundaries of their fields, the MhAr's evidence ought to decide it, and should a similar quarrel happen between two villages the Milars are always the cluef actors in it, and to their decision alone it is sometimes refer 1ed The Mhir is emphatically called the vallage eye (a) In large vallages his labours are three fold. He is first, the Weskur, or guardian of the village gates, who keeps an account of all persons entering or depirting therefrom and having locked the gates at night, takes the keys to the head man Secondly, the Mhar is the khule weskur, or guardian of the stackyard in time of harvest In addition, he performs many duties for the welfare and convenience of the labourers Thirdly, the Whar is the Gaow weskirr, looking after the comforts of travellers in the name of the village, giving them information respecting the places at which they may purchase food, supplying them with grass and wood, and so forth He attends on Government officials coming to the village, conveys mes-ages to tenant farmers, takes letters to their destination, and performs other kindred services Briefly, the Grow weskur has control over the other Whirs of a village, who should be ready to obey him in all matters in which the necessities of Government officials, of travellers, and of the village generally, require their assistance. The remuneration which the Mhārs receive is liberal. Besides a present from the Government, and a tithe of everything grown, they levy small imposts, or beg small contributions (which practically amounts to the same thing) of oil, sugar, spices, hread, and other things, from shopkeepers; so that the Mhārs are generally well provided for.

The Mhars eat the flesh of diseased cattle and horses. Few of them can read or write, one reason being that the children of good castes will not associate with them, or sit by their side, in the same school.

Kârtik.

Butchers. This is one of the lowest castes, on a par with the Mbars and other very low tribes. They are not permitted to live in villages inhabited by Hindus, but have their huts outside. Their touch is contaminating.

CHAPTER V.

THE TRIBES AND CASTES OF KATTYWAR

SECTION I -THE ANCIENT RACES

SECTION II -TRIBES OF LATER DATE

I —THE JHALA TRIBE 2—THE SOMEL TRIBE 3—THE JHARJA TRIBE 4—THE MANO MEDAN GOVERNING TRIBES. 5—THE BRAUMAN CASTES 6—THE DANYA OR BANYAN CASTES 7—THE DABRIA TRIBES 8—THE ARIE TRIBE

SECTION I -THE ANCIENT RACES

1 The Jetica Tribe

This tribe, together with the Charasama the Solankhi, and the Wala triberruled over Kathywar prior to the inroad of the Jhalas, Parmars, Kithees and other tribes, by which it is now chiefly held. The Jetwas had possession of the north of the province,—that is, Barda, Halar, and Machoo Kanta. The Jianejas have dispossessed them of Hakar and Machoo Kanta. In their own belief they are the aborginal inhabitants of the country. According to their traditions their ancestor huilt Sri Nuggur, ruins of which are still to be seen near Poorbunder They also erected Moorvee. After a time, the name of the tribe was changed to Kûmâr, and their capital city was Goomtee. The Jetwa chiefs occupied successively Rampoor, Chaya, and Poorhunder, which is at present the capital city of the tribe. The tribe boists to have been established in the country longer than the Charasama.

The Churasama Tribe

There are three primitive divisions of the tribe, which still hold possession of that portion of Kattywar which the tribe originally subdued These are —

1 Sarweya

2 Rayadas

Waja

The Sarweyas are found in Oond Sarweya, on the banks of the Shetroonjee; and also in Wallak.

The Raijadas clan are the descendants of Rao Mandalik, "the last Rajpoot sovereign of Joonaghar, whose throne and religion were both forced from him by Mahmud Shah Begra, about A. D. 1472." Only a small number of the clan remain, whose principal settlements are at Chorwar, on the coast.

The Waja clan inhabit the tract on the coast between the Geer Hills and the sea, where they find pasturage for their cattle.

There is another division of the tribe called Grassia, in Dholera, in the Gulf of Cambay, and other villages in the neighbourhood.

The origin of the Charasamas is unknown. The Mirati Sikandari states, that the trihe ruled over Sorath for the long period of nineteen hundred years. Captain Le G. Jacoh considers it probable that it is identical with the Chaura tribe, which exercised sovereignty over Anhalwara for many years, and probably "held their possessions in the peninsula in fier" from it. In proof of this conjecture he refers to an inscription in a temple of Bilawul, dated A. D. 1385, which contains an allusion to an assembly of Chaura chiefs in that neighbourhood. He includes the ingenious supposition, that as there are two Rajpoot trihes designated Chaura and Sama, or Soma, and as these words together make up the whole word Charasama, the trihe may have become hlended in one. Lieut.-Colonel Walker, formerly Resident at Baroda, states that the Charasama dynasty of Joonaghar was overturned by Saltan Mahomed Begra of Gujerat in 1476-1477. Among the Charasamas the eldest son, in the division of a patrimony, receives a portion one and a half time the value of the shares of the vounger brethren.

3. The Solankhi Tribe.

Gujerat is one of the original seats of the Solankhi tribe, which constitutes the third division of the Agnikulas, or Fire Races, and is divided into sixteen branches, the last, or Kalamor, being assigned to that extensive territory. They are believed to have succeeded the Chauras in Anhalwara in A. D. 931, according to Colonel Tod, and in 912, according to Captain Jacob; the Chauras having begun to rule over Anhalwara A. D. 746. There are twenty families of Solankhis still found in the Joonaghar districts in possession of tracts of pasture land.

4. The Wâlâ Tribe.

This race, although once numerous, is now nearly extinct. One family survives at Dhank, where the ancient capital of their country was formerly situated. Some persons imagine that the Balahhi dynasty sprang from this tribe; and it is not improhable that it did so There is ground for supposing that the Chaura tribe, on taking possession of Anhalwara in 746, as stated in the previous paragraph, wrested the country from the hands of the Walas Anhalwara is the modern Peetrin Puttun near Deesa

The classical name of hattywar is Surishtra, by which it was known to the ancient Greeks and which is its designation at the present day among the greater portion of its educated inhibituris. The Kathees, who have given it its modern appellation, are inferior in rink weilth, and numbers to the Rappool communities of the province. The ancient rices by which Kattywar was once governed have yielded to other tribes. Some of the principal are as follows—

SECTION II -TRIBES OF LATER DATE

1 The Jhala Tribe

These occupy the tract of country known as Jhâlwur, to the south of Vachoo Kanta, as far as the Ruan of Cutch Tradition states that the trihe entered the peninsula in the eighth century. Its original name, by which some of its claus are designated in Central India, was Makwahana. The principal Jhâla families in Jhalawar are Drangadra, Limri, Wadwan Wankanir, Than, Seela, and Chūra, the Drangadra being the common progenitor of all the rest. Although they are now independent of one another, yet the most ancient family is the acknowledged head of the tribe, and the chief of eich clan, on his investiture, receives a dress from the chief of the Drangadras. The eldest son in the families of this tribe receives as his portion of the inheritance double that which falls to the share of the younger brothers.

2 The Gohel Tribe

This tribe inhalits a portion of the eastern frontier of Kattywar called Gohel war. Respecting them Captain Jacob makes the following observations — "The Gohel Rapoots,' he says, 'were driven out of Varwar by the Rabtors in the end of the twelfith century, and acquired their footing in the pennisula by intermairriage with the Chârasama family of Joonaghar. By the revolutions of fortune, their first town, built and named Sejukpore, after Sejuk, the chief who conducted lither the tribe, has fallen into the possession of a Kathee family, whilst Gohelwar has nearly doubled its original size by acquisitions from the Kathee and other tribes. The western division of Gohelwar, between the Shetroonjee and Jholapooree rivers, the hills and the sea, and this strip of land, still retains some of its former Sarweya and Koh proprietors. The Rajah of Bhronuggur, who has dropped the title of Gohel for that of Rawul, is descended from the eldest son of Sejuk, and is the principal chief in Gohelwar" (a). The Rajabship of Bhaonuggur was constituted in 1743 by Bhao Singhjee. The two states next to it in rank, though far inferior in extent and resources, are Lathee and Wulla, of Palitana.

3. The Jhareja Tribe.

These Rajpoots are in the possession of Machoo Kanta, the two chief states of which are Morvee and Mallia, and also of Hallar. The latter is said to take its name from a chief named Hala, who first conquered it. The principal Jhareja chiefs are those of Nowanuggur, Rajkot, Goondul, Dhurol, Drapha, and Kotra Sanganee.

See the account of the Jharejas of Gujerat and Cutch.

4. The Mahomedan Governing Tribes.

Mahomedan chiefs have possession of the principalities of Dussara and Wunod, in Jhalawar; and also of nearly the entire province of Soruth, which is in the hands of the Nawab of Joonaghar, the Babee of Bantwa, and the Shaita of Umrapoor (6).

5. Brahmans Castes.

These are mostly of the Någar tribe, belonging to the Gurjar, or fifth great division of South Indian Brahmans. Of twelve hundred and sixty-three families of indigenous Brahmans existing in the Kattywar Peninsula in 1842, exclusive of temporary residents, there were, according to Captain Jacob's computation, nine hundred and twenty Någars; the rest, namely, three hundred and forty-three families, being connected with other tribes. Many of these latter Brahmans are in the service of the Government in various capacities. They have talent and shrewdness; are superior in ability to most other castes; and exercise great influence in the peninsula.

.6. Banya, or Banian, Castes.

These castes are numerous, and represent here, as elsewhere, the chief portion of native traders, bankers, and merchants. In religion they are mostly Jains, though a few are worshippers of Vishui. They are spread all over the province, and one or two families at least are found in every village. As Jains, they exhibit great reverence for animal life. Some fine temples, especially on the Palitana and Girnar mountains, frequented by thousands of pilgrims, belong to this community

The Bâbria Tribes

These people occupy the tract, called after them Bâbruwar, to the south of the pennsular as far as the sea, lawing the rivers Jholopooree and Malun to the east and west, and the Geer hills to the north The land is in the hands of the Bâbrias, styled frequently Bâbria Kîthess, and a community of Ahirs It is probable that these tribes were once in possession of a more northerly portion of Kattywar, and that they were compelled to take up this southern position by the Kathee tribes four or five hundred years ago The Bâbrias, on native authority, are said to have heen the fruit of various castes mingled together Hence their name of bakar, or mixed, in the local dialect. They have three principal divisions, namely —

ORIGINAL BARRIA TRIBES

1 Kotila | 2 Warû | 3 Dhânkra

The Kotilus are, according to one account, spring from intermarriages between the Bábrias and Seehor Brahmans, and, according to another, from the union of an Ahir woman with a Brahman. The Kotilas occupy the highest rank among the caste distinctions of the Bábria tribes

The Warns are the offspring of alliances of Bahria Dhankhras with the Jetwas of Poorhundur, next to the Dhankhras These are the most numerous of the Bahria tribes. By themselves they are still called Jetwas

The Dhinkhras are descended, it is said, from the Pandurs and came first from Anhalwars, thence proceeded to Jihn Kandoola, in the Panchal district, on quitting which they advanced to Unnecroo. They are the most numerous of the Beling trakes, and next in rink to the Katilas.

The Babru tribes, however, although in reality derived from these three sources, are nevertheless now very numerous, being not less, according to their own statement, than seventy two These, as drawn up by Captun Jacob, are as follows—

72. Umga (a). The Nawab of Joonaghar claims jurisdiction over Babriawar "in virtue of the exactions which his occupation of the neighbouring district of Oond has enabled him to make for a long series of years, and of his having retained military posts in the country." On the sea-coast to the south is the excellent port of Jaffrabad, which, together with eleven contiguous villages, belongs to the Zimjeera Seedee.

The Babrias, the Kathees, and the Ahars intermarry, yet maintain their distinctiveness as separate tribes. Moreover, in social rank and respectability, a difference subsists between them. This is seen in the custom observed in the selection of wives. The Ahir gives his daughter to a Babria in marriage, and the Bâbria gives his daughter to a Kâthee; but it does not appear that the Bâhria gives his daughter to the Ahir, or the Kathee his to the Babria, in return, except under certain peculiar circumstances, as, for instance, poverty. A poor Kathee will marry a rich Bâbria girl; or a poor Bâbria will marry an Ahîr in better circumstances.

The Babrias were originally dependant on the Walas, but after a time they rose upon their landlords, expelled them from the country, and seized their villages. It is said they were aided in this enterprise by a Rajpoot of Jetpore.

8 The Ahirs

These Ahirs, which occupy Bāhriawar conjointly with the Bābrias, are, it seems, totally different from the Shadri Ahirs, or cowherds, of Northern India, although hearing the same name. They profess to be connected with the Somrahs of Scinde, the Solankhi Rajpoots of the island of Diu, and even with those of Ujain, and, therefore to be of royal Rajpoot blood. They affirm that the lands once held by the Wala Rajpoots fell to them on their extinction. They also hecame connected with these Rajpoots by marriage. The Ahirs probably entered the province several centuries before the Bābrias, and on the arrival of the latter, the two tribes made mutual ulliances. Branches of this tribe are still in Cutch

The Ahrs are a quiet, agricultural people, and differ considerably from the Bibris, who are somewhat proud and stately in appearance, and of unsettled habits. Both these tribes, as well as the Käthees, divide their property equally among their families.

The chief object of worship of the Ahirs and Babrias is Sbamji Maharaj, a four armed stone idol at Toolsee Sham, noted for its hot springs, beyond the north western boundary of their territory. They also worship other deities. They are much simpler in their religious customs than Hindus generally, and will ent animal food except beef (a).

THE KATHLE TRIBLS 15T-THE SHABHAEET, OR NOBLE TRIBES 1, THE WALA BRANCH; 11, THE KHACHAR BRANCH 115, THE KHUZIAN BRANCH 2ND-THE EHWARATIA, OR IGNORLD TRIBES.

THE KATHEE TRIBES.

These tribes have given their name to the peninsula forming the western division of Gujerat, which they now inhabit; but the country in which their ancestors are said to have first settled, was that of Pawar-des, or the land of the Pawars, situated between Cutch and Scinde. There is also a tract hearing the same name in Cutch, which probably has some connexion with it. The Khthees themselves state, however, that they originally came from the hanks of the Jumna, that they thence proceeded to Cutch, and finally, in the fourteenth century, arrived in Kattywar. The tribe formerly was divided into five hranches, the names of which were the following:—

- 1. Patgar.
- 2. Manjaria.

Pandua.

5. Babarya,

Not much is known respecting these early divisions. The Kåthees rendered assistance to the Rajpoots of the neighbourhood, under their leader Wala, in their military enterprises. The Jam of Bhooj was united in marriage to a Kåthee woman. After the marriage, the Jam and all his followers, with the exception of one man, were put to death by a conspiracy formed between the Kåthees and Rajpoots. The Rajpoots of the district, according to local traditions, intermarried with the Kåthees. "The Rajpoot Wala, or Wala Vûch, who was commonly called Patgurû," says Mr. Erskine, "married Rapdah, the daughter of a Kåthee. By her he had three sons, namely, Wala Abacher, and Ahaman, who, with their father, are the progenitors of seventy two tribes of the hather rice. The descendants of Patgora are distinguished by the appellation of Awratiya, and those of his three sons by Rapdah are called Shākheet. There are, says the same authority, foity seven Awratiya tribes, and twenty five Shākheet, but Captain Jacob, who evidently paid closer attention to the subject, affirms, that there are three cluef tribes, the Wala, Khāchar, and Khuman, which are gain separated into two great classes, the noble and the ignoble the former being divided into thirty seven sub tribes, and the lutter into meety three. These are spread over the five districts of Kattywar, namely, Panchal in the north east Ahuman in the south, and Wassiwar, Kharapat and Aling Dhannee lying between The Kháchars are found in considerable numbers in Panchal, which is faimous for its excellent breed of horses. To the west are the Kháchars. Kháman Infinite of the extended street of noises of the same name. The most powerful family of the Kithees is that of the Wales of Jetpore Next to it is the khachar family of Jusdhun. These are the two principal kittee families in the country. All the rest are much lower in rank, owing to the singular custom of the equal division. of property subsisting among them

The Kâthees were probably, at one time, that is, when they quitted the north eastern part of Cutch, a nomade pastoral tribe addicted to plander. They only began in comparatively modern times to settle down in villages, and even in the beginning of the present century they are spoken of as prone to indulge in their old wandering predatory habits. The Jetpore and Jusdhun families were the critiest to adopt the rules of civilized races, and to establish themselves in perminent habitations. Those who did so were originally termed reformed hatthees, a term, remarks Cuptain Jacob, writing in 1842, "already becoming obsolete, but the establishment of the British supremacy has alone put a stop to their predatory excursions, and many hatthees are yet hving who have stuck their spears into the gates of Alimedabad during such excursions. The lightness of the tribute paid by these tribes, he adds, "in proportion to their revenues, as compared with other communities, is owing to the greater development of their resources, which habits of order have created since these proportions were fixed by the Mahratra Moolukgeree commandies and confirmed by Colonel Walker in 1808. The hatthees owe their possessions, he continues, "chiefly to the general arrichy produced by the decline of the Mahomedan power, the Jhala, Jareja, and other tribes purchasing immunity from their plunder by the cession of villages.

thus given up by the Nawab of Joonaghar less than a century ago, with reserved rights therein" (a).

A question has arisen respecting the origin of this race, which it is by no means easy to decide. Their nomade habits, the blue and grey eyes which some of them possess, the fact that they came from a northern country, their stature and features, and the singular circumstance of the sun being the chief object of their worship, seem to present a cumulative argument in favour of their descent from the ancient Scythians. Perhaps the strongest evidence on the subject is that derived from the point last mentioned, for it is well known that one of the most prominent peculiarities of the Scythians was their worship of fire in all its manifestations and symbols. It is, moreover, natural that their descendants, wherever they might he, should cling to a custom which formed a distinguishing characteristic of their ancestors, even though they might neglect and forget many others of inferior importance. Without presuming to affirm that the Kathees are of a Scythian stock, I nevertheless would suggest that the testimony for their heing so is strong. Not only is the sun their principal deity, but its figure is "drawn on every deed at the head of the list of living witnesses, with the words Sri Surni Ni Shakh." An old temple to the sun, believed to have been erected by the Kathees on their first arrival in the country, stands on Mandwa hill near Than.

The Brahmans officiating for the Kâthees, are Râjgors, who exercise great influence over them to their own advantage. They direct the ceremony of the Srâddh, or the worship of ancestors, and that of marriages; and insure goods from the attacks of enemies. The Kâthees have little sense of religion; and their religious rites seem to consist mainly in folding their bands, gazing at the sum, and imploring his favour. The other tribes, on the Srâddh days, throw food to the crows; but the Kâthees throw it to hapwings, under the idea that the act is pleasing to the spirits of the deceased, and will secure their own happiness in a future state. The lapwing is, therefore, a favourite bird with these tribes (b).

The Kâthees are in general an athletic race. Their women are proverbially beautiful and graceful. The dress of the men is very similar to that worn by the Rajpoots or Grassias; but their turban has a peculiar peak. They consider it a disgrace to carry frearms, and formerly never used them Spirituous liquors and opium are taken by them to great excess (a)

The law of equal male inheritance, together with equal rights, prevails among the minor Rappoot and the Kathee States "In most of the former, and in some of the latter," says Captum Jacob, "a share called mhotap, or eldership, is given to the eldest son, generally one additional share to that possessed by the other sons. Thus, if there be five sons, sax shares are made, and the eldest gets two But the practice varies" (b). The custom is for the patrimony, on the death of the father, to be divided into portions, which are shared by the sons some of it, however, being held in common

I shall here produce the two useful lists of the Kathee tribes drawn up by Captum Jacob (c)

10 Miana

This tribe comes from Cutch They are Mahomedans who abandoned their Hindoo creed for political reasons, and in doing so were better able in former times to accomplish their own purposes. Not many years ago they were regarded with suspicion and anxiety by reason of their plundering propensities. They have now lands in Mullia, in the District of Machoo Kanta. In the year 1839, they caused great disquiet in the country, and some of their principal men were tried by the Political Agent for the lawless excesses which they had committed (a). They were formerly theeves, noted for their desterity and bravery.

11 Wadhel

These are found in Okhimundel They are Hindoo Rypoots, but in spirit and character are similar to the Minna tribe

12 Wagher

This Rappoot tribe is also in Okhamundel They bear the same character as the two preceding tribes Many families are in the Jora Balumba Taluqu of Hallar

13. Makranî.

Professional soldiers, ready to commit any crime under beaven for anybody who will pay them.

14. Barar.

This tribe comes from Scinde. Many are in possession of land.

15. The Arab, Tribe.

Professional soldiers of fidelity and good reputation.

16, Kûnbî.

These are numerous in the Jhalawar province, in the District of Kattywar, in that of Machoo Kanta, in Hallar, in the Joonaghar and Bantwa Taluqas of Soruth, in the District of Gohelwar, and in some of the sub-divisions of Oond Surweya.

17. Wania.

Wanias are found in the Halwad Drangdra Taluqa, and in many other parts of Jlalawar, in the District of Kattywar. They are numerous in Machoo Kanta. They are also established in the Joria Balumba Taluqa, of Ilallar, and in Annun, Drapha, Ghondul Dhorajee, and other sub-divisions of the same district; and in the Joonaghar and Bantwa Taluqas of Soruth. The tribe is numerous in Burda. There are families in the Bhownuggur, Wulah, Wadree Wachanee, and other Taluqas of Gohelwar. A few families reside in the village of Depla, if Oond Surweya, and in the Dedaun, Teemba Munsa, and Gaula Taluqas, and in some other parts of Babriawar.

18. Koli.

The Kolis are in Halwad Drangdra, Linurce, and in most parts of Jhalawar; in the Jaitpoor Chectul, Bhulka, and Bugusra Taluqas of the District of Kattywar; in Machoo Kanta; in Sunula, Sheroroo, Rajpura, Pad, and some other villages of Oond Surweya, and in many parts of Babriawar.

See the Chapter on the Koli Tribes.

19. Mehman.

Cloth manufacturers and petty traders. They are numerous in the Tunkara Taluqa of Jhalawar, in the Veesawur Taluqa of the District of Kattywar, in the Bantwa Taluqa of Soruth, and in the Bhownuggur Taluqa of Gohelwar.

20 Saprara

This tribe is scattered about the Hilwid Drangdri Taliqa and in other parts of Jhalawar. They are vegetable growers, and are numerous in Hur reena, of the Hallar District

21 Rebâra

Inhabit the Limree Taluqa, the Laktar Taluqa, and other sub divisions of Jihalawar, the Jutipoor Cheetal Taluqa of the District of Kattywar, and also the Khumbula Taluqa, and other sub divisions. They are cowherds, shepherds, rearers of camels, and the like. In former times the Rebars, together with the Mhars, constituted in Poorbunder the original and singular institution of a standing and national multia, and were a body of soldiers called the Sword of the State, through whom, on all occasions of unportance, public opinion was conveyed (a)

22 Chann

A fin members of this tribe are in the Jhinjoowari Taluqa of Jhaliwar There are many families in the Choteela Taluqa of the District of Kattywar, and others are scattered over the province in various directions

The Charon holds a social position in Kuttywar akin to that of the Bhat Like him, his profession is that of a bard. His person is equally secred, but he sometimes, unlike the Bhat Proper, engages in trade, and even hecomes a soldier. Formerly, there were many villages in the province inhabited by Charons exclusively, who lived on the contributions of men of rank. The word of the Charon was taken as security for all classes as well as that of the Bhat, and he committed suicide, or was killed, when the person for whom he had given his word fulled in the performance of his promise, contract, or yow (b)

23 Bans w

28. The Nakoda Raipoots,

Inhabit the Wadwan Taluqa of Jhalawar, and also Lahtar, Jhinjoowara, and Wunode, in the same province.

29. The Mhars.

The Mhars are numerous in the District of Burda, and in other parts. They were once a very important people, and in some places, as Poorbunder, formed, with the Rebarts, a kind of national militia. Mhars were charged with the defence of every village, and were supported chiefly hy grants of lands proportioned to the ability of each village. They were exempted from all taxes and public contributions; and were obliged only to perform military service, and could never be so reduced as to maintain themselves by personal labour (a).

30. The Dhers.

These are in the village of Kunesara, in the District of Kattywar; and are found in various parts of the province.

See the account of the Dhers in the Chapter on the Tribes of Gujernt.

31. The Woras.

The Woras are numerous in the Khesura Taluqa of the District of Hallar.

32. The Sindi Tribes.

Some of these are located in the Tunkara Taluqa of Jhalawar, where they cultivate the soil and perform other labours. They are numerous in the Badwa

THE TRIBES AND CASTES OF KATTYWAR .- (Continued.)

SECTION III .- THE WANDERING TRIBES OF KATTYWAR.

1.-JOGI 2.-JOGI BARTHARI. 3.-JOGI RAWAL, 4.-JOGIRA. 5.-NAT 6-THE NAT TRIBE OF THE DHERS. 7.-RAWAL, 8.-WAGRI, 9.-BAJANIA. 10.-THE FAKIR TRIBES. 11.-KON-RANI. 12 -SIPAHI. 13.-CHARON. 14.-WADI. 15 -LOHAR. 16.-CHAMTA. 17.-KUMHAR. 18.-MALI 13.-SARANIA. 20.-DHAT. 21.-MANA, 22.-THE SINDI TRIBES, 25.-PARADL 21 -BHAND, 25.-ATIT, 26.-MARWARI, 27 -BARTHARINATH, 28 - VIROGIA, 22.-VARAGI RAMANANDI. 30 -- THORI. 31.-SALAB. 32 -- GORIA MADARI. 33.-KANKALI. 34 -- BELOOCII. 35 -- BARIA. 36 -- THE SEEDEES. 37 -- NATH.

Some of these tribes have been already noticed. Those again referred to lead a vagahond life, and have more or less separated themselves from the tribes to which they properly belong.

1. Jogt.

This tribe has several branches, some of which submit to the authority of a headman; others do not. They are found chiefly in the Noanuggur division of Hallar. They wander from place to place, and are seen sometimes in the districts of Kattywar and Jhalawar. Their head-quarters are at Dharole, Jallia, Kalawar, Jamboora, Khimruna, and Dhacca, in Hallar; and at Pecpurtoda, Summundiala, Thanadowlee, Janjurda, Scemor, and other places in the province The Jords marry with the members of their own tribe. Most of them marry young, when bride and bridegroom are at the age of ten. Payment is made for the wife, or wives (for the Jogts are polygamists) by the bridegroom to his future father-in-law. The marriage tie is very lax, and, in some cases, a woman may leave her hushand at her pleasure; and in other cases, a pecuniary compensation must be made by the new lover to her husband. A widow can always marry again. The Jog1s hury their dead. A peculiar custom prevails among them, of branding the great toe of the right foot of the dead person.

The Jogis are snake-catchers, musicians, sellers of salt, wood-cutters, broommakers, rope-makers, and the like.

2 Jogi Barthari

The marriage relations of this tribe are similar to those of the Jogis with the exception, that a dowry of twenty five rupces is given to the bride. They are Hindoos, and worship Goralanth. Their profession is that of hegging. The head quarters of the tribe are at Dhurol. Other branches exist in Gujerat.

3 Jogi Rawal

Exoresers of malignant spirits Their marriage relations are similar to those of the preceding tribe, with the difference that thirty rupees are given to the bride's parents. These people wander over hedburpoor and Kattywar They only intermarry with their own tribe. The clief deity of the tribe is horful.

1 Jostra

A branch of the Jogts, but with somewhat different customs of the dard are burned instead of burned. They are carpenters, and also beggars the traverses the country from Wagur, in Cutch to Kattywar, its head quarters being at Parkur, in the former province. They do not intermarry with other tribes.

5 Nat

Itmerant rope dancers, jugglers, actors, and the like from Jodhpoor in Murwar They pass through Radhunpoor to Hallar and Joonaghar, and other parts of kattywar Some branches acknowledge a head, others do not Some again allow early marriages, others, like the branch frequenting the Aurar Taliqa who originally came from Patun, and bee in Bhinnath during the monsoon do not permit the marriage of a man and woman until they are both twenty five years of age, when a present is made of two rupees to the brides parents

6 The Nat Tribe of the Dhers

Itinerant play actors who wander over all parts of the country. They are Hindoos, and worship Gonesh. Marriage is allowed when the parties are of age they bury their dead

7 Rawal

Rope and tape mailers Polygamy is not allowed among them, and their widows may marry again. They bury their dead. The tribe intermarries with other tribes. It traverses the distinct of Hallar, having its head quarriess at Photree.

8. Wagrt.

These are scattered about many districts of Kattywar, and are vendors of vegetables, toys, and walking-sticks, exorcists, beggars, dealers in cattle, sellers of tape, and so forth. Some branches burn, while others bury, their dead. Commonly, marriages are performed when the parties are young; but in some cases the ceremony does not take place until the bride and bridegroom have attained to maturity, when it is celebrated "in a square formed by four columns of earthen chattles of different sizes piled one above another. The bride and bridegroom are then scated in the centre of these columns; after which they take four turns round them, which ends the eeremony. A marriage gift of twenty-two rupees is presented by the father of the bridegroom to that of the bride. Should the woman leave her husband, and live with another man, or do so after his death, a fine is exacted, and paid either to her husband's relatives, or to the caste "(a). The tribe is found at Ahmedabad and other parts of Gujerat. There are special seats of the tribe, such as Chobarce, Mhowa, Beshpur, Gogabara, Koothiaua, Santhulpoor, Wadul, Halliad, Rungpoor, &c.

9. Bajania.

Rope-dancers, jugglers, and actors. They bury their dead, but before the interment place a lighted bundle of hay on the face of the dead person. This custom scems a reminiscence of eremation, which probably was at one time practised by the tribe. The Bajanias do not intermarry with other tribes. They wander about the country from Bhaonuggur through Jhalawar to Hallar, and thence to Soruth, while others pursue a different route. Some of their chief places of resort are Choklee, Bhal, Ahmedabad, and Baroda; but commonly they have no favourite haunt.

The Fakir Tribes.

These are Mahomedan beggars, and roam about from place to place asking alms from the people. As a rule they marry only into their own tribe.

11. Konkanî.

Beggars, from Satara, who have entered the province by the way of Cutch. They do not intermarry with other tribes.

(e) Information relative to the Wandering Tribes of Kattywar, by Captain J. T. Barr, Political Agent, Borthay Government Selections, Vol. XII, pp. 389, 389.

12 The Sipahi Tribe

These have entered the province from Cutch

13 Charon

Beggars from Marwar They practise polygamy, and bury their dead The tribe has a recognized head

14 Wade

The Wadis winder about selling stone hand mills, and hegging Some are sinke eathers. Among their chief places of resort, are Rajkot, Gogo in Gujerut, Than, Choteela, and Drungdra. Most are Hiniloos, huit a few are Millomedians. One branch of the trihe buries its dead in a stunding posture. They do not marry out of the tribe. Their rules respecting marriage are very lax.

15 Lohâr

Itinerant blacksmiths Some go from Thadree to Wagur and Widecar, to Kattywar, and thence return to Thadree Others apparently have no special place of residence. They are processedly Hundoos, yet some of them pay reverence to the Mahomedian sunt, Rumda Pir. The caste is exclusive on the subject of marriage. Money is paid for a bride by the bridegroom to his wife's father. They him their dead.

16 Chamta

Rope dancers, sellers of stone hand mills and donkeys Some are Hindoos; others are Mahomedans They wander about the Burila, Soruth, Jbalawar, and the divisions of Kattywar, having no fixed place of abode They intermiring with no other tribe One branch of the Chamtas is under the control of three headmen, residing severally in Normuggur, Joonaghar, and in the Gondul Pargunnah The marriage ceremony of the Hindoo branches is performed as follows—A square is made of earthen vessels arranged in four piles, each continuing five In the middle of the square are the bride and bridegroom These people worship Kordi (a) Other members of the tribe are found in Gujerat

17 Kumhâr

These clans of the great Kumh'ir family winder about the province selling stone hand mills, and begging. In one of them a father is expelled from his caste should his illughter not be married before attaining her eighth year. Their widows

(a) Information relative to the Waudering Tribes of Kattywar by Captain J T Earr Political Agent.

Bombay Government Selections Vol. XII pp 390 414

do not remarry. Some hury, others hurn, their dead. These clans do not intermarry with other tribes.

Mâli.

Beggars. They properly belong to the great caste of Malis, or gardeners, scattered over India, but have in all probability been excluded from their tribe on account of the low habits they have acquired. Some of them acknowledge a head, who resides in the village of Bhoka, in Marwar. They hury their dead.

19. Sarania.

Burnishers of arms, and cattle-dealers. Many of them came originally from Marwar. They wander from Wagur to Wudeear, or from Verumgaum and Bujana, or from Patree through Jhalawar, or from Olnk to Jhalawar. Some of their head-men reside in Marwar, in Olnk of Jhalawar, in Chowal, and elsewhere; but some of the clans have none. The tribe is found also in Gujerat and Malwa. They are Hindoos, but some are not worshippers of idols. Others worship Kalka Matha, Hanuman, and Kul Devi Shikawar. Their rules on the subject of marriage are exceedingly lax; for example, a woman is permitted to leave her husband, in some of the clans, and to live with another man. The marriage ceremony of one clan "is performed in the open country, by seating together the hride and bridegroom, while the mother of the former, and the father of the latter, fasten an earthen vessel to the lower part of their stomachs, and then they run at each other seven times, bringing the vessels in contact until they hreak, which closes the ceremony "(a).

20. Bhat.

These pursue a diversity of occupations. They are traders, labourers, lenders of pack bullocks, and beggars. Most of them have come originally from Marwar. Some make their head-quarters at Bhitamal duving the monsoon. They worship Kanjeri Matha and Shiva, and bury their dead. These are probably members of the great Bhat family, but have been excluded therefrom on account of their misconduct.

21. Miana.

A sect of low Mahomedans, who permit their women to live with other men during their husbands' lifetime. They wander from Wagur to Kattywar; and are no doubt a clan of the Mana tribe already referred to.

(c) Information relative to the Wandering Tribes of Kattywar, by Captain J. T. Barr, Political Agent. Bonsbay Government Selection, Val XII, p. 301.

22 The Sindi Tribes

Ittnerant labourers, who travel from Cutch to Hallar, or from Scinde They intermarry only among their own tribes. The parties are married when of mature age. These Sindis belong by right to the tribes hearing this name, yet differ from them in not having any settled habitation.

23 Paradht

These wander about Wagar in Cutch, and Hallar in Kattywar selling wicker work. Their dead, before birial, are branded in the centre of the forehead (a). They are professedly Hindoos, and worship Wachangna (head of the snakes) and reverence the Mahomedan saints, Balarao Pir and Barâ Pir. The Paradhis do not intermatry with other tribes.

24 Bhand

A small tribe, who gain their livelihood by begging. They wander from their village in Varwar to Kattywar. As Hiadus they worship Chatribhui

25 Atıt

A tribe of itinerant heggars from Poona and Marwar They are worship pers of Matha, Shiva, and Hinglaj Their head quarters are at Punar and Jet poor Some of the tribe are cellates They hary their dead

26 Maru ara Kolis

These are heggars, who wander from Marwar to Kattywar, returning through Gujerat They marry when very young The deities worshipped by them are Belri, Matha, and Rameshwar

27 Bartharmath

Beggars, who traverse the country from Jodhpoor to Kattywar They are a numerous community in Marwar Their widows are permitted to marry again. They bury their dead

28 Virogia

Beggars whose place of residence is at Jurnapurna, whence they wander to Voanuggur in Kattywar. The bodies of married persons at death are burnt, those of unmarried persons are burned. They are of the sect of Prannathis and worship the poths or sacred writings of the sect. They marry into their own tribe

29. Verägi Ramanandi.

Religious mendicants from Cutch, Malwa, Marwar, Udaipur, Mathura, and other places. They are for the most part pilgrims wandering throughout India.

30. Thori.

Sellers of salt and bamboos. They come from Gujerat, and wander about Kattywar with their wares. Some are Mahomedans; others are Hindus. The latter make indonls of grass as a rest for water-vessels when carried on the head. They worship Büblül. Their head-quarters are at Hathusnee during the rainy season.

Saláb.

Beggars from Marwar. They profess to be Hindus; but their widows may remarry. They intermarry only with their own tribe.

32. Goria Madári.

Mahomedan bear-dancers. Their head-quarters are at Ahmedabad in the rainy season.

Kankalı.

Beggars. Their widows may remarry. The tribe is also found in Gujerat. They have no marriage connexion with other tribes.

34. ' The Belooch Tribes.

Itinerant bear and monkey-dancers. They are Mahomedans.

Baria.

Itinerant bear and monkey-dancers. Mahomedans.

36. The Seedees.

Wandering beggars, who reside at Teetwa in Muchoo Kanta during the rains. Mahomedans.

37. Nath.

Snake-charmers. Their marriage ties are easily broken. Their widows may remarry. They bury their dead. The tribe wanders about Kattywar; but its head-quarters are at Karchia, Gadha, and Harporce. They are under the control of a headman. The Nåths do not intermarry with other tribes. They are Hindus, and worship Råmdeoptr (a).

CHAPTER IX.

THE TRIBES AND CASTES OF CUTCH

The tribes and castes of Cutch have been described with great our and minuteness by Mr Dalpitram Pranjivan Khikhar, Inspector of Schools in Bloog, in a paper which be contributed to the Indian Antiquary for June, 1876. The description does him very great credit for its clearness and succincines. It has one drawback, however, in that the arrangement of the tribes is alphabetical, and not seientific. This account is, nevertheless, so excellent in chiracter, that I feel I cannot do better than present it in the pressum a tribe of the writer.

The greater portion of the inhabitants of Cutch seem to have come from Seinde and Mirwar Thul Parkar followed next, and Kattywar and Guierat were the last to send their quotes Most of the inhabitants were, and still are, Ray poots of the Samma tribe, the progenitors of the Jarepas, who have assumed different names from such of their ancestors as have distinguished themselves Hence we find a number of tribes originally descended from the same stock Deda, Hotlu, Otha, and Guan, who were the sons of Jam Rayadhan 'the Red, gave names to the clans of Ded's, Hothis, Gajans, &c Again, Gajanji had a son named Jion, who had also two sons, Ahra and Mor, whose posterity are the Abras and Mors , and Hillou, another son of Guann, gives name to the Hallas These all are, properly speaking, Jarey's , but the name Jarey's is chiefly applied at present, in the province at least, to the descendants of Jim Hamirji, who had four sons, Aller t, Khangir, Sibeb, and Râyab . The second among these founded the city of Bhoo, and his descendants are distinguished by the name of the Kang ir branch The posterity of the second are the Sihebs, and of the third, the Rayabs Most of the inhabitants that preceded Khangarji are regarded as Dhangs or Mul grassias A number of those who came from Scinde have become Mahomedans. but still indicate their Rajpoot origin in their nuklis, or family names

Straswat Brahmans, Lohinas, Bhatas, Pokarnus, Kehatnyus, Bhansalis, Oswals, and most of the Mahomedan tribes, cume from Scinde, and afterwards spread into Kattywar and Gujerat Most of the Vannas came at different periods from Mârwâr and Pâhlanpur; and a few from Gujerat, who speak the Gujerati language. The province is thus peopled by the most heterogeneous races. The following is a list of the chief, which has been drawn up at the request of the editor of the Indian Antiquary, who supplied a list of most of the castes to the writer, who wrote out the paper on this basis, supplying several additional castes:—

1. Abrâ.

These are the descendants of Jām Ahrā, who was fourth in descent from Jām Lākha, who gave the name Jārejā to the tribe. Abrā and Mor were two hrothers, who gave name to the two districts of Ahdāsā and Modāsā; in Cutch, where they reigned. The Abrās profess the Mahomedan religion, whilst there are Hindu Abrās in Wāgar, descended from the Dedās.

Agartyâ.

Mahomedan converts from Rathor Rajpoots, originally from Agra. They are found in Bhuvar, Mathodâ, Khokharû, and Mândavi. They are cultivators. .

3. Agâ.

A very small clan of Mahomedans, found in Ahrâsâ and Kanr.

4. Aher.

Hindus; generally cultivators. When there is no cultivation they maintain themselves by keeping a cart and a pair of bullocks, which they lend on hire. They are worshippers of Mata, and Vachara, a Rajpoot saint. They are divided into five sub-tribes:—

Sub-tribes.

- Machhua, from Machhukântâ, living about Dhori, Kanariâ, &c.
- 2. Prânthaliâ, in the district of Prânthal, in Cutch.
- 3. Borichâ, in Kânthi.
- 4. Sorathiâ, who came from Sorath, and are scattered over Wagar.
- Chorada, from Chorad, living about Adesar, Palanswa, Sanwa, Umiyu, Jatawara, Bela, &c.

The other sub-tribes do not hold any intercourse with the Sorathias, hecause when the latter were in political importance under Rao Naughan of Junagarli, one of them is said to have betrayed him to the emperor of Delhi, who killed him-Family name, Hapa.

5 Agant

A branch of the earlier Jarej's and the descendants of Ajuji They hold lands in Suthri, Tapper, Tanwana, Kükdao, Desalpur, &c

6 Amar

Descendants of Amaru, one of the earher Jareias

7 Att

These people are known under many appellations in Cutch Some marry, and some do not, whence they are called Gharbar (family men), and Mathdhar (ascetics or monks) These are again divided into ten tribes —

|--|

1	Gir	4	Purt	7	Aran
2	Parvat	5	Bharthi	8	Saraswati
3	Sagar	6	Van	9	Tirth

10 Ashram

The Atit of any one of these sects attaches to his name the name of his sect as a termination, to make up his full name, as Karan gar, Hir's puri, Chanchal hirthi, &c By this he is distinguished as a member of a particular sect. A member of any of these sects can be a Gharh'in or Mathdhan who, again may hold intercourse with each other. Most of them are professional beggars, but they take up any profession. They are found as ordinary sepoys, bankers, or merchants and also as taking a prominent part in the affairs of State at native courts. Bawa Rewagar Kuvargar is one of the greatest bankers of Cutch, and his firm is held in great repute throughout Hindustan for its credit, and Bawa Savaigar was highly trusted by the late Thakur of Bhownaggar. There are three heads of the Atits, who are called Pirs. One is the Pir of Kaly aneswar, another, that of Ajepâl, and a third, of Koteswar. The Atits are also called Gossins.

8 Audich

These people are generally from Gohelwar, Halar, and Gujerat, and appear to have come to Cutch at different tunes within the last 250 years. Those living in Wagar cultivate land, smoke the bookah, and allow the remarriage of widows, while the others are priests, reciters of the Puranas, beggirs, cooks, &c.

9 Balocha

Originally from Belochistan chiefly found in the district of Pavar

10. Baphan.

Miyana Mahomedans.

Bârâcha.

A branch of the earlier Járejás, descendants of one Bârâchji, the son of Mulváji. They are now regarded as Mulgrâssiâs, and live about Nâgrecha, Tehra, &c., chiefly cultivating lands.

Bârar.

Originally Rajpoots, but now degenerated into Khavâs.

13. Bhalota.

Degenerated Raipoots, almost like the Khavâs, principally to he found in the village of Bhalota.

14. Bhambhiyâ.

Rajpoots degenerated into Khavas.

Bhandâri.

Mahomedans in Bhooj.

Bhansâlî.

These were originally Rajpoots of the Solankhi race, but have long ceased to have any intercourse with them. 'They put on the sacred thread, and consider themselves Kshatriyas. Most of them cultivate lands, and are said to have come with the Járejas, and become their first ryots. Some of them are merchants. They are to be found in the southern and western parts of Cutch. They are also called Vegus.

17. Bhât.

See Châran.

Bhâtiâ.

Originally Bhâti Rajpoots, to which tribe the chief of Jeysulmere belongs. Like the Jârejās, they are said to be Yâdavas. After their migration to Scinde, they degenerated, it is said, into fishermen; but the Maharajah of the Valabhāchāryas gained them over to wear the sacred thread, and to follow the rules of his sect with much strictness. They have of late greatly risen in the social scale, and consider themselves almost equal to Vānās and Brahmans. They are among the most enterprising merchants, trading with Bombay, Arabia, &c.; and some of them have gone as far as the coast of Africa.

19 Rhat

Originally Rajpoots, but have become Hindu or Mahomedan Khav'is They are found chiefly in Bhooj and Manravi

20 Bhoade

Mulgrassias, an early branch of the Jarejas

21 Rhamra

A branch of the Sang'irs, residing near Gedi, and elsewhere in Wagar

22 Bohâ

Mulgrassias in Ahrasa, chiefly to be found in the village called Boha

23 Bohm â

Found in the large towns of Manravi, Bhooj, Anjar, and Mundra From Gujerat, they were originally Hindus, chieffy Brahmans, but about 700 years ago, were made converts by an Arab They are Shiahs, and their high priest or Mulla lives in Surat, and has great authority over them

24 Butta

Originally Hindus, but at present Mahomedan Mulgrâssiâs, chiefly to be found in Abrêsâ and Gurdâ

25 Châran

There are three divisions of these -

Kâchhelâ (Kachhis)
 Mâruvâ (from Mârwâr)
 Tûmbel (from Scinde)

The last two are the family bards of the Jârejâs, and enjoy several villages as girâs given by Jâm Râval and the Durhars of Cutch The Mâruvâ and Kâchhelâ reside in Mâl, and the Tâmhel in Kânthi. The Kâchhelâs are money lenders, and trade by caravans of hullocks. The Chârans in general are on the decline. The difference between a Bhât and a Châran hes chiefly in the latter heing a simple recator of a Rappect's prime in short rude poetical pieces, while the former is a regular genealogist, and sometimes the historian of the family

26 Chârarâ

Once a very powerful ruling race in Chtch, probably came from the neighhouring Panehäsar of Jayashekhari. One of their Lings, named Wagam Châvari, who ruled in Patgarh in Garda, was killed by Mor, the first Samma from Scinde Wic find traces of their rule here and there in small townships till the end of the fourteenth century. There is a temple of Wahadeva at Bhuvar, which bears an inscription containing the genealogy of one Vanra or Vanraja, and the date Santvat 1346. At present the Chavaras have degenerated into Khavasas, or Mahomedan sepoys; and one house of pure Rajpoot descent can scarcely be found in Cutch.

27. Chuchiya.

Mahomedans of the Miyana tribe.

28. Chugar.

Degenerated Rajpoots, a branch of the Jârejâs, and reside in Dhang, or the district about Lakhpat and Korâ.

29. Chuvâns, Duriâs, 'and Dâbhis-Khavâsas.

30. Dal.

Hindus and Mahomedans of Rajpoot descent.

31. Dárâr.

Originally Hindus, but now Mahomedan converts.

32, Dedâ.

An earlier branch of the Jârejâs, from Dedâ, the second in descent from Jâm Lâkha Jâreja. They are in large numbers in Wagar, in Chorâd, Machhukântha, and Hâlâr. The chief town of their head is Kanthkot. They are also styled Virbhadra. They are proud of the martial and enterprising spirit of their ancestors. Dedas residing near Shikârpur are called Kârâs.

33. Dhang.

This is not a particular tribe, but the name given to earlier settlers descended from Rao Râyadhan, the son of Lâkhâ Jareja; and who have either become poor peasants on account of their lands having been sold, or divided among the fraternity, or encroached upon by their powerful brethren of more recent descent from Rao Rhangârji, the founder of Bhooj. The following are among the principal Dhang tribes.

Dhang Tribes.

34. Dher.

The lowest caste among the Hindus, and found in every town and village. From their nukhs, or family names, most of them appear to have been originally of Rappoot descent For instance, we find among them Solankhis, Châvarâs, Ihâlâs, Vaghelâs, &e The Hindus consider themselves polluted by their touch Their profession is that of weivers, cobblers, wood splitters, and tanners They are also called Meghrâls and serve as guides to Government officers

35 Gana

eraî çıM

36 Gahâ

Said to belong to Dhang, and reside in Ahrasa

37 Gayan

An off shoot of the carlier Järejås, descended from Gujanji, the fourth in descent from Lukhā Järejā Originally Malgrāssiās, but at present Mahomedan converts

38 Ghosá

A sub tribe of Miyanas

39 Gunárá

A large and wealthy class of Brahmans, originally from Junagarh

40 Gohel

There are only two houses in Cutch of pure Gohel Rajpoot blood the rest being Khasasas

41 Guyar Raypoots

When the Vaghela's came into Cutch, the Gijar Rajpoots accompanied them, and it was chiefly through their assistance that they became masters of that part of the country, as a reward for which they obtained the right of tilling the ground. They subsequently defended the Vighela's from invasions from without They are found in the Vaghela' towns of Gen, Pallswa, Jatavara, Bela, Lodrain, Umio, Sanva, &c, where they live by cultivating lands. They are of the following rices—

5 1 100	,,,
1	Makvânî	6	Gobel	ĺ
2	Chanesar	7	Umut	11	Chând
3	Khod	8	Duriâs	12	Parmar

5	Chahuvân	10	Pîdana	1

They have no objection to the remarriage of their widows, as also to the appearance of their women in public

42. Hálá.

An earlier offshoot of the Jārejās, descended from Gajanji, fourth in descent from Jām Lākha, the Jārejā. Hālāji was the second son of Gajanji, who after a long struggle with the descendants of Manāi (who are called Kers, from his havier a killed his brother Unar in Scinde), subdued all the villages in the south, middle, and west of Cutch. Jām Rāval was descended from this Hālāji, who conquered the western part of Kattywar from the Jethvās, and gave it the name of Hālār, where he founded the town of Nowānagar, and made it his capital. The Jām of Nowānagar is descended from him. Those who remained in Cutch are in the enjoyment of some villages as their girās, in the districts of Kānthi and Hālā-choyisi.

43. Halepotra and Narangpotra.

Sindhi Mahomedans in Banni.

44. Hingora and Hingorja.

Mahomedan tribes from Scinde,

45. Hoth1.

Descendants of Hothtji, the brother of Gajanji. They are Mulgrāssiās, and reside in villages about Lakhpat, as also in Rehâ, Jâmbudi, Tumbadi, and Kânthi.

46. Jâdâ.

An offshoot of the earlier Jarejas, now reckoned among the Dhangs.

47. Jareja.

The chief ruling race, who claim to be descended from Krishna, who belonged to the Gådava tribe. They were probably driven, or went, out of India after the Yådavasthali, or civil war among the Yådavas; and after many adventures, as they allege, in Egypt and Arabia, came to Ghazni, where they killed the reigning emperor Feroz Shah, and ascended the throne. They were, however, deposed by Sultan Shah, the son of Feroz Shah. After wandering for some time they settled under Jâm Lâkhiâr in Nagar Samai, in Scinde, whence Mor and Mānāi, after killing their brother Unar, in order to obtain the throne, were obliged to flee into Cutch, where their relative, Wâgam Châvarâ, was reigning. Here also they killed Wâgam Châvarâ, reduced the seven Vaghelâ tribes, and obtained possession of the province. After five reigns the line became extinct, and Cutch was in the hands of the rulers of Anabillapâtan for some time; but about Samvat 1204, Lâlhî, the son of Jara (whence the name Jârejî), came into Cutch, and gave name to the reigning tribe

48 Jat

A pastoral tribe originally from Aleppo in Turkey Once they held some part of Cutch as rulers, but were driven by the Jârejâs into Wirai and Bijana, where they rule at present They are in the north west of Cutch

The name applied to native sailors, who are generally Waghers and Miyanas

58 Khora

Gujur Rajpoots

59 Khoja

Shiah Mihomedans, found in every part of Cutch but chiefly in Nagalpur, Bhadreswar, and Bharapur Most of them were originally Hindus of the Bhatia caste. They have a separate religion of their own, consisting of the Das Avutaras (ten incarnations) of the Hindus, grafted on the Shiah tenets of the Mahomedans. Their high priest is His Highness Aga Khan of Bombay, to whom they pay extraordinary reverence. They do not go to the masjid, hut have a separate place of worship called the Khana. There are some reformers of late among them, who, rejecting the mixed creed, have become Sunnis. They are chiefly cultivators in Cutch, but are enterprising merchants in Bombay, Zanzibar, and China.

60. Koli.

These are aborigines in Wagar and Anjar Chovisi, and live by robbery, though now they find it hard to carry on this profession, and have become cultivators.

61. Kunbi.

An agricultural tribe. They are subdivided into :-- Karvâ.

 Anjanâ. Levâ.

These chiefly reside in Wagar, Pranthal, Mak, and Kanthi. There are Momnas, but no Karvas, in Cutch. They are from Gujerat.

62. Kshatriya.

Call themselves Brahma Kshatriyas, and consider themselves the descendants of those who survived from the persecution of Parasurama. After the persecution they are said to have ruled in Seinde. They were ousted from Scinde by a race of foreigners called Barbars. They then went to the goddess Hinglaj, who gave them certain professions. These people are a numerous class in every part of Outch; and are generally dyers, printers, carpenters, turners, silk-weavers, traders, and the like. The celebrated Sundarji Sivji, who aided Colonel Walker and others in reducing Kattywar and Cutch to tranquillity, belonged to this caste.

63. Lohânâ

Originally Rajpoots of the Rather race, who were driven from Kanouj into Scinde, whence they migrated into Cutch about the thirteenth century. At present they wear the sacred thread like the Bhansalis, and call themselves Kshatriyas. Once they took a leading part in the affairs of Cutch, and were its most able men of business and generals. They take up any profession that suits them. They are porters, menial servants, vegetable-sellers, shop-keepers, cultivators, and clerks. Some of them are as handsome as the Rajpoots of the purest blood. They are to be found in every part of Cutch.

64 Mahajan

Not the name of a particular tribe, but that given to the higher class of Hindus as a guild or public body. It is also applied to Vânias and other mercan tile classes exclusively, on account of their acting as leaders of the public

65 Waku ânâ

Hindus as well as Mahomedans Also a family name among the Miyanâs

66 Mandhrâ

Hindus and Mahomedans in Ahrasa

67 Mangariâ

Mahomedans

68 Mâyadâ

A low sort of Rajpoots

69 Meman

Sunni Vahomedan converts, chiefly from Lohanas, originally from Scinde found in every part of Cutch They follow all sorts of professions. They are enterprising merchants in Bombay and elsewhere

70 Miyûna

Reside chiefly in the district of Miy'nn, which receives its name from them. They serve as sepoys, and also live by robbery. They are of the following family and sub tribal names, some of which indicate their Rupoot origin, though they came originally from Scinde, and have long been Mussalman.—

71. Mooh Brahman.

From Machhu-Kântha in Kattywar. They do the duties of other Brahmans, and are also reciters of Purânas, copyists, priests, cooks, &c.

72. Mor.

The descendants of Mor, the grandson of Gajanji, son of Jioji, and brother of Abra. They are at present Mulgrässiäs, and are to be found in the Moråsä diistrict. Mor became a Mahomedan, and worshipped one Bauddin Pir. He undertook an expedition to IAlär, where he died. His hody was transferred to Moråsä, where he was buried, according to his directions, at Mor Kuhå. There is at present at Mor Kubå a masjid in the shape of a four-sided temple with pyramidal roof, which contains his sepulchre. He is worshipped there by the Mors us a Pir, or saint.

73. Molâ.

An offshoot of the Mokalsi Rajpoots.

74. Någar.

These do not figure among the early settlers. The first among them came to Gutch from Ahmedabad in the time of Rao Khangarji, A. D. 1550. One or two families followed him from Pâttan and Dholka; but they did not inuster strong till the time of Lakhpatji. They do not seem to have played a prominent part in the affairs of the State, except one Lakshmidâs. There are about four hundred and sixty-five families, including their priests, in the whole of Cutch. They are well known as a political race. They are divided into Varnâgara and Visalnâgara. The latter are landholders.

75. Nandeváná.

From Marwar. They are found about Anjar, and are chiefly traders.

76. Ner and Nore.

Mahomedans from Scinde.

77. Notiyár.

Originally Samas, but now Mahomedans, scattered throughout Cutch. Jamadar Fatch Muhammad belonged to this tribe. 78 Otâr

Mahomedans about Suthra

79 Padvâr

Mahomedans about Tehra and in Mak

80 Paer

Mulgrâssiâs about Roha, reckoned among the Dhangs

81 Pal

Mahomedan converts from Bhati Rupoots

82 Pasaya

A brunch of Kanadde Rajpoots among the Dhangs in Wagar

83 Peha

Rajpoots near Nakhatrana

84 Phul

Mahomedans near Bitta, Tehra, &c

85 Poar

Sindhi Mahomedans

86 Pokarna, or Pushkarna

A numerous class of Brahmans, chiefly from Mârwâr and Scinde priests of the Bhâtiâs

87 Rajar

Mahomedans

88 Raygar

Brahmans of the Audich stock, so called from their accepting the priesthood of the ruling race. They are at present cultivators as well as priests of the Jareias

89 Ramdepotra

A branch of Sodhâ Rajpoots residing in Khâvadâ

90 Râyma

Mahomedins, originally from the Mokalsi Rypoots in the north of Cutch .

91. Reburt, or Bhopa (priests of Mata).

Chiefly tend goats, camels, and flocks of sheep. Their women make wool yarn, from which they get blankets and their sâris woven by the Dhers. They are from Mârwârs, but most of them have the peculiar Persian physiognomy. One of their family names is Agâ, which seems to support their Persian descent, They are tall and robust, and have an oval face and aquiline nose. They live for days almost solely on the milk of camels.

92. Reladina.

Rajpoots about Nirona.

93. Sâchorâ.

Brahman cultivators in the Waghela towns, originally from Marwar.

94, Samá.

Descendants of Jûm Samâ, the son of Jâm Narpat, who built Nagar Samâ in Scinde, and ruled there. His posterity came into Cutch, and settled in Pachham, it is said, about a thousand years ago, where they are still to be found as Mahomedan Grāssiās.

95. Sameja,

A branch of the Samas; herdsmen in Banni,

96. Sanghar.

These were one of the tribes that accompanied the Samās from Seinde. They were subdivided into four castes when they entered Cutch. Other tribes of Rajpoots, such as Chāvara, Chāhurān, &c., joined them; and there are at present seventy-two nukhs, or family names. Some are Mahomedans, and some Hindus; but all worship the Jakhs, which are supposed to be of some foreign race, that saved them from the oppressions of Puvarâ, the brother of Lākhā Phulāni, by killing him. The Hindus are to be found in Kārthi; and the Mahomedans in Ahrāsā, Morāsā, and Māk. They are originally from Arabia.

97. Sáraswat.

Brahmans, chiefly from Scinde; but some have come from Hindustan and Gujerat. They once held important posts under the State, and appear to have played a prominent part in the carly history of Cutch. They are a very numerous class in every part of the province, but are fast degenerating. They are the family priests of the Kshatriyas, Lohanas, &c., with whom they cat, and follow any other employment They have no objection to go to Arabia and Mozum hique They are priests, shopkeepers merchants, sepoys, and gunners

98 Serats

Mahomedans in Bhooj and the village of Serat

99 Sindhal

A hranch of Sodh's Rajpoots in Khadir and Kanthi. They are regarded as Dhangs, because they were once rulers in Puchham. The name is patro nymic

• 100 Strácha

Degenerated Rappoots

101 Sidhā

Hindu and Muhomedan Ruppoots in the north of the province. They cultivate lands, and serve as sepoys

102 Solanklû

Except the Waghelâ Grâssiâs in Wâgâr, there are no Rajpoots of this race in Cutch, but there are many among the Khayâsas bearing this name

103 Sraval, or Jam

Winias, mostly of the Oswâl and Srimâli castes — The former are cultivators and are chiefly in Abrâsâ and K'inthi — They were originally Rajpoots, but were converted to the religion of the Jams by their missionaries

104 Srumâli

Chiefly from Kattywar and Marwar, mostly cultivators in Wagar

105 Sumarâ

Vahomedans from Scuide, where they once ruled. Now they serve as sepoys, and also cultivate land in Påvar and Gard $\hat{a}$

106 Trâyrâ

Hindus and Mahomedans

107 Ustvya

A branch of the Jûrejâs, and hold lands as Hindu Grûssûs  $\,$  Also a clan among the Miyanas

108. Waghela.

Originally from Sardhâr, near Rajkot. Once they were very powerful in the cast of Cutch, but they were subjugated by Mor, the first Samā who came to Cutch, and hy his successors. They still hold some towns of importance in Wâgar and Prantbal, such as Gheri, Belâ, Jatawârâ, Lodrani, Bhimâsar, Palâswâ, and are trihutary to the Bhooj Darbar.

109. Wagher.

The term has nothing to do with Wagar. They are both Hindus and Mahomedans, and serve as sailors. They are also fishermen.

110. IFAnia.

There are nine subdivisions among the Wanias:-

Srimāli.
 Oswāl.

4. Mesri 5. Kandos. Bhojak.
 Sorathia.

3. Modh. 6. Soni.

9. Vaida.

Of these, the Oswâls, Bhojaks, and Srimâlis are Jains; the rest are Vaishnavas. They are also subdivided into Visâs and Dâsâs. Most of the Oswâls are cultivators, and are found in those parts of Cutch where the best soil is available. Srimâlis are from Thal and Mârwar, and are generally engaged in trade. They are chiefly found in the castern parts of Cutch, and Wagar. The Modhs are a political race, and are from Modhera, in Gujerat.

111. Waramsi.

Dhang Rajpoots in Garda and Pavar. They are an offshoot of the Samas.

112. Wen.

Mahomedans who serve as scroys.

CHAPTER X.

THE TRIBES AND CASTES OF GUJERAT

THE BRAHMANICAL TRIBES

Such of the Brihmanical and other tribes as are similar to those of the neighbouring province of Kattywar, already described, will require few additional observations to be made respecting them

A large proportion of the Brahmuns of this province are officials in the Government service. They are also found as priests of temples or of villages and families, landowners, head men, and even as cultivators. The last mentioned class "differ little or nothing in dress and appearance from their hiother hushand men of the country. They are sunburnt and rugged, and exhibit not the sleek skin, or pampered person, which many people associate with the word 'Brahmun'' (a) As cultivators, however, they do not excel, and their villages which they personally cultivate, indicate inferior management.

The Brahmans of Gujerat are mostly Guijars, belonging to the fifth great branch of Drivina Brahmans They have professedly eighty four clans, a complete list of which will be found in the first volume of this work (b) The late Rev Dr Wilson in his hook on Indian Caste, gives a much longer list which apparently embraces not merely Guijars properly so called but also Brahmans of all kinds settled in the province. I have condensed and recast the valuable and important information which he has furnished

The Audichya Tribes

These are divided into eleven clans, and are the most numerous of Brahmans in Gujerat - The clans are as follows ---

1 Siddhpura Audiehya

2 Sihor Audichya

Tolkiya Audichya

These are the three principal castes which hold a very important position socially. They do not intermirry, yet are permitted to eat and drink together

(a) Memoir on the District of Breach by Lieutenant Colonel Mon er Williams. Bombay Government Selections Vol I No III p 45

(b) Hindu Tribes and Castes by the Author Vol. I Part I Chap XVII pp 93-101

The next are much inferior in rank.

4.	Kunbîgor.
5.	Mochigor.
6.	Darjîgor.
7.	Grandhrapagor.

8. Koligor.

Mârwârî Audichya.
 Kachhî Audichya.

Kachhi Audichya.
 Vagadiya Audichya.

Nearly all these castes act as priests or spiritual guides to certain tribes. The Kunbigors are priests to the Kunbis; the Mochigors, to the Mochis, or workers in leather; the Darjigors, to the Darjis, or tailors; the Grandhrapagors, to players; the Koligors, to the Koli tribes; the Mārwāri Audichyas, to the Marwaris; the Kachhi Andichyas, to the Kachhis. The Yagadiya Audichyas are very low socially, and regarded as little better than autcasts. People belonging to the trading and agricultural castes, who think it an honour to take water from Brabmans, refuse to do so from them.

The Audichyas chiefly belong to the north of Gujerat, Cutch, and the western coast of the Gulf of Cambay. In addition to their proper duties as priests they engage in many other occupations, such as, writers, servants, water-carriers, and mendicants.

The Nâgara Tribes.

The Nagaras are largely employed by native chiefs in Gujerat, and consequently possess considerable influence in that province. There are ten principal divisions of these tribes:—

ι.	Vadanagara.	6.	Chitroda.
2.	Vishalnagara.	7.	Barada.
3.	Sathodra.	8.	Gujerati.
1.	Prashnora,	9.	Sorathi.
5.	Krishnora.	10.	Of various towns.

The Vadanagaras are so called from their connexion with the city of Vadanagara, to the east of Anhilavara Pattana; and are found in greatest numbers in Kattywar, where at one time they exercised a powerful influence over the native states. They are met with, however, in many other places of the province of Gujerat.

The Vishalanagaras derive their name from Vishal, which was founded by a king of that name, the first of the Waghela rulers of Gujerat. They are chiefly public servants or agriculturists.

. The Sathodras are from Sathod on the Narbuddba, and are settled at Anand,

Narry ar, Ahmadahad, and elsewhere Some are officials of Government, others are traders, but a good many are priests

The Prachnoras belong to Prashnora, and are attached to the sect of Vallahhacharya, residing chiefly in Kuttywar. Most of them are beggars, but some are truders

The Krishnoras are from Krishnapura, and are chiefly mendicant Brahmans

The Chitrodas are from Chitrod They are a small community, and have a few families at Bhownagar and Baroda

The Baridas are a separate costs formed from the union in marriage of Vishal nagaras with Vadungaras. The parties thus intermarrying heing much despised by their several castes are obliged to quit their village and seek another home.

The Gujeruts, Soruthis, and other Nagura Brahmans have separated from Nagura clans, and have settled down in various towns and villages under new names

General Le Grand Jacob makes the following important observations concerning the Nagara and other Brahmanical tribes in Gujerat—"The Brahmanical priesthood, as a body," he remarks, "can scarcely he said to have any weight in the country. There are no colleges for their education. The fither gives the son such smattering of spuritual matters as may suffice to gain his bread. Some pretend to crist horo-copes, and are consulted on hirths for the purpose. A few are sufficiently versed in the Hindu astronomical tables to he able to calculate echipses, and some three or four of these are well acquainted with Sanskrit, but I doubt whether the whole province could produce one person under the deno miniation of a learned Pundit. The Nagara community is very powerful in the pennisula. They are by profession a corps alphomatque, and devoted to the arts of government. Their principal residence is Junaguch, but there are many families at Nawnagar, Bhowangar, and other large towns. The Nagars are a shrewd rice, and work their way into almost every Durbar by their ability and that. Most of the native servants of Government are of this class. (a)

The Sachora Tribe

These derive their name from the village of Sachora, to the south of Marwar They consequently properly belong to Ruputana, and yet they are always included among the Guijar Brahmans. They perform the office of cooks in the great native houses of Bombay, Surat, Ahmadabad, and elsewhere

(a) Bombay Government Selections Province of Kattywar p 29 quoted in Ind an Caste Vol. II p 93

The Udambara Tribe.

There are two suppositions respecting the origin of this word. Some think that it is derived from the sage Udambara. Others, that it refers to the clothing of the tribe. These Brahmans are few in number, and perform the duties of priests to the lower castes.

The Narsipara Tribe.

These derive their name from the village of Narsipura in Pâlampur. They helong to the Vallabhacharya sect, and perform the duties of priests at the temple of Krishna in Dakor.

The Valâdra, or Varâdra Tribe.

The Valadra Brahmans spring from Valâd or Varâd, a village a few miles from Ahmadabad, and are chiefly found in this and the neighbouring district of Khera. They consist of some fifteen hundred families, divided into thirteen gotras or orders. Many of them are engaged in agriculture and trade; but many are religious mendicants.

The Pangora Tribe.

Brahmans from Mârwâr.

The Nândodra Tribe.

Brahmans from Nandod, a village on the Narbuddha river, above Baroch. A few are cultivators, but the greater portion obtain a livelihood by begging. Some members of the tribe are reputed to be religious teachers to the Rajahs of Kajpipala and Dharampur.

The Girnara Tribes.

These tribes, which are three in number, are found chiefly at the foot of the famous Giraara mountain, although a few families are met with in other parts of Gujerat, as well as in Bomhay. They do not regard themselves as Gurjars, or even as connected with the Panch Drâviras, or five great divisions of Drâviras, but as properly belonging to the Panch Gaurs, or five great divisions of Gaur Brahmans of Northern India. The three branches of Giraâras are as follows:—

Junâgarhya. Chorvâdâ. Ajakiya.

The Junagarhyas derive their name from the old fort of Junagarh at the foot of the Girnara mountain; the Chorvadas, from Chorvar, a town on the coast between Pattana Somnath and Mangrol; and the Ajakiyas, from the village of Ajak. The three castes intermarry and associate freely together. In the opinion of fratidious ligh easte Brahmans they are low in rank, by reason of their pursuing various secular occupations as writers, traders, agriculturists and the like, as well as from their officinting as priests to the Koli tribes and to native chiefs. Dr. Wilson considers them to be a very ancient confederation of Brahmans.

Tle Somapara Tribe

The Somapara Brahmans are priests attached to the temples at Somnath, and others in the same neighbourhood. The original temple at Somnath was destroyed by Mahmud of Ghazm. The most celebrated temple now under the charge of the Somaparas is one erected by the illustrious Ahalya Bai of Indore

The Harsara Tribe

A small community of Brihmans belonging to Harsor or Harsol, on the Messa river, south east of Parintej. They are the family priests of the Harsona morehants and traders, whom they accompany on all their commercial enterprises.

The Syodhra Tribes

Brahmans connected with Sajodh, a town south west of Baroch. They are cultivators, and being liberal minded men, though low Brahmans, do not object to eat with the Bhatelas, an agricultural caste in their neighbourhood.

The Gangaputra Tribe

These are Kananjiya Brahmans from Benares, Allahabad, and other parts of Northern India, who, in their begging expeditions, have found their way to Gujerat, and have finally settled there. They are now regarded no longer as hananiyas but as belonging to the great family of Gurjar Brahmans.

The Morha Manta Tribe

Little is known of this tribe. They are said to be settled in the Khera District.

The Gometra Tribe

These are held to have spring from either the Kanaujiya or Saraswat Brahmans They inhabit Ambiji Wâtâ, south east of Mount Aboo

The Sra Gaura Trabe

Brahmans originally from Northern India, now living in the districts of Khera and Ahmadahad, and also in Bombay. They are chiefly Vaishnavas of the Swami Narayana sect.

The Gurjara Gaura Tribe.

These also are probably Gaur Brahmans from Northern India, who, from residing in Gujerat, have in general opinion become blended with the Gurjars. Some are styled Shivâlas (or worshippers of Shiva), and others Upâdhyas.

The Karera, or Karetha Tribe.

A hranch of the Karhada division of the Maharashtra Brahmans, dwelling in the Idar pergunnah.

The Vayara Tribe.

A small number of Brahmans from the island of Bet, who are family priests of the Vayara banyas, or merchants, of Khera, Ahmadabad, and Bombay.

The Mercara Tribes.

Brahmans from Mewâr in Rajpootana. Those settled in Gujerat are divided into three separate castes:—

1. Bhata Mewâra. | 2. Trivâri Mewâra. | 3. Chaurâst Mewâra.

The Bhata Mewâras dwell in Khera and Khombât. The Trivâri Mewâras are also in the Khera District, especially at Nargar, Kapadwanj, and Dakor, where they are chiefly religious mendicants. Some, bowever, have heen found in the Mahratta country below Poona, where they were small traders. The Chaurâsi Mewâras are in the Guicowar's territories, as well as in the Khera District; and are, for the most part, beggars.

The Dravira Tribes.

The Dravirus are doubtless Brahmans from the south, occasionally visiting Gujerat for religious or mercantile purposes.

The Deshavala Tribes.

These probably are among the earliest Brahmans who settled in Gujerat. They are chiefly attached to Khera. Yet there is a distinct branch of the tribe in Surat. Hence it is divided properly into two castes:—

1. Deshavala.
 2. Deshavala Brahman Surai.

The Rayakarala Tribe

There are two castes of this tribe, which hold no intercourse with each other, namely —

- 1 Nana or Nava-the httle or new ones
- 2 Motha or Junu-the great or old ones

The Rayakavalas are found in various parts of Gujerat, especially in Khera and also in Cutch They are family priests of the Ray of Cutch

The Rodhavala Tribe

These are agriculturists, traders, servints, and mendicants, in Mahikanta and the neighbourhood of Vankanir. At one time they by under the imputation of fiechooters

The Kheravala Tribes

These tribes are four in number, and derive their name from the town of Khora or Kaira, where they are chiefly settled

- Kherāvala Bāja
- Kherâva Bâja
- 2 Kherāvala Bhitara 4 Kherāva Bhita

The two castes of Bijas, and the two castes of Bhitaras, can eat together

The Sindhuidla, or Sindhava Sûraswat Tribe

Brahmans from Scinde, dwelling principally in Kattywar Some also are met with in Cutch and elsewhere. They are very liberal as Brahmans, inasmuch as they will sit down to dinner with the Lohâna and Bhansâh merchants, on whom they attend as priests, and will allow their widows to remarry. They instain from the use of animal food, however, although the members of the original caste in Scinde partake of it.

The Padmisâla Tribe

In Gujerat there are a small community of Brahmans of the Padma, or lotus flower

The Gomativâla Tribe

Rehgious mendicants Brahmans of the river Gomti

From Gokula, a place sacred to Krishna They are priests in the temples of Krishna at Bet, Dwarka, and Dakor In Bombay they are enthusiastic 1 2 supporters of the sect of Vallahhâchâryas; but are not held in much repute by Brahmans generally.

The Napala Tribe.

A small community of Brahmans from Napa, a village near Borsad, engaged m agricultural pursuits.

The Anavala, or Bhatela Tribe.

These are chiefly cultivators and traders from Anâval, a village near Wasda, forty miles from Surat. The rice growers among them are called Bhatela, and also Mastâna, a common designation of agricultural Brahmans in many parts of India.

The Sri Mali Tribes.

The tribes hearing this name, although now, for the most part, distinct and separate, so that they neither intermarry, nor eat and drink together, were formerly one and the same tribe, having, it is said, sprung from Srimâl, the modern Bhinmal, to the north-west of Aboo. "The Aryan physiognomy," says the Rev. Dr. Wilson, "is perhaps more distinctly marked in them than in any other class of Brahmans in India; and this indicates but little mixture of blood connected with them since their first settlement in India. They do not appear to differ much from the type of some of the European untions, especially of those who have claims to Roman descent. Their costume is generally of a simple, but not unbecoming, character. Their turhans are on the whole of a graceful form, though not so large as those of many of the other natives of India. On their brows they wear the sectorial marks of the Vishnavas" (a). The Sri Malis are scattered over a wide tract of country, and are found in several of the Rajputana States, in Gujerat, in Cutch, and in Central India. Many are priests to the families of Srimali and other Vaisya merchants; not a few are religious mendicants; and a considerable number are engaged in secular pursuits. The celebrated poet Magha, who lived in the time of the Bhoja Rajah, was a Sri Mâli. The names of the several tribes are as follows :--

The Barathana Tribe.

Brahmans so designated from a village of the same name in Mârwâr, and located on the banks of the Narhaddha above Baroch.

The Pushkarana, or Pokharana Tribe.

From the Pushkar or Pokhar Lake, near Ajmere. "The Pakharna Brahmans," says Dr. Irvine, "are said to have been Beldars who dug out Pushkar Lake, and in consequence were created Brahmans. They still worship the hodhali or pick-axe at the Dasahra festival" (a). These Brahmans are traders, chiefly in the employ of Mārwāri merchants. They are at Kheda, and also in Bombay.

The Sarasmata Tribes.

There are two tribes of these Brahmans, who were originally connected with the great Sâraswati tribe in Northern India, but are now scattered about Gujerot, Kattywar, and other tracts, as far as Bomhay. These are—

Sorathiya.
 Sindhaya.

The Sorathiyas are priests to Khatri and Parajya (or goldsmith) families; while the Sindhavas are priests of the Lohanas and Bhansalis. Some of these Brahmans are teachers. The two tribes do not coalesce in the smallest degree. Neither tribe eats animal food in Gujerat; but the Sindhavas eat it in their own country of Scinde.

The Khadayata Tribe.

This tribe has sprung from Khadât on the Vatrak, in the Kheda District, where they chiefly remain, although some have settled in Ahmadabad and Baroch. They are teachers and family priests.

The Uthala Tribe

Orussa Brahmans residing at Dehaguum, north of Ahmadabad, and gaining a livelihood as cultivators and religious teachers

The Pallivâla Tribe.

A tribe of Kanaujiya Brahmans scattered over a wide tract of country, having sprung originally from Pâli, the commercial capital of Mârwâr. Some of them are settled in Gujerat, and one or two families also in Bombay. They are exceedingly strict in matters of caste. "They do not drink the water of the houses of their own daughters, or of any persons not belonging to their own caste. They do not eat with those of their own caste who have become isolated from them" (a). Dr. Irvine states, that the Pallivâl and Nandânâ Brahmans of Rajputana were formerly notorious robbers, and pursued their nefarious business on horseback. Afterwards they became traders, yet to the present time they worship the bridle at the Dasahra festival.

The Mathura Tribe.

Brahmans from Mathura.

The Maithila Tribe.

Maithila Brahmans, visitors from Northern India in Gujerat.

The Kulabha Tribe.

Illegitimate Brahmans.

CHAPTER XI.

THE TRIBES AND CASTES OF GUJERAT -(Continued)

THE RAJPOOT TRIBES

1-CHURASAMA 2-WAOHELA OR BAGELA 3-GOHEL, 4-JHALA 6-THAKURRA. 6-SAMMA 7-PARKAR 8-JHAREJA. 9-GARASIA. 10-GODHAVI GARASIA.

Sour of the principal Rajpoot tribes of Kattywar have formed settlements in the Talookdaree districts of Ahmedabad The dynastic revolutions in Kattywar previously to the commencement of the eighteenth century were the immediate cause of the migration of members of the great Rajpoot houses to this part of the country Rajpoots are not only land owners, but also cultivators of the land The chief tribes are the following (a)

I - The Churasama Trabe

These are descended from the Hindoo dynasty of Joonighur, overthrown by the Moguls at the close of the fifteenth century. They have possession of unwards of forty villages in the Pargannah of Dhundooka

See also the accounts of the Charasama Tribe of hattywar

II -The Waghela, or Baghela Tribe

These are styled Baghela in the North-Western Provinces, and are a branch of the Solvakhts

This tribe is chiefly resident in the Dholka Pargannah, where it possesses upwards of fifty villages. They preceded the Jharques in the occupation of Cutch, and are now next to them in rank and influence. "The village of Geerce, south of Beyla, and east of the islands of Poolum and Khuren, is," says Lieutenant Dodd, in his brief account of Cutch, "the residence of the chief of the Cutch Wa_helas," a portion of the same clan which formerly possessed sovereignty at the ancient Anhalwara, now Pattan, near Deesa. "Local tradition," he adds, "states the ancient name of Geera to have been Verat Nuggur, and that fourteen hundred years ago it was a large town. It claims to have heen the hiding-place of the Panduas; but it must contest this distinction with the modern Dholka in Gujerat. Beyond an ancient temple, with a stone hearing an inscription about nine hundred years old, there is at present nothing else of note in the place" (a). The principal Waghela feudatory chiefs of Cutch, are those of Geeree, Beyla, Lodrani, Palanswah, and Jathwarra.

The Waghelas are likewise found at Deodur, in Northern Gujerat.

III .- The Gohel Tribe.

They established themselves at Perim many centuries ago. The Gohels have nearly the whole of the Gogo District, or more than fifty villages, in their possession. See the account of the Gohel tribe of Kattywar.

IV .- The Jhala Tribe.

The Jhalas are related to the Waghelas, and were originally called Makwanas. They are settled in Dhundooka, where they possess nearly fifty villages. They have also a small estate in Dholka, and four important villages in Choowal of Veerumgaum. See the account of the Jhala tribe of Kattywar.

V .- The Thakurras.

The Thakurras of the Choowal are said to be descended from intermarriages hetween the Solankhi, Makwana, and Koli tribes. The Thakurra Makwanas have twenty villages in Choowal, and the Thakurra Solankhis, forty-three, in whole or in part, situated in the same tract.

VI.—The Samma Tribe.

An ancient tribe of the province, progenitors of the present race of Jharejas. It occupies seven villages on the Island of Puchum, one of the largest islands in the Great Runn of Cutch.

VII.—The Pârkar Tribe.

These are connected with the ancient Soda family. A branch of the tribe is the Padria clan, which held rule over the country around Geeree hefore the Waghelas. Some of these also, under Sindhal, their leader, entered the Island of Khuren, in the Great Runn, where their descendants are still found.

VIII -The Jhareja Tribe

Prior to the ninth century, the dominant races in Cutch were Chauras, Kathis and Waghelas, the first being in possession on its western side, the second, in the middle of the country and on its southern side, and the third, on the eastern division. The Jhurejas entered the province from Scinde. They took possession of Wagur, on the east of Cutch, having wrested it from the Waghelas, who were ohliged to retire to the north. The Jharejas are now a powerful community in that country, and their principal feudatory chiefs are those of Kunkote, Cheetrore, Wandia, Ardysir, Lukreea, Kanmeer, and Sanwah. The tribe extends to Kattywur, Hallar, and Machoo Kanta. It was formerly noto rous for the practice of female infanticide. Its class are numerous. Many of them are as follows.—

At their funeral obseques the Rajgor, on the twelfth day of mourning is placed on the cot of the deceased whom he simulates. He is then taken up and borne to the spot where the Jhareja was hurnt, the relations of the deceased following in the procession as in a real funeral. The crowd, however, pelt the unfortunate Rajgor with stones and every available missile, so that he is obliged to leave the cot and to fly precipitately for safety. The intention of this violence is to frighten away the evil genius. This peculiar ceremony is also practised by other tribes (a).

The Jharejas of Cutch marry into all the Rajpoot families of Gujerat, Khurr, and Parkur. Their principal taluqas, or haronial estates, in Kattywar are Nowanuggur, Gondal, Rajkot, Moorvee, and Dherol.

This tribe has possessions in Choredar and Churchut, in Northern Gujerat.

Colonel Tod says of the Jharejas, that they are "the most important tribe of the Yadu race next to the Bhati. The modern Jhareja," he adds, "who from circumstances has so mixed with the Mahomedans of Scinde as to have forfeited all pretensions to purity of blood,—partly in ignorance, and partly to cover disgrace,—says that his origin is from Sham, or Syria, and of the stock of the Persian Jamshid. Consequently, Sam has been converted into Jam, which epithet designates one of the Jhareja petty governments, the Jam Raj"(b).

IX.—The Garasia Tribe.

Descendants of the original Rajpoots of the country. They are professedly of the Waghela stock, and are divided into two hranches, each having its own chief. Their estates are supposed to have been formed at the commencement of the Mahomedan power in the country. The two hranches are in possession of fifty-two villages in Dhalka.

X .- The Godhavi Garasta Tribe.

Although originally only a hranch of the Garasias, they are a separate tribe, and have been so since they first settled in the country. The tribe occupies two villages in Dholka.

SECTION I .- AGRICULTURAL TRIBES

1. The Battellah Caste.

Known also as the Anavala or Mastan Caste

These are very numerous both in the Districts of Surat and Broach. They are energetic and industrious cultivators, and are successful tillers of the soil, an which operation they are assisted by their Halees, or hereditary servants. Socially, they occupy a high rank, to which position they are naturally entitled by their intelligence and education. They are said to be as quick-witted as Brahmans; and most of them have acquired the art of reading and writing. As a class, they are wealthy and respectable, living in comfortable dwellings, are well clothed, and if not contented, ought to be. Judging, bowever, from their litigiousness, love of intrigue, deceitfulness, quarrelsomeness, and the like vices, they are far from being a happy or contented race. Paying inordinate attention to their own interests, envious and jealons of the rights of others, they are by no means a loveable people, or a people easy to manage. One who know them well says of them, "that they will dispute an usurped right, or the doubtful possession of a field or a tree, with a pertinacity unequalled even among the natives of India. Neither reason nor argument can ever convince them; and after petitioning every tribunal of appeal, I believe death alone puts an end to many of their inveterate disputes about land."

2. Borah.

The Borahs are Mahomedans, and are of calm and placid disposition, presenting a striking contrast to the impetnosity and excitability of the Battellahs. They are excellent agriculturists; but those in Ahmedabad lack the untiring energy of the latter, and also their enterprise. For example, 'they can grow as good crops of rice, and cotton, on well selected soil, but are not so ready to build wells, to improve the culture of the land, or to introduce superior crops.' Nor indeed do they pay the same attention to the neatness and excellence of their dwellings. They are numerous in the Soopa and Chicklee Districts. Nevertheless, a different character is given of the Borahs of Broach, who are described as "the most active, industrious, and skilful cultivators of the zillah or district, as the appearance and resources of their villages indicate. There are forty-five villages in the Broach Pargannah, seventeen in the Unklesur, two in the Hansot, thirteen in the Jumboosur, and seven in the Amod, in which the patels and bhagdars, local representatives of the people, are Borahs; and some of the most intelligent men that were met with during the survey, were among this class of the inhabitants. Their habits and manners are equally temperate and simple with those of the Hindoos; but the Borahs are a more bold and sturdy race" (a). These Borahs are divided into two branches, namely,-those on the north bank of the Narbuddha, who are distinct from those on the southern bank beyond the Unklesur Pargannah, and on the banks of the Taptee, and will not intermarry with them. Their ancestors are supposed to have been for the most part Rajpoots and Kolis, who were converted to Mahomedanism in the time of Sultan Mahomed Begra, of Gujerat. All the Borahs speak Gujeratee, and not Hindustani, like other Mahomedan cultivators. They have a particular cast of countenance, and wear a beard of a peculiar cut, so that they are readily distinguishable from the other inhabitants of the country (b).

The agricultural Borahs must not be confounded with the trading Borahs, who are a distinct tribe.

3 Kunht

There is a large class of Kunbis in Gujerat. They are well clothed, live in good houses, and are quiet and inoffensive. Yet while they cultivate largely, they are not so industrious and active as either the Battellabs or Borths. Activith standing the ability of many Kunbis to read and write, still, as a race, they are somewhat heavy and dull. This is perhaps a characteristic of the caste generally throughout India. In Surat they are content, for the most part, to cultivate what may be termed inferior crops in contradistinction to the superior grains, such as wheat and barley.

The Kunhis are divided into a number of hranches, some of which are as follows --

1 —The Karwa Clan
2 —The Lewa Clan

3 —The Aujua Clan

The first two clans are excellent agriculturists, and are much superior in social position to the third clan

These are numerous in the Ahmedahad District, but are not acknowledged in any way by the first two clans, which will bold no intercourse with them They eat the flesh of several kinds of animals, but bave an aversion to birds of every species. The Aujnas make better cultivators than Rajpoots, yet are inferior to the two other Kunbt clans (a)

The Karwa Kunbis of Veerungaum came originally from Champaneer The principal cultivators in the District of Broach are Kunhis, especially, of the Leve Clan Colonel Williams speaks of them 'as peaceable as they are industrious,' and as being 'doubtless the most valuable subjects of the State in this quarter' 'No Hindoos,' he adds, 'are more particular as to the simplicity of their food, or more rigid in abstinence from using anything as such that has had life—in this, differing widely from the Kunbis of the Dekhan (b)

A singular custom prevails among the Karwa Kunhis throughout Gujerat of celebrating their marriages only on one particular day of the year. An order is issued by the chiefs of the tribe residing at the town of Oonjah, in the Puttun District, appointing a certain day, which is obeyed by the members of the caste everywhere

4. The Kolt and Mâchi Tribes.

These trihes are inferior to the three preceding, in habits, intelligence, dress, style of cultivation, and in many other respects, showing in fact a marked difference in their civilization. They live in rude houses, wear very scanty clothing, are addicted to opium and spirits, and make no pretence to the decorum and respectability exhibited by the races already described. They content themselves commonly with the growth of rice, naglee, and jowarce. Many of these tribes are found on the sca-coast, where they pursue the occupation of fishermen, their wives cultivating the soil. By reason of their proneness to intoxication and to their privations, they are a short-lived people. The Kolis are often tenants on the estates of Battellahs and Kuubis.

The Kolts of Broach hear an excellent character for the industry and skill which they exhibit in cultivation. Some of the finest villages in the Hansot Pargamah are held by Koli head-men, and are peopled by the tribe. Drunkenness is very little known among the agricultural Kolis.

These trihes are very numerous among the districts and principalities of the north of Gujerat.

See also the chapter on the Kolt tribes for further information respecting them.

5. The Kalaparraj Tribes.

This is a general term, and is applied to various dark-skinned inferior tribes, such as the Durio, Naiko, Chaudri, and others. The word 'halaparraj' is derived from kala, black, and paraja, a subject. These tribes once occupied the hill districts and the country at the foot of the Ghauts, from which they have migrated to Surat. They are bad cultivators, and are satisfied with meagre crops and coarse grain. In person, these races are small in stature, dark in color, and of well knit frame. They are expert in the use of bow and arrow, and in hunting game. Ignorant, superstitious, and almost destitute of religion, and at the same time poor, improvident, ill-clothed, and deep in debt to rapacious sharks of Banyans and Marwaris. Their condition, if judged by European standards, is one of deplorable misery. They have no temples, no priests, and apparently no idols, though they sometimes reverence a tree, sometimes a stone, placed hy nature in a curious position. The belief in witchcraft has such a powerful influence over their minds, that often the death of a child, a cow, or even of a few fowls, is sufficient to induce a whole family to forsake their fields and crops, and to make them return to the wilds of their native forest (a).

(a) Report on the Southern Districts of the Surat Collectorate, by A. F. Bellasis, Esq. Selections from the Bombay Government Records, No. II, New Series, pp. 1-6.

6 Momm

The Momuns are Hindu converts to Mahomedanism, yet continue to preserve many of their Hindu narges — For example, marriage rites and other ceremonies are directed by Brihmans—as well as by Vahomedan Kazis — The women dress like ordin ury Hindus, but the men are hurdly distinguishable from the Borah tribe — They hear a good character as cultivators — There are many Vomuns in the Ahmedaniegur District

7 Saturard

These are properly gardeners, and when this to gain a livelihood by this pursuit do not engage like other agriculturists in field cultivation but confine their labours to their own gardens, which are generally in the neighbourhood of towns and villages

. 8 Naroda

Professedly half caste Rupoots, descended from the slaves kept in the house hold and court of the rulers of Puttun in former times. The pure Rupoots keep them at a distance, and treat them in a superchlors manner. They, however, dress like Rupoots, eat their food in the same fashion, and often exhibit the fine features, for which Rupoots are distinguished. The tribe only intermarry among themselves. They are a small community, and are found in Veerungaum in one or two districts of Kattywar, and in Rhadunpoor, where their principal men reside. The population of the Khalsa villages chiefly consists of Narodas, who are solely engaged in the pursuit of husbandry. The appellation of the tribe is derived from nar, the voke of a bullock (a)

9 Jat

These seem to be a different race from the Jats of Scinde, although they derive their origin from them. The Scinde Jats are described as a degraded and inserable people, whereas the Jats of Alimedabad are possessed of some noble qualities, and have rather a fine physique. They inhabit a truct called from them Jatwar, and are subject to a cline residing at Bujiana. There is close intercourse subsisting between them and the Jats of Waraee, in Wuddeear. They are, for the most part, cultivators, 'but in disturbed times they are notorous for the daring and destructive character of their predatory excursions'. These Jats form a confederation of themselves, being separated from neighbouring tribes; and are in possession of twelve small villages. They have their own Kazi, who directs all their ceremonics as Mahomedans. Their dress is that ordinarily worn by the inhabitants of dhalawar.

For information respecting the Jats of Scinde, see the chapter on the Tribes and Castes of that Province (a).

10. Samejra.

Like the last tribe, these are attached to the Mahomedan faith, and trace the descent from a tribe which originally came from Scinde. Indeed, they are sometimes said to have been slaves of the Jats, when the latter migrated to Gujerat. They are a small community, and inhabit a few villages near the Null.

11. The Malik, or Sipahi Tribe.

A tribe of Mahomedan cultivators in Broach. They are an industrious people, speaking the Hindustani language.

12. The Saiyids.

Another Mahomedan class of cultivators, who are skilful and laborious in husbandry.

13. The Khans.

Also Mahomedau agriculturists. They are an industrious race, and dress like most other tribes following the same pursuit.

11. Bharot or Bhat.

In Gujerat many of this tribe are engaged exclusively in cultivation. In Broach, for example, they have as a people almost entirely abandoned the profession of genealogists, bards, story-tellers, and the like, for which the tribe is still famous in other parts of India, and devote them-elves to agriculture. Individual Bhats, however, are undoubtedly still found in many villages pursuing their lereditary occupation. In Broach, the cultivating Bhats are most numerous in the Hausot Pargannah.

Fornerly, the person of the Bhat was held peculiarly sacred. Bhat security was in common use in the revenue and judicial proceedings throughout Gujerat, from Dwarka to Surat, and was once almost the only species of security obtained from the chieftains of Kattywar, either for the payment of their revenue, or for

11. The Kusbatees.

These are Mahomedans, but descendants of two races. Some are pure Mahomedans of the Belooch and Pathân tribes. The rest are converts from the Parimar tribe of Rajpoots. Their ancestors came from Aboo to Kattywar, where one of their chiefs adopted the Mahomedan faith, and in the year 1480 received Ranpoor in Dhundooka, as a present from Mahamud Begura, the sovereign of Gujerat. His younger brother embraced the same creed, and was rewarded with the gift of Botad in Dhundooka, which being afterwards lost to the family, they removed to Dholka.

The Kushatees are thus designated because they reside in a kasha or town, in contradistinction to rural chiefs. They possess about a dozen villages in Dhundooka, eighteen in Dholka, and eight in Choowal of Veeramgaum. They are found also in other parts of Gujerat. In the Alimedabad District there are few Kushatees of position and influence. "They are generally poor, broken down, and enervated by the constant use of opinun, and seem wholly incapable of any useful exertion. Many of them in disturbed times entered the service of petty princes and chiefs; and were once considered a powerful body. They hold much free land, and generally enjoy immunity from taxation; but the only advantage they derive from such indulgence is a life of more complete indolence than they could otherwise afford to pass. Some are farmers; but for this occupation they have neither capital nor capacity" (a).

This tribe has three divisions, or dehelas, each of which being under the authority of a separate head-man. Some of them are employed as watchmen, to protect travellers or merchandise. As such they are faithful to their trust, and will fight desperately if attacked.

12. Charun.

This tribe is settled in the villages of Bodana, Charunkee, Goria, and Bela, of the Dhundooka Pargamah, Dholka, Kaira, Broach, and elsewhere. They much resemble the Bharots or Bhâts in their habits and pursuits; but are more frequently engaged in trade and money-dealing. Some of them are addicted to the use of intoxicating spirits.

13. Gosace.

The Gosaces occupy four villages in Dhundooka.

25 Rebârî or Bharwar

Shepherds, goatherds, and camel breeders, scattered about the province They do not live in villages or towns. In manners, appearance, and dress, they differ greatly from the rest of the inhabituits. The Rebirs are very simple in their libits, and lead a perfectly rural life. There are many of the tribe in the level country of Jumboosur, Amod, Debey, and Hansot, towards the sea, where pasturage is easily procurable. See also the section on this tribe in the chapter on the Tribes of hattywar.

26. Dher.

This is a very extensive tribe scattered over several districts of Gujerat. Their duties are, "to carry the haggage of all travellers as far as the next village on the road; to act as village scavengers, and, occasionally, as village watchmen; to convey letters from the public functionaries and head-men to the next village, thence to he forwarded by a Dher or Bhangi of that place on the road to their destination. Money also, or other valuables, is sent in this manner with perfect safety; and they are intelligencers, and know well how to show houndaries" (a). "Spinning and weaving are principal occupations of the Dher; hy which, and other means, they get a very good livelihood. In some villages, they pay a tax. The coarse cloth worn by all the cultivating classes, is manufactured by them. The Dhers in general are distinguished by a peculiar appearance of strength, activity, and energy. They have clean skins, and well made persons; and commonly speak hetter Hindustani than any of the other villagers, excepting the Bhangis. They drink liquor, and eat opium; but are rarely seen in a state of intexication. The Dhers stand in the lowest division of the scale of Hindu caste; but the ties of caste are no less hinding with them than with those who stand higher in that scale. Nor is the punishment of expulsion from caste less severe to them than to others. Upon the whole, they may be considered as on a footing with their fellow-villagers as to the enjoyments of life. There is scarcely an instance of a Dher of this part of the country entering into our regular battalions, which would be exchanging infamy, scorn, and degradation (if such be really their lot), for the road to promotion, distinction, and, comparatively, riches. The houses of the Dhers, Bhangis, and Kalpas, commonly form a quarter of the village distinct from the rest" (b). This statement of Colonel Williams respecting the habits and vocations of the Dhers is interesting and important for its appositeness and clearness.

27. Bhangi.

The Bhangis are a well-known tribe of outcasts in Northern India and other parts of the country. Their occupation everywhere seems to be the same, namely, that of scavengers. In Gujerat, they are below the Dhers in social rank, who will neither eat with them, nor intermarray with them. The Bhangis are usually employed by villages for the removal of filth, sweeping houses, and the

THE TRIBES AND CASTES OF PAHLUNPOOR, RADHUNPOOR, WARYE, TERWARA, THURAD AND MORWARA, WAO, SOOE-GAUM, DEODUR, SANTULPOOR AND CHARCHUT, BHABHUR, AND KANKRUJ.

SEC I.—THE BRAHMANICAL TRIBES SEC H.—THE RAJPOOT TRIBES SEC III.—THE BANYA TRIBES. SEC IV.—THE SHUDRA AND INFERIOR TRIBES. SEC V.—THE MAHOMEDAN TRIBES.

These native states are combined together under one political superintendency, which bears the designation of Pahlunpoor, the first named. There are many tribes and castes scattered about these small principalities, the chief of which are the following:—

SECTION I .- THE BRAHMANICAL TRIBES.

- Audich.
   Sahasra Audich.
   Srigar.
- Srimālī.
   Mhor.
- 4. Maiwara. 10. Raghar.
- 5. Omiwal. 11. Pargîya. 6. Tappodan. 12. The Sacl
- 6. Tappodan. 12. The Sachora.

Many of these Brahmans cultivate the soil, and are lax in their religious observances. They are consequently little esteemed by Brahmans of other provinces in India.

The Tappodan are exceedingly lax Brahmans. They commonly marry women of other castes. Some are clever bricklayers.

SECTION IL-THE RAJPOOT TRIBES

The Rajpoots are extensive landowners, and boast of many chiefs of rank and wealth. Some take service as sepoys. The tribes are as follows:—

- Parmar.
   Waghela.
- 2. Solankhi. 6. Chauwan.
- Gohel.
   Rathor.
- 4. Chaura. 8. Dioli.

The Banyas are men of intelligence and wealth, and are merchants, traders, bankers, shopkeepers, and the like

SECTION IV -THE SHUDRA AND INFERIOR TRIBES

I -The Kunbis

Leora

2 Anuna 3 Anrwa

The Leoras are an industrious class of cultivators, and are a thriving and respectable people

The Anjunas are fond of spirits, and cat animal food. They are said to be "dissipated in their liabits, indifferent cultivators, and, consequently, but little respected." The claim sets up a claim to a Rappoot origin.

The Karwas are, like the Leoras, excellent cultivators. "In this caste, marriages only occur once in ten or twelve years; and as it is considered disgraceful to possess a grown-up daughter unmarried, the parents take care to avoid this disgrace by marrying their children, however young, even a few days after birth, when the time for the marriages of the caste arrives" (a).

II.—The Bhats.

These are genealogists, securities for chiefs, attendants on family and public ceremonies. Some are also hankers and money-lenders. Every Rajpoot and Koli chief has his family Bhat, "who keeps a record of his pedigree, and acts as referee in all matters connected with race or blood."

III .- Charon.

The occupation of the Charons is, in many respects, very similar to that of the Bhats.

IV .- Tarqhalla.

These are said to be of Brahmanical descent. They are strolling players, mimics, and the like; and are found at fairs and great public assemblages.

V.-Bhan.

Itinerant players, like the Targhallas. By abuse, and threatening to injure themselves, they extort money from timid persons.

VI .- The Gosains, Wargis, Attths, and Saniyasis.

Religious wandering mendicants. Some of them associate together here, as in other parts of India, in maths, or monasteries, to which lands are attached. Some are hankers and money-lenders. The occupants of the monasteries are cellbates. The rest, however, may marry.

VII.-The Kapris, Kamrias, Dakotras, and Turis.

Non-religious wandering mendicants.

VIII .- The Koli Tribes.

In these principalities many of the Kolis profess to have spring from Rajpoots; and assert that they were degraded from their original position through

XXXII.-The Bheel Tribes.

These are regarded by the Kolis as greatly inferior to themselves. Their estates pay no tax. They have no chiefs like the Kolis. Formerly, the Bheels were incorrigible thieves.

XXXIII.-Naroda.

A numerous class of cultivators, who have lost caste by marrying women of lower rank than themselves.

XXXIV.-Alir.

Numerous in Santulpoor and Charchut. They are good cultivators.

SECTION V .- THE MAHOMEDAN TRIBES.

The Sayids.

These are chiefly from North-Western India. Those in Pahlunpoor came there in 1698 in the train of Diwan Kamal Khan, when expelled by the Rathors from Jhalore.

2. The Sheikhs.

Like the Sayids, these originally came from North-Western India. It is customary with them to prefix to their names the province or state from which they originally proceeded, as Behâri, from Behar; Nagori, from Nagore. Those who have sprung from Rajpoots adopt Rajpoot tribal names for patronymics, as Rathor, Chauwan, Parmar, and the like.

3. The Borahs.

This tribe came originally from Arabia. They speak Arabic, and read and write that language, and are industrious traders.

4. The Patháns.

These are of Afghan origin, and are called after the tribes to which they belong, or after the country from which they have come, as Multani Pathan, Moghul Pathan, Belooch Pathan. Some are landed proprietors.

5 The Mihmans

This tribe is said to be descended from the Lohinn Banyas of Scinde They are industrious traders, like the Borahs

The Mohmans

CHAPTER XIV.

TRIBES AND CASTES OF COORG.

I—THE AMMA, OR AMMAKODAGA, OR KAVERI BRAHMANS. II—THE KODAGAS, OR COOBGS.
III.—THE AMMRCHAS, OR GOLLAS IV.—THE BEGADES, V—THE AINY, OR BADIGE TRIBE.
VI.—THE KAVATI TRIBL VII—THE PALEYAS. VIII.—THE KURUBA TRIBES IX.—THE YERATMAS. X.—THE MEDAS. XI.—THE HOLSTAS.

A nrief, clear, and well-arranged account of these tribes and castes has heen drawn up by the Rev. G. Richter, at the request of the Mysore Government. This has heen executed with such taste and skill, that I have deemed it advisable to introduce it into this work with but little alterntion.

I.—The Amma, or Ammakodaga, or Kaveri Brahmans.

The Ammakodagas live principally in the south-western parts of Coorg, and are the indigenous priesthood, devoted to the worship of Amma, the Kaveri goddess. They are of a quiet, unohtrusive character; do not intermarry with other Coorgs; and are, generally speaking, inferior to them in personal appearance and strength of body. Their number is about fifty. They are unlettered, and devoid of Brahmanical lore. Their diet is vegetable food only; and they abstain from drinking liquor. There are very old men among them of more than seventy years of age. The dress of the men and women is similar to that of the rest of the Coorgs.

II .- The Kodagas, or Coorgs.

The Coorgs are the principal inhalitants of Coorg, and lords of the soil-From among them the native officials are chosen. Their principal occupation is agriculture and hunting. They disdain all low and menial lahour, and show but little taste for learning, as they have been illiterate for ages, and without the means of education until lately. They are of a warlike, fierce, and revengeful character, and of proud and manly appearance. Their stature is tall; and they are muscular and broad-chested. Their complexion is rather fair to light brown, with dark brown to black eyes, and black straight hair. They live on vegetable and animal food, beef excepted; and are particularly fond of game and pork, with plentful libations of brandy, the use of which has greatly increased of late, and drunkenness in consequence. Though much subjected to fever, the Coorgs are generally healthy, and live to a great age. There are still men alive who were present at the fall of Seringapatam.

Their religious observances are very superstations. The principal are 1, demon worship, 2, worship of the dead, and 3, worship of Amma, the goddess of the Kaveri Bruhmans, to whom they offer fruit and money. The worship of the demons and of the dead is accompanied by sacrifices of fowls and pigs.

The dress of the Coorgs is peculiar and very becoming, and is well adapted to the cold and wet climate. The men wear a long white or hime coat, beld together with a red sash, in which the never fuling Coorg kmife is inserted. The head is covered with a kerchief or turban. Their weapons are a small and large kmife, and a matchlock gun. The proudest ornament of the men is the gold medal given to them by the British Government for services rendered in 1837 when quelling an insurrection. Some men wear on fissive occasions the peculiar komba topi, or horn shaped hat, a precious gift of the late Rajah to distinguished warriors. It is made of red cloth, and has a double band round it. The two horns and the cockade are of solid gold.

The Coorg women are decently dressed Over a white or light blue jacket the blue or white shire tied together over the left shoulder, and a cross barred red kerchief of good size lightly knotted at the back, form a pretty head dress Gold and silver chains, earrings, nose and finger rings, are the common ornaments

III -The Armbhulas, or Gollas

Herdsmen There are but six families of the Aimbkula caste in Coorg They are cultivators, and conform in every respect to the Coorgs in their mode of life, and in superstitions and festivals, but are of inferior rank. They dress also like the Coorgs, but the latter do not eat or intermarry with them in appearance and complexion they are not so well favoured as the Coorgs, and are also less keen in warlike pursuits

IV —The Hegades

A tribe of cultivators Of the Hegades there are but fifty families now in Coorg They are emigrants from Maliyalim, and have principally settled in Yeddenalkimaad, in the south of Coorg In dress, mode of life, and wor ship, they conform to the Coorgs, but are not acknowledged as equals by the latter, who do not eat or intermarry with them, and in their company the Hegades must sit on the ground, whilst the Coorgs occupy chairs. They are independent cultivators. In appearance and complexion they resemble the Coorgs.

V .- The Ainy, or Badige Tribe.

Workers in wood and iron. This tribe furnishes Coorg with its smiths and earpenters. There are about thirty families of them in the country. In all respects they are like the Coorgs, with one exception, namely, that of intermarriage with them.

VI.-The Kâvati Tribe.

There are only a few families of this tribe in Yeddenalkunaad, who were emigrants from Mysore in Hyder Ah's time. They have also conformed themselves to the Coorgs in their dress and habits; but the latter preserve the same distance from them as from the other tribes. In bodily strength and appearance the Kavatis are inferior to the Coorgs. Their complexion also is darker, and their features are more pointed.

VII.—The Paleyas.

Farm labourers. The Paleyas have come from the Tulu and Malayalim country into Coorg, where they are now settled; some being dependant on the Coorgs, others cultivating their own little farms. Some dress like Coorgs; others in the fashion of the low-country. Their occupation is the cultivation of the soil, and the manufacture of mats and umbrellas.

The habits of this tribe are like those of the Coorgs, while their mode of worship is similar to that observed by the Tulu people. They have no idols, however. The names of their deities are Guliga, Khorti, and Calurti. In complexion they are of a dusky, light brown, with brown eyes, and straight black hair.

Whilst all the tribes previously described speak the Canarese and Kodaga languages, the latter being a mixture of Malayalim, Canarese, and Tamil, the Paleyas speak Tulu.

VIII .- The Kuruba Tribes.

The Kurubas are divided into two tribes, called the Jenu-Kuruba and Betta-Kuruba.

1. The Jenu-Kuruba.

These live in the dense jungles of Mysore; about which they wander from place to place gathering honey. They worship the goddess Kuli, whom they invoke while cating their meals, and to whom once in the year they sacrifice a fow! They cat both vegetable and animal food, excepting beef, and are expert in the use of the bow and arrow. They have a wild appearance, but are turid and harmless.

2 The Betta Kuruha

The Betta Kuruhas hold no intercourse with the Jenn Kuruhas, yet like them reside in the dense forests. Their occupation is the manufacture of baskets, mats and umbrelles. They worship Kali. Their appearance is wilder than that their detect tribe. Their features are broad, their check bones prominent, their hips thick, their hair is woolly, and their complexion varies from dark hrown to black. Their diet is like that of the Jenu kuruhas. Both tribes speak Canarese

IX-The Yerawas

Slaves —The Yerawas are emigrants from Malayalin, and he chiefly in the southern part of Coorg as slaves in the Coorg families, to whose mode of life and worship they have conformed themselves. Like them they eat no beef, and are therefore to be classed above the Holeyas and Medas. They dress similarly to the Coorgs, and are strong and diligent labourers. In features and complexion they resemble the Kurubas.

X-The Medas

The Medas are an independent tribe scattered over the Coorg country, subsisting on the produce of their handicraft, which is the manufacture of undirellas. They dress like Coorgs, but in poorer style. Their religion consists of the worship of demons and of the goddess halt. They cat all kinds of vegetible and animal food, not excluding beef. In complexion they are sallow with straight black hair. They are a quiet, moffensive people, long lived, but not vigorous and robust.

XI -The Holeyas

Slaves —The Holeyas are found in Coorg houses all over the country, where they perform every description of memal work. Moreover, they helong to Coorga as members of the 'domestic institution' The tribe has two brunches 1st, the Kembutt, or kodaga speaking Holeyas, and 2nd, the Badga, or Canariese speaking Holeyas. These dress differently All, however, cat the same kinds of food, vegetable and animal, including beef. They worship Ryappadevaru and Jamants, or Kâli, once every month; and once in the year sacrifice a pig or a fowl. They are a poor and ignorant people, of dark complexion. From among them, but principally from the liherated Holeyas of the late Maharajah, the German missionaries have gathered a Christian community, and have located them in the new village of Anandapur, in Amuttunaad (a).

SECTION I-THE BHEEL TRIBES OF KHANDESH

Whether the Bheels be numbered among the aboriginal tribes of India or not, it is indisputable that they have existed in the country from a remote period Certainly their habits and characteristics, and the barbarism and lawlessness they maintuned for many ages, lead to the supposition that they belong to the original races of the Indian Peninsula, which have never amalgamated with the Hindus. hut have always striven to retain their independent and separate national existence The Bheels are often alluded to by Mahomedan historians of Guierat and Malwa as a powerful tribe occupying the hills and forests of Mewar and Udaipur under their own chiefs, from which position they were eventually driven out, and gradually found their way into Khandesh and its vicinity, where they are now settled in considerable numbers The most ancient native records of Khandesh speak of them as a small and scattered people, spread over the northern boundary of that province They cannot all be regarded, therefore, as indigenous to that part of the country, but many of them, perhaps the larger portion, have probably Their villages in Khandesh are interspersed among the come from other tracts hilly regions of the Satpura, Vindhya, and Satmulla Ranges, and the jungles on either side of the Mhye, Nurhuddha, and Taptee rivers They are chiefly congre gated in Bauglan, and in the district to the north and north west

Respecting the Bheels of this portion of Khandesh, as they were thirty five years ago, Captain Graham, then commanding the Bheel Corps in Khandesh, state, that they were not so degrided as those inhabiting other divisions of the country, and had been brought more under the influence of civilization; that they had acquired, to some extent, habits of industry; and that having become possessed of property in land, they began to feel the obligations which such possessions imposed upon them, and were anxious to live in peace with their neighbours. "The most restless and troublesome," he remarks, "are those dwelling immediately at the foot and amidst the recesses of the surrounding ranges, who, at different periods, have either usurped, or have been entrusted with, all the passes leading into the country, and till lately have held charge of many of the most important fortresses in the plains. Their hive-like habitations formerly crested the top of each isolated hill, where approach from every side was easily defended, or immediately discovered. These hovels, not reared for permanent occupation, but hastily put together, to be crept into for a few months or weeks, were without regret abandoned on any occasion that induced the occupants to shift their quarters. Roving and restless by disposition, and skilful bunters by necessity, the woods and jungles supplied them with roots, berries, and game; a successful forray filled their stores to overflowing; and, as every man's hand was lifted against them, so the measure of wrath was fully returned by the tribe, whose powers of mischief far exceeded those of their oppressors, and whose babits and locations enabled them to hid such a lengthy defiance to so many governments. The more civilized generally apply the term Bheel to all who lead a lawless life, and reside in a remote jungly country; but the name is given to many who do not acknowledge it" (a).

The Bheels are now a mixed people; but the true, or original, race, says Captain Rose, "is easily distinguished by the dark colour, diminutive size, prominent cheek-bones, large nostrils, activity, powers of enduring fatigue, and rare qualifications for the chase" (b). The inferiority of stature of the primitive tribes is probably caused by hard and scamp fare.

Formerly, the country of the Bheels was a scene of lawlessness and anarchy. Licentious, superstitious, addicted to drunkenness, and leading a wild, vagabond life, they submitted to no control, but plundered all other tribes within their reach, levied heavy blackmail on travellets, and often handed together in large numbers, and, with astonishing interpidity, mingled with the cruelty and bloodthirstiness of savages, eagerly waged war with any force sent against them. On one occasion the Guicowar despatched an army of ten thousand men to subdue them; but instead of accomplishing their purpose, they were driven from the land with confusion and ignoming. When Byce Rao, on the death of Nam Firmanese, hecame Peshwa, and Joshwam Rao Holkar organized a rehellion, and the province of Khan desh was three overrun and devistated by manuding armies, the Bheels availed themselves of the opportunity offered, and wandering about the country in strong bodies, committed the most violent excesses, and brought it to desolution and run. In 1818, when the province came under British rule "anarchy and lawless occupation had reached a fearful height, and murder and rapine stalked openly and unrestrainedly through the land. Infly notorious leaders infested this once flourishing garden of the west," and their commands were implicitly obeyed by upwards of five thousand ruthless followers, whose sole occupation was pillage and robbery, whose delight alone consisted in the murderous forray, and whose subsistence depended entirely on the fruits of their unlawful spoil. Smarting also under the repeatedly broken pledges of the former native government, and rendered savage by the wholesale shughter of their families and relations, the Bheels were more than usually suspicious of a new government of foreigners, and less than ever inclined to submit to the bonds of order and restraint. From Kokurmonda to Booranpiur, the whole range of the Satpura mountains teemed with the disaf to Boomapur, the whole range of the Satpura mountains teemed with the disaffected. The Satmulla and Ajunta Bheels, under thirty two leaders, were in arms, in numerous parties, carrying fire and sword over the southern parts of the province, and the work of desolution was urged with a bloody hand through the entire range of the Western Ghunts. The roads were impassable, villages in every direction were plandered, and murders dady committed, and entitle and hostages were driven off from the very centre of the province. (a) Such was the calami tous condition of Khandesh when it came into our hands

Two widely different kinds of pohey were adopted towards the refrictory Bheels, which well deserve consideration. The first was, that of coercion by the slaughter of leaders, by 'hanishment, imprisonment, the lash, and the gilhict,' accompanied by alternations of conciliatory measures, abandoned, it not soon successful, for the punitive remedy, which was equally unsuccessful. The second was, that of gentleness, kindness, and persuasion solely—a policy which tained these savage harbarians, and proved wonderfully successful. 'The main features in this theory of reformation were the awarding of strict justice to an oppressed race, the overthrow of the patriarchal anthority of the naicks (hereditary headmen), and the substitution in their stead of a European chief, who should be equally

, respected and obeyed, and whose commands and precepts would prove of a very different nature to those which had heretofore emanated among the hills; the conciliatory character and talent of the officers to he employed; the judicious selection for the new military hody of the wild unruly spirits who disdained the toil of honest lahour, and the settlement among colonies of the more staid of the society; the provision of a comfortable maintenance for every one; the re-establishment of the ancient village Bheel police; and above all the mild and liheral though firm spirit of the existing administration, which encouraged with generous assistance the well disposed, exercised a wholesome control over the evil-doers, and whose measures, under the new arrangement, were equally certain of being promulgated and enforced by unbiassed servants" (a). "A free pardon was granted for all past crimes to those who surrendered at discretion; waste lands were allotted rentfree for a term of twenty years, wherever the naicks and their followers proposed to settle; and an ample grant of money for clothes and subsistence, together with animals and implements of cultivation, were allowed during the period when the rude hushandman was under proper instruction, to make the earth yield up her treasures for his own support"  $(\hat{b})$ .

At first it was difficult for the Bheels, accustomed to look with a suspicious eye on the proceedings of all other races with which they came in contact, to believe in the good faith of the British Government. Gradually, however, their confidence was gained. Yet it was a hard matter for a tribe, which had been engaged for so many years in rapine and dehauchery, to settle down to peaceable pursuits. Much depended on the tact and judgment of the English officials. Captain Outram freely associated with them, and went about unattended. "Indulging the wild men with feasts and entertainments, and delighting all by his matchless urbanity, Captain Outram at length contrived to draw over to the cause nine recruits, one of whom was a notorious plunderer, and had a short time before successfully rohhed the officer commanding the detachment which had been sent against him. This infant corps soon became strongly attached to the person of their new chief, and entirely devoted to his wishes. Their good-will had been won hy his kind and conciliatory manners; while their admiration and respect had been thoroughly roused and excited hy his prowess and valour in the chase" (c). Slowly, hat surely, the happiest results of this excellent policy were attained The Bheels themselves were organized into an invincible corps for establishing order in the province and for subduing their own clans. The lands were again cultivated and begin to assume that appearance of prosperity which now so conspicuously distinguishes it

The Bheel, who has conformed to the new administration has experienced a new linth. He has been completely changed and has entered on a new career 'He feels a relish for that industry, says Captain Graham, 'which renders sub sistence secure and life peaceful and happy. He unites with the ryot in the cultivation of those fields which he once raviged and laid waste, and protects the village, the traveller, and the property of Government which were formerly the objects of his spoliation. The extensive wilds, which heretofore afforded him cover during his bloody expeditions, are now similing with fruitful crops. And population, industry, and opulence, are progressing throughout the land. Schools have been introduced for the benefit of the using generation, and the present youth, inured to lahour, and sobered by instruction, have lost the recollection of the state of older times, when, from their insular position, the trihe alone retorted vengeance and hatred upon their oppressors (a)

Many of the Bheels have dropped the appellation by which they were formerly known, and have chosen others more consonant, in their estimation with the usages of civilized life, which they have of late years adopted. Some of their trihes and clans, which still adhere more or less to the rude habits which once characterized the entire race, are as follows—

I -The Tart Trabe

These occupy the country from Arrawud to Boorhanpur, to the north east of Khandesh. They are of large stature, with a somewhat fair complexion which prohably they owe to inter marriages between their ancestors and Mogul colonists who settled among them. The Tans were converted to the Mahomedan faith in the reign of the emperor Aurungzebe.

II -The Hirdhi Tribe

The Hirdhi, like the Taris, are Mahomedans and are found on the Ajunta range of hills, in Jammair and Burgaon They are said to be a discontented and quarrelsome people, and difficult to manage

(a) Sketch of the Bheel Tr bes of the Fronce of Khandesh Part II pp. 6 7 by Captain D C Oraham Commanding the Dheel Corps in Khandesh p. 13

III .- The Nahal Tribe.

These are a barbarous race, "perfectly wild among the mountains, and subsisting chiefly on roots, fruits, and berries. They court no intercourse with oddiners; and dwell in the unrestrained freedom and hardship of an after savage existence. Marriage contracts, as well as all religious ceremonies, are entirely dispensed with; and the assorted pair are free to live together whilst they choose, or separate at pleasure and convenience. The infant accompanies its mother to her next abode; but the grown up children remain with the father. The Nahals are dark and diminutive in stature; and their features are exceedingly ill-favoured. A few of this tribe cultivate a little grain among the ashes of the burnt boughs of the forest, or barter the produce of their jungles for cloth; but they are very seldom to be met with beyond the immediate bounds of their unleadthy location "(a).

IV .- The Bheel Tribe.

The term 'Bheel' is one specially applied to a multitude of families scattered about the province of Khandesh in every direction, and having no other designation, and no pronominal prefix. They are lazy, improvident, and proud; are destitute of the smallest inclination to work for their livelihood; and consider that they are the only legitimate representatives of the Bheel race, and that there who are industrious and honest, are a degenerate people, devoid of spirit and honour.

V-VII.-The Matwari, Barda, and Doripi Tribes.

These tribes inhabit the hilly regions of the north-west, about Akrany and Dhergong, which they cultivate to some extent. They also manufacture various kinds of baskets.

VIII.-The Khotil Tribe.

 $\Lambda$  wild race of the Satpura Range. They bring down to the plains wax and guin gathered in the forests, and receive grain and other products in exchange.

IX.-The Daungela Tribe.

The natives of the Danng, below the Western Ghauts, bear the designation of 'Danngehi.' They are the most uncivilized and unreclaimable of all the Bheels, 'with intellect barely sufficient to understand, and totally unequal to comprehend, anything beyond the most simple communication. They are a stunted and sickly race, superstitious, poor, and miserible, and so extremely degraded as to have well nigh lost the perception of the distinctions of virtue and vice, of good and evil (a)

X—The Mauch Tribe
XI—The Pari Tribe
XII—The Wali Tribe
XIII—The Wasaica Tribe
XIV—The Warala Tribe
XV—The Powera Tribe

These six tribes inhabit the western districts of Scottangore and Nundoorbar, a wild, unhealthy, and thinly inhabited part of the province, the Ruppepla territory beyond, on the confines of Gujerat, and a portion of the district of Surat. They are very different in many respects from most of the tribes previously described, so that it is difficult to find any common ground of affinity by which they may be brought under the designation of Bheel the term applied to them all. It is highly probable that they are the aboriginal inhabitants of the land. These tribes display remarkable differences of character, which are perpetuated by social exclusiveness, preventing intermarrages among some of them (b)

SECTION II -THE BHEEL TRIBES OF AHMEDABAD AND REWA KANTA

These tribes differ greatly from those of Khandesh and Malwa. The tract which they chiefly inhalit, and where they are now a numerous body, was, prior to the Mahomedan conquest of the country, according to common tradition, covered with Rupoot families, to the exclusion of all other ruces. It is open to question whether this tradition is worthy of entire credence. Let, even granting that it is so, it remains to be explained how it occurred that powerful Rupoot clans gave place to a semi birbarous population of Bheels. The explanation given by the natives themselves, and maintained by some English writers that the Rupoots were transformed into Bheels, that is, that a tavilized people of royal blood, with a pedigree extending back for fifty generations, abandoned their splendid historical associations, and were content to become a rude, wild, despised, and nameless race, needs stronger evidence to command intelligent belief than that usually adduced. The tale prevalent among the natives is, that water was inadvertently drunk by a Rajpoot from the hands of a Bheel, wherehy not only himself, hut all the Rajpoots of the whole region, were degraded to the rank of Bheels. Another legend is, that the Rajpoots under Mahomedan rule, becoming outlaws and rohhers, formed themselves into a separate class, and adopted the designation of Bheel. Those who advocate the idea that the modern Bheels of Gujerat are degraded Rajpoots, accept one or other of these fahles as genuine. They are held in much respect in certain parts of the province. There are persons who regard them and the Koli tribes as aborigines in Gujerat—a question of much interest and importance, yet difficult to settle.

Some of these Bheel tribes are as follows :-

I.—The Barta Tribe of Satûmbah—Ballasinor Pargannah.

II.—The Kant Tribe, of Gabut.

III.—The Paggt Tribe.
IV.—The Kotwal Tribe.

V.—The Naikra Tribe.

V.—The Naikra Tribe

The Barias are generally regarded as the leading tribe of the Bheels; but the Kants also lay claim to this distinction. The words paggi and lotted properly designate offices; but among the Bheels they represent two separate tribes. Marriages commonly can be arranged between members of any two tribes, showing great social intercourse and union between them all. Some of the chiefs, however, are somewhat restricted in their selections, and can only intermarry with certain families (a).

The character and habits of these Bheels, as portrayed by an intelligent observer, apart from ethnological difficulties, would alone stamp them as a separate race, and in no way connected with the proud, high-spirited, and prosperous Rajpoots, who have always been the leaders of native society in every province and district in which they have established themselves. "The Bheels are a poor, ill-favoured race," remarks Colonel McIvill, "immoderately addicted to drinking, a propensity which the cheapness of the moura liquor enables them to indulge. They will also eat opium to excess whenever possessed of the means of huying it. They are of course expert there's, hut, unless provoked by opposition, seldom add marder to robbery. This is a point of difference between them and the Bheels of Wagur, who have the character of being rither blood thirsty. They eat all manner of flesh, excepting the cow and the nilgae, and in this they again differ from their neighbours of Wagur, who eat the flesh of the cow without scruple. Buffaloes, however, are slaughtered without ceremony, and are often stolen for the purpose of being eaten. The Bheels are passionately fond of the muhora berry, and when in season, live almost entirely upon it. They dry it and store it up, dressing it in messes mixed with a portion of course grain. It is said to be a very invigorating diet, and the trees are preserved with great care. The devictity evinced by every Bheel in training footsteps, is very sationishing. They seem to have an instinctive habit of witching the ground upon which they tread, and a man will stop while at a rapid pace, and show the foot print of a tiger or other wild animal, where the impression is scarcely perceptible without attention even when pointed out. In this art they greatly excel the Paggees of the more settled districts, whose skill, however, it is borsted, generally fails after the first or second mile "(a).

These tribes are great adepts at theiring cattle grain, clothing and other property. The practice known as lable chitri, once so prevalent among them, is exceedingly permicious. Cattle stolen by the Bheels were taken to a large village in the neighbourhood whither the proprietors traced the animals, recognized them, and instead of handing the theeves over to the police, to be triol and punished for their crime, made an arrangement with them for the psyment of a certain sum, and the restoration of the property. Thus far complaints were made to the authorities, although such robbeness were of constant occurrence. The aggree of parties preferred to make a composition of this nature, to spending time and money in prosecuting the offenders in a distant court (b).

The Bleels, however, of this province have undergone of late years a great change for the better 'Open violence is quite unknown, and they have seriously bettlen themselves to agriculture' This improvement in their condition and habits agrees with what has taken place among other Bleed tribes elsewhere

The territories of Baria and Chota Oodepoor, in Rewa Kanta were infested by a class of Blicels, known as Ankras, of peculiarly swage and predatory habits Vajor Wallace, the Political Agent in 1851, speaks of them as barbartans, noto rious for the wildness of their ways. He states, that their numbers were not great; but as they inhabited generally the most remote and impervious jungles, it was not easy to form even an approximate estimate of them. In 1838, their depredations had become so daring, that a force was sent against them; since which time they have been more orderly (a).

CHAPTER XVI.

TWO TRIBES OF THE SATPURA HILLS

I -THE PAURIA TPIBE II -THE WARALEE TRIBE.

THESE hills are from sixteen hundred to two thousand five hundred feet in height above the plains, and form the watershed between Khandesh and the valley of the Narbuddha For fifty miles they separate the valley of that river from the valley of the Taptee, and then to the west of forum Mal separating into two ridges constitute the external barriers of the high land lying between plains below they are surrounded by a broad belt of unhealthy forest land, so that their inhabitants are cut off from intercourse with the people of the low country, and thus retain their primitive simplicity and customs unbroken are an abornmal race, with religion and manners peculiar to themselves cultivate the valleys and slopes, and possess large numbers of cattle, buffaloes, and goats, but no sheep or pigs The hills are low eLough for the growth of the palm tree, but the natives seem to be imacquainted with the art of distilling its nuice, which, unfortunately, is so freely practised in every other part of India Moreover, although cooking their food and, therefore, knowing some of the uses of fire, yet a light is never seen in their dwellings These hill men are divided into three tribes-the Pauria, the Waralee, and the Bheel, the former two heing confined to the Akrunee and Latee Hills, while the last are found in the forests at the foot of the hills, and between them and the River Taptee

I-The Pauria Tribe

In point of intelligence and industrious habits the Paurias are superior to the two other tribes, and hold no social intercourse with them. They are represented to he "usually short and shightly built. Their features besperk great intelligence and good nature. Their physical type differs materially from the Hindu, the features being more flit, with low, round foreheads, wide nostrils, and thicker hips. They were moustaches, but pluck out the beard. They usually wear a pair of large silver carrings; the weight frequently drawing down the lobes. The women are stout and buxom, and when young are very councy. Their features present much greater variety of expression than amongst the Hindus. They are usually much fairer than the peasants of the plains, probably from their not being required to perform so much outdoor drudgery as the latter "(a). While better clothed than the Warâlee women, they nevertheless adopt their custom of leaving the upper part of the person above the waist exposed. The Pauria women are treated with respect and honour by the other sex, and are never employed to work in the fields. Yet they gather charoolee nuts, and pluck flowers from the molucu tree, from which arrack is distilled.

The marriage ceremony observed by the Paurias, remarks Lieutenant Rigby, who has written a singularly lucid and pertinent account of these hill tribes, "is never performed until both parties have arrived at maturity. The young men are generally permitted to choose for themselves; and these are perhaps the only people in Western India amongst whom love has any share in forming the marriage tie. A sum varying from forty to one hundred rupees must be paid by the youth or his parents to the father of the girl, who lays out one-half of it on the bride's tronssean. If the lover be unable to pay the amount demanded, he binds himself to serve his future father-in-law during a period of eight or ten year-. becoming what is termed 'gbor jowai.' During this time he resides with the family of his intended; and the parents usually permit the marriage to take place when half the period for which he has bound himself has expired. Thus daughters, being a source of profit to the parents, are greatly prized, and treated with nucle consideration. Polygamy is very common; and those who can afford it, have three or four wives. Widows are allowed to remarry, the parents receiving a second dowry from the husband. Marriages are only celebrated during the months of Phagun and Baisakh (March and May). The father of the youth first demands the damsel of her father. If he agrees, the price demanded is paid. This is called dija. The father of the youth then brings a large jar of liquor to the girl's house and sprinkles some of it on the floor. The ther of the village is then summoned to perform paja (idolatrous worship) with the liquor, for which he receives two pice (three farthings). Offerings of rice, Lodra liquor, &c., are then made to the deity Bawa Kumba. The following day the bride and bridegroom are covered with turmeric, and the latter goes in procession, with music and dancing, to demand his bride of her parents. She is brought out and seated near her husband. Each party is then clothed in wedding garments, and the females in attendance stand around them singing songs After this the bride and bridegroom are rused on the shoulders of their friends amidst dancing and music. The brides parents afterwards give a feast to the whole of the company at which great quantities of liquor are drank. The whole then go in procession to the house of the bride groom and are entertained for two days The Patel of the village in which the marriage takes place receives a fee of one rupee from the bridegroom, and of each village through which the procession passes one anna ' [a penny lialf penny] (a)

The Paurins as well as the other tribes observe no distinctions of caste, and, strange to say, have no spiritual guides or instructors like Hindus of the plants Their villages are under the control of bead men, whose authority is everywhere seknowledged They lead a simple and, for the most part, an inoffensive life, and are friendly and generous in their dealings Both the Pantias and Wariless are remarkable for abstaining from depredation and robbery, and their disputes, when they occur, chiefly pertain to the boundaries of estates and villages

In the construction of their bouses, the Pauria tribe exhibit much more taste and skill than their neighbours, the Waralees The latter adopt the barbirous and dirty custom of admitting their cattle into the house which their own families occupy But the Paurias "build two neat buts of interlaced bamboos, thatched with long grass In one but the firmly reside, in the other, the eattle are kent They are enclosed by a court yard, on one side of which are arranged a number of carular store houses for grain, and a shed for the earthen water vessels, which are always elevated on a bamboo frame, underneath is a wooden trough containing nator for the goats and fouls. These houses are generally scattered about un small groups, each forming a small farming establishment. Mango and other trees are planted around the houses, and on the divisions between the fields . they are carefully protected by bumboo trellis work' (b)

In self respect and propriety of conduct the Paurins are in advance of the other tribes, and, in some matters, even of tribes on the plans pretending to have reached a much higher evaluation. For example, notwithstanding the comparative coolness of the climate at certain times of the year, their children, not excluding the youngest, are never allowed to roun about naked like young children every where in towns and villages of the plans, but are always more or le clothed. These people, moreover, as compared with the two other tribes, are more particular in the animal food which they eat, confining their appetites to goats, sheep, and fowls; while the Warâlees and Bheels will eat everything, with a few exceptions, such as dogs, cats, and tigers. The dress of all is simple, consisting commonly of a cloth thrown over the shoulders; and a waistband of red and white colours striped, extending to the thighs.

All these tribes in their pronunciation impart a peculiar nasal twang to many of the vowels. They have a multitude of words in common, but frequently spell and pronounce them differently. "The Wardlees always pronounce p in words in which the Paurias use h; whilst in words derived from a foreign source, all these tribes change s into a, sh into hu. The grammatical construction of the Wardlee approaches more to that of the Gujeratee than either of the others" (a).

II .- The Warâlee Tribe.

The hahits and characteristics of this tribe are in many respects like those of the Paurias, and yet there is a manifest difference between the two races, consisting mainly in a lower form of civilization as exhibited by the Wardlees in comparison with the other tribe. In physical appearance, however, the two present a striking contrast. While the Paurias are short in stature and intelligent in countenance, the Wardlees are "tall and dark, very slim, but well made—their features more resemble those of the negro. They wear no headdress; but part their hair in the middle, and wear it flowing loosely over their shoulders." It is plain, therefore, that these tribes are ethnologically distinct, and have a separate origin.

The Warâlee women, as already remarked, are more seantily clothed than their Pauria neighbours of their own sex. Their adornments are péculiar. "They wear a great many massive brass rings on each leg, extending from the ankle half way up the calf. They are fitted on so tight that they cause the flesh to shrink: these are never removed, and at death are huried with them." They also wear "several massive necklaces composed of brass and pewter beads, silver armlets, and massive silver earrings, two or three inches in circumference. On the death of a woman, all her ornaments are huried with her" (b). The same customs, in regard to personal decorations, prevail among the women of both tribes. The marriage rites of all the tribes are the same, with this exception, that the Wurâlees and the Bheels contract murrages throughout the year, while the Punns restrict these ceremonies to two months of the year

It seems to be generally admitted that, although the Paurias are an aboriginal race distinct from the others, jet that the Warliess and Bheels, notwith standing their difference of name, are in reality one and the same race. At the same time, the Warliess have separated themselves from the other Bheels, forming a tribe of their own, and in some respects becoming like the Pauria. Yet their original relationship to the Bheels is frequently recognized in the appellation of Warlies Bheels, which is applied to them

The reheron of these hill tribes is singularly simple. They are not idolaters, for they worship no image or figure, no village or household deities, no river, not even fire An exception is made at the commencement of the harvest season in favour of a tree and the sun "In the jungle, near each village, is a tree regarded as sacred, around which the villagers assemble, and having first prostrated themselves before the rising sun, make offerings of corn, and sacrifice goats and fowls This rite is performed only once a year, and it appears to be a propitatory offering to ensure a good harvest home. The deity to whom these offerings are made," says Lieutenant Rigby, "is called Biwa Kumba, and his wife is termed Rance Kazal-a tree sacred to her, before which sacrifices are also offered, is usually situated a short distance from the first. They also worship Waghdeo, or the Tiger Demon, but, as they simply express themselves, 'only to propitate it, and prevent it attacking our cattle, or when it has carried off any of our people' Besides the above," he adds, "they have no detties or forms of worship whatever, and I doubt if any other race of people could be found so httle influenced by religious prejudices or ceremonial observances (a) Although they reverence so few dettes, and thereby are altogether unlike most other races of India, yet they acknowledge one god, who is Creator of all things, to whom the Paurias give the Hindu designation prevalent throughout Northern India, of Bhagwan, and the Wardees that of Dine

In the absence of much religious sentiment, it is perhaps natural to find that these tribes are strong helievers in witchcraft, sorcery, necromancy, omens, and the like, in the observance of which their religion, practically, chiefly consists Before the British rule, of which they have now a wholesome dread, 'many old women lost their noses, under the suspicion of being witches, it heing a common idea that the loss of the nose destroys all power to work evil. They have also a belief in the mysterious efficacy of numbers—a helief indeed in which the most civilized races of the world meet on common ground with some of the most harbarous. Odd numbers are generally regarded as exceedingly lucky; and the sight of one black peeches hird is accounted a disastrous event.

The two tribes of the upper slopes and ridges supply themselves hy their industry with almost all things which they require. They manufacture their own implements of husbandry, and are skilful in making haskets. They are their own carpenters, blacksmiths, and so forth. They are almost without deht; the chief reason for which happy circumstance being, that Banya traders and money-lenders, the fruitful sources of misery and ruin on the plains, have not gained access to these inhabitants of the bills.

Like most primitive trihes, the Warâlees and Paurias delight in music and dancing. At one festival, which is kept up for two months, they go in procession from village to village hy torchlight, and enliven themselves hy dancing and draughts from the intoxicating mohawa juice. Another festival is very curions. "A tall hamhoo pole, decked with the scarlet flowers of the phallas, strips of cloth, and a cocoanut is crected in the centre of the village; wood, cow-dung, &c., are piled around; drops of liquor are sprinkled on it; and fowls sacrificed, and thrown into the heap. At night the whole is set fire to, the villagers dancing around and singing. On the pole falling it is cut to pieces with swords hy the men. They then proceed from village to village, dancing and drinking liquor" (a). Their musical instruments are of several kinds. One is a fiddle with strings; a second is similar to the scotch hag-pipe without the hag; a third is a fife made of bamhoo; a fourth and fifth are large and small drums. Women and men dance together in a circle around the musicians, keeping time to the music-the men flourishing their swords. Their festivities are generally kept up throughout the night.

THE KOLI TRIBES

-MAHADO KOLI "-NIR KOLI 3-MALAR 4-BHEEL 5-FAJ KOLI 6-SOLESI 7-TAURRI 8-BHAUR 9-DUNOARII 10-MARASI 11-METAHI 10-CHINCHI 13-SONE 14-AGRI 13-POPTEGGUSE, ORTANKARI KOLI 15-TUR KOLI TPURS OI OUFRAT -1 TALABOHI 11 PATANNARIA 11 KARREZ 17 DHANDHOUR V BABPIA VI PATANI VI KAUNT VII THAKUR 12 KOTTWALAHA X SILOTTAH XI JAHANGRIA XI THE PAHLUNYOORI TRIBLES XIII THE BAPIA TPUBE

These tribes are widely spread over the Bombay Presidency — In some places such as Gujerat, the Atavisi, Northern Konkan, and to the south we to f Poona they are very numerous, while many clans and families are found in Ahmed nuggur, Sholapore, as fir as the boundary of the Hyderabad territory and in other parts of the country — The truet which they have specially appropriated however, are the hills and lowlands from a little below Arsik, in the north to Bhapore and Mooch, in the south, on the east of the Syhdri range

Their proper occupation is agriculture, like that of the Chamars of Northern India, with whom in habits and vocation they are closely associated, but they undertake many other classes of labour. In Bominy and along the western coast they are porters, carriers, beatinen, and so forth, working for hire, no institle duty to be performed. Hence the trihal appellation of these people has been throughout India applied to all natives engaged in a similar calling with the difference that the name is spelt 'cooly,' after the Inglish fishion. Formerly, in certain districts, the Kolis were a terror to their more peaceful neighbours, and by reason of their robbing propersities, acquired an evil name to themselves.

The Kobs are not a dull and stupid rice, but are shrewd and intelligent yet reckless and fond of case. They are exertable, but are readily overcome by mis fortune or any other calamity. Being mostly ignorant and unedicated, it is not a matter of surprise, that they are addicted to deceit, lying, and other evils common in India. Their women are good looking and even hand ome, but as they, for the most part, lead a hard, laborious lift, their countenances soon to e their original beauty.

These people eat animal food, excepting the flesh of the cow and the domestic pig; yet they consider the wild pig as a delicacy. Though not given to intemperance, they will, nevertheless, drink spirits. Both sexes are passionately fond of tobacco, which they smoke and chew. They are very superstitious, and have great faith in charms and omens. A cat, or deer, or crow, or have, or snake, crossing their path in certain directions, is an unpropitious circumstance, while to meet a jackal is most fortunate. They are Hindus in religion, and worship a number of deities, especially Shiva. One of the principal tribes is named after him, under the designation of Maladeo.

Little is known respecting the origin of the Kolis. Their own account is wild enough, for they hold they are descendants of no less a personage than the celebrated Vôlmiki, the author of the great Indian epic, the Râmâyana. It is probable that they are a mongrel race, and have sprung from alliances formed hetween Hindu and ahoriginal tribes. The Kolis inhabiting the country to the east of the Syhadri range, have undoubtedly occupied that tract for many ages. In the sixteenth century the kings of Ahmedauagur had Koli soldiers in their armies. There is a tradition prevalent among the Mahadeo Kolis, that their ancestors subdued the former Gauli inhabitants, and absorbed the survivors, whose descendants now constitute the Gauli clan of that tribe; and that the Gaulis, in their turn, had, in earlier ages, expelled the Garsis, supposed to he aborigines of the Dekhan.

The following statement of Captain Mackintosh, in his "Account of the Mahadeo Kolis," seems to verify the truth of this tradition: "It is a common practice," he says, "of the inhabitants of the plains who bury their dead, as well as of the hilly tribes, to creet thargahs (tombs, commonly of a single stone) near the graves of their parents. In the vicinity of some of the Koli villages, and near the site of deserted ones, several of these thargahs are occasionally to be seen, especially near the source of the Bhamn River. The people say, they belonged to Garsis and Gaulis of former times. The stones, with many figures in relief roughly carved upon them, one holding a drum in his hand, in the acts of heating time on it, are considered to have belonged to the Garsis, who are musicians by profession. The other thargah with a saliaha (one of the emblems of Mahadeo), and a hand of women forming a circle round it, with large pots on their heads, are said to be Gauli monuments" (a).

In the course of the last century, when the Peshwa wished to gain possession of the hill forts of the Syhadri range, he urged the Kolis in the neighbourhood to endery our to capture them in his behalf. In this enterprise they were success First they took possession of the fort of Trimbak , and afterwards seized the forts of Kulargar, Rutangar, Alang, and Kurang In the time of Nana Furnivese, the Kohs made themselves famous for their numerous depredations and daring exploits

The Kolis are divided into n number of tribes, each of which has its sub divisional clans The principal tribe is that of the Wahadeo Kolis already alluded I proceed to give a brief account of each, as follows -

The Mahadeo Koli Tube

This tribe inhalits the tract of country on the east of the Syladri mountains, from Trumhak, in the north, to Musch, in the south. They are also found in Bombay, and in some parts of the province of Konkan The Rajah of Jawair helongs to this tribe It is divided into twenty four clans. Their names are the following -

TWENTS FOUR MARADEO HOLI CLASS

1	W anakpal	9 Bhaghiwant	17 Aghasi
2	Kadam	10 Jagtap	18 Chawan
3	Pawar	11 . Gaikwar	19 Ujaji
4	Kadar	12 Suryabansa	20 Sagar
5	Bûdiwant.	13 Puliwas	21 Shaikacha Shesha.
٢	Namdeo	14 Utaracha	22 hharad
7	Khirangar	15 Dalvi	23 Sirkhi
8	Bhonsla.	16 Gauli	21 Shin

Each of these clans has a number of sub divisions or great families Members of the same clan do not intermarry, but must seek alliances with other clans

This tribe has an important institution or tribunal, called Gotarani composed. says Captum Wackintosh, "of six persons, the establishment of which seems to be coeval with the original formation of their caste. The judicial functions of the members of the Gotarum are of a serious and important nature, being to regulate and watch over the moral conduct of all the members of their community, to check the spread of licentious manners, and the infringement of the rules of their caste . to legitum itize natural off-pring, and to adopt children and females of other tribes into their own easte '(a) The offices which these persons hold are heredi tary in their families. The duties which they perform are somewhat similar to.

though evidently more extensive than, the chaudhris or head-men of certain castes and communities in Northern India.

2. The Ahîr Koli Tribe.

These are found scattered about Khandesh, especially to the south of the Taptee River, and on the banks of the Girna, its great tributary. They are poor, and of little estimation generally. The word 'Ahrt' means in the northern dialects, where Hindee is spoken, a cowherd, and designates a respectable tribe of the Shudra caste. But this rendering has apparently no connexion with the Ahir Kolis; for if it lad, it would certainly save them from the insignificance, not to say contempt, into which they have fallen. In some villages, they are watchmen and watermen; and in others, perform menial duties which only a mean and outcast people will in India undertake. Those who suhmit to these degrading occupations are entitled to receive as perquisite the skins of hullocks and buffalces that die of themselves, the horns of which they place before their doors as sacred objects.

3. The Malar Koli Tribe.

Families of this tribe are found in many villages of Khandesh and the Dekhan, to the borders of Hyderabad, in the direction of Khandhar, Indore, and towards Balaghat and Naldroog. Some also reside in Ahmednuggur, Bombay, and along the coast. The Malars are also called Panhari Kolis. They occupy a much higher rank socially than the Ahir Kolis just described. In some villages they are public servants, attending on Government officials, and on strangers and pilgrims; and are present at marriages and other festivities to render the help required from them. These Kolis associate with the Kunbi cultivators, who are a pure Shudra caste; and strange to say, the two tribes will eat and drink together. Some of the Malars are sepoys and village watchmen; while others are head-men fix villages in Ahmednuggur und Khandesh. "The 'nerefittary Kolis," remarks Captain Mackintosh, "of the hill forts of Parandar, Singhar, Torna, and Raighar, all south of Poona, are Malar Kolis: their duties consisted in guarding the approaches leading to the forts, and so forth. They held infan lands, and received regular pay from Government, besides enjoying the privilege of cutting grass and firewood." "In the year A. D. 1340," he adds, "the Singhar Koli Naik resisted the attacks of the army of the Emperor Mahomed Tughluk during several months" (a).

4 The Bheil Koh Tribe

This is a small tribe, whose scattered fumilies are distributed along the banks of the Peri and Godavery. They are the descendants of Bheels and Kohs, who have intermarried and have chosen to quit the countries in which their ancestors lived, and establish themselves as a separate tribe, rather than be treated with contempt as outcasts by their former associates

5 The Ray Koli Tribe

These reside in Ativeesi, Wun, Dindoree, and Nasik, and a few families are settled ahout Jowaur in Konkan. They have a tradition that they spring from the Mahadeo Kolis, but were expelled by them for some offence, and are now entirely separate from that tribe. They cultivate the soil, and, like the Kolis generally, worship Hindu detties. The principal person of the tribe "resides at Wagyra, in the Nasik district, and holds the village of Vellgaum in free gift, and enjoys several perquisites. The village was presented by the Jowaur Rajah to one of the Nuk's ancestors. The Nuk settles disputes connected with the infringement of their customs." (a) The Ray Kohs hear also the title of Bhen Kolis.

6 The Solesi Koli Tribe

The Solesi Kolis inhabit those truets of country in which the Raj Kohs are found, and pursue the same occupation. They are also termed Lai Langúti wala kohs, doubtless from the redness of the cloth which they gird around the lower part of their persons. They are likewise called Kasthi Kolis.

7 The Taukra Kola Tribe

These are settled in Atavisi, chiefly in the neighbourhood of Peint and Dhurumpore. Like the two preceding tribes, they are labourers and cultivators Probably their name has been taken from tauksi, the large bamboo, in the cutting down of which they are employed.

8 The Dhaur Kola Tribe

Some families of this tribe reside in Wun and Dindorce, but they are chiefly attached to Atavia, where they are settled in considerable numbers. They are a low, drunken, degraded race. Their habits are apparently similar to those of deliased tribes in Northern India, which eat the fieth of animals which die of themselves, are extremely fond of spirits, and are held in great abomination. Some of them fell timber, and are common labourers.

9. The Dûngari Koli Tribe.

This tribe is found in the same tracts as those occupied by the Dhaur Kolis. The term 'dångari' evidently comes from 'dångar,' a hill; and hence Kolis of the hills are sometimes called Dångari Kolis. The members of this tribe have small holdings of their own in villages, which they cultivate; and are also common lahourers. Some of them are employed in the Police department.

10. The Marani Koli Tribe.

The Maranis are scattered among the villages of the Northern Konkan, where they are public servants, and act the part of the Panbari Kolis in waiting on Government officials, supplying the villagers and travellers with water, attending festivals, and so forth. For these duties they receive patches of village land rentfree, besides perquisites of various kinds. There are some families in Bombay, which are employed as hearers, porters, and the like.

11. The Mettah Koli Tribe.

These are fishermen and boatmen residing in the city of Bombay, where they are sometimes called Dûngari Kolis. There is a part of the city called after them Dûngari. Indeed, it is supposed that their ancestors were the original inhabitants of the island of Bombay; and the tradition is prevalent among them. They do not retail the fish which they catch, but sell them wholesale to shop-keepers in the bazaar. ""There are," says Captain Mackintosh, "persons of considerable wealth among them, who are owners of vessels that trade along the Malabar coast, navigated by sailors of their own tribe. Their head-men adjust all disputes connected with their caste." "Their wives," he adds, "devote the glass bangles (brucelet) of the right hand to the deep, to propitiate the spirit of the occan, for the sake of their husbands; and they replace them with silver ones" (a). The Mettah Kolis are great drinkers at their festivals.

12. The Chanchi Koli Tribe.

This tribe is also found at Bomhay, where they cultivate gardens in the neighbourhood, and supply the markets with fruits and vegetables; or are labourers, porters, and the like

Fley are hardworking and thriving
This tribe is reputed to have come originally from Kattywar

13 The Sone Koli Tribe

These are fishermen and sulors, and are found along the cost from Kolaba to Surat There are hundreds of families in Bombay. They are strongly influenced by caste prejudice, and consequently as sailors altogether decline to serve on board foreign ships, lest they should lose caste, and will only labour on native vessels. But they evidently prefer the independent occupation of fishermen They came originally from Kolaba, where the herd man of the tribe resides, to whom in case of caste difficulties, or matters of social interest, they are amenable, and refer for advice. This important personage has an officer in every village of the tribe for the settlement of minor disputes. The same custom prevails among the women of this tribe, of throwing at marriage the glass bracelets of their right arms into the sea, to invoke the protection of their husbrids from the ocean spirit, as is observed by the women of the Metrib tribe. In place of the glass bracelets they wear three silver ones on the right wrist, but continue to wear their glass bracelets on the left. There are several hundred families of this tribe in Bassein, where they are employed as palankein bearers.

The Koli tribes in Bombay speak a corrupt Mahratti, called Koli Bhåsha, or Koli language Many of these Kohs have become Christians In an uncent manuscript consulted by Mr Murphy, the Kolis are described as the primitive inhabitants of Bombay (a)

14 The Agra Koli Tribe

The Agra Kolis pursue the same callings as the Sone Kolis They are also cultivators and labourers They are found in many places along the coast such as Bombay, Bassein, Surat, and intervening towns

15 The Portuguese, or Thankar Koli Tribe

This is a tribe distinct from the Roman Catholic coolies of Bombay and elsewhere on the coast. Its members were formerly Roman Catholics, but uposta tized to heathenism during a severe visitation of cholers upwards of fifty years ago. They continue altogether a distinct people, have abandoned Christian rites, observe ceremomies peculiar to Hindiusm, wear the long tuft of livin on the crown of their heads, and employ Brahmans at their marriage festivals. Though once

Roman Catholics, yet they state that at an earlier period they were connected with the Sone tribe. All other Koli tribes stand aloof from them as an impure race. They extract the juice of the palm-tree, sell fish, and cultivate the ground. The term Thankar Koli has been given to them from than, the places in the hazar in which they sell their fish. They reside in Bomhay, Bassein, and other places on the coast.

16. The Koli Tribes of Gujerat.

It has been conjectured that the Bheels and the Kolis are the aboriginal tribes of Gujerat. They have doubtless been settled in the province for many ages; yet what their origin really is, demands much patient investigation and research.

These tribes are numerous. I shall give a brief account of each :-

1. The Talahdah Tribe.

This is the largest Koli trihe in Gujerat. It also stands the highest in rank. A Talabdah will not eat food prepared by the other tribes, although they will readily partake of the food which he has prepared. They are spread over the tract extending from Baroda to Khyraloo and Massawnah, on the River Koopyne; and from Dholka on the frontier of Kattywar to Lunawarra, and beyond. The name Chuwdli is applied to those inhabiting the district around Kurree. They are mostly cultivators and servants.

2. The Patanwaria Tribe.

'Settled in the country about Puttun, and between the Saraswati and Bunuasa Rivers. 'They are found in numbers in the south of Gujerat, and near the Narbuddha, and are employed as cultivators, labourers, and watchmen.

The Kakrez Tribe.

Inhabit the district of Kakrez to the north-west of the Bunnass. They are a numerous and energetic people, and prone to depredation.

4. The Dhandhour Tribe.

Occupy the district of Dhandhour. They are fierce and bold, delighting in wild exploits.

5. The Bâbria Tribe.

These are scattered about the southern portion of Kattywar.

6 The Parish Tribe

Spread over the Mahi Kanta hills

7 The kannt Imbe

I ound in Dhygaun, to the north east of Ahmedabad

8 The Thikur Iribe

This term although properly applied only to Ruppoots in other parts of India is given to the wealthy Kohs of Lohar and Amlyth The Koli Thakurs of coorsisur and Ometra are men of considerable influence These Kolis are very numerous in the Khinra District

9 The hotevalaha Tribe

Are public servants in many villages, waiting upon Government officials and trivellers, performing duties discharged by the Malar tribe in other parts of the country

10 The Silottali Tribe

Every town in Gujerat has some families of this tribe. They are specially employed in attending travellers from place to place, in conveying money and other valuables from one village or town to another, and in performing in general the duties of confidential servants.

11 The Jahangria Tribe

These occupy sixty villages in the Chowal Division of the Verningaum Pargannal of the Ahmedabad District. Hence they are sometimes called Chowal hohs. Their chiefs separate themselves from the body of the tribe, so as to refrain from intermarriages with them, and to keep them completely under their control. They are mostly descended from Kanji Rath, who formerly held possession of Detroz, and are known as Detroztas. The Chowal holis had at one time a bad character for turbulence. The watebmen at night carry a formidable curved stick called kathar, which they hurl with great force and precision to a distance of from thirty to forty paces, so as serionally to injure the person whom it strikes

The Kohs are very fond of all spirituous liquors, which they are very apt to drink to excess. All of them play eards, of eacht suits, with twelve cards to each suit. They also play chess. The head men settle tribal differences. Two kinds of ordeal are in vogue wherehy a culprit may purge himself. Shoull he be able to carry a red hot hall a certain distance or lift a red bot har to the level of his head, and the skin of his hands not be injured, he is regarded as innocent; but if he can do neither without injury to himself, he is accounted guilty (a).

12. The Pahlunpoor Tribes, viz. --

i. The Rathor Kolis.

iv. The Songharra Chauwan Kolis.

ii. The Waghela Kolis.

v. The Debi Kolis.

iii. The Solankhi Kolis. vi. The Makwana Kolis.

These tribes claim descent from Rajpoots. Hence the patronymics which they adopt. They have large landed possessions. Their intermarriages with Bheel women has been the cause, they affirm, of their loss of caste,

13. The Baria Tribe.

This is a tribe inhabiting the State of Baria in Rewa Kanta, where it forms a considerable proportion of the population.

Respecting the Koli tribes of Gujerat, Captain Mackintosh observes, that "in every ten or fifteen villages there is a Koli named Nathi Patelliah, whose duty it is to adjust any disputes connected with the infringement of the usages of the tribes. The Nathi Patelliah summons any offender before him; and several Koli bead-men, and a few elders, investigate the affair, and fine the delinquent. He is made to furnish an entertainment for a portion of his tribe, and to pay some money, according to his means. When he has partaken of food from the same platter with the Nathi Patelliah, and some of the others, and has smoked a hookah, of which several of the assembly have also taken a whift, he is considered to have been re-admitted into his caste." He adds, that "when any serious quarrel or feud has heen settled between the Kolis, they seal their reconciliation by drinking some koosomb, which is merely a little opium dissolved in water. They are partial to opium; and very fond of spirituous liquors. They are enterprising, bold, and most desperate thieves and plunderers; yet they seldom commit murder, unless they are attacked, or resistance is offered to them" (h)

I or the account of the tribes presented in this chapter, the author is chiefly indebted to the following documents —

- 1 Report of Colonel Harvey, Superintendent for the Suppression of Thug gee and Dacottee Selections from the Records of Government
- 2 Sketch of the History of the Ramu is, residing in the Sitara Territory, and in the Poons and Ahmediagar Districts By Captain Alexander, Commanding the Ahmediagar I ocal Corps

 Report of Captain Harvey on the Wandering Tribes of the Bombay Presidency in the year 1848. Bombay Government Records, No. I, New Series.

1. Kul-Korwah, or Rankaikhari.

Some of these, so long as they remain unsuspected, occasionally locate themselves in villages. Ostensibly they are basket-makers. Some hire and cultivate fields (particularly those frequenting the Dharwar District), and let themselves out as day lahourers, village musicians, and so forth; but they are all professional gang robbers and burglars. They are to be found throughout the Dekhan, where they are styled Kaikharis. In the Belgaum and Dharwar Districts, and also in the Carnatic, they are known as Kul-Korwahs. In other tracts, they are differently known, and change their names accordingly.

Formerly, the Kaikhards were robbers, who infested the Meywar country, and the entire tract south of the Narbuddha, from Broach along the coast into the Northern and Southern Koncans; above the Ghats, through Poonn, Nagar, and Khandesh, to Nagpore; a part of the Nizam's territories, Sholapore, and Sattarn from which they occasionally branched into the Southern Mahratta country, though they were not often found below the Krishna River.

What will be regarded, remarks Colonel Harvey, as the most astonishing feature in the system observed by these consummate robbers is, the unhounded license with which they have divided and sub-divided the whole country into divisions and districts, a family or collateral hranch of the tribe heing appointed to each division, and a leader to each district, which he is able to call peculiarly his own 'preserve,' heing that in which alone, according to the laws and restrictions on this subject, he is allowed to practise dacottee.

Mori Kar Korwah, or Püngi Korwah Kaihhari.

This is a hranch of the previous tribe. Its members are professedly jugglers, showmen, and players on pungts or blow-gourds, and under this guise travel about. They subsist by gang robbery and burglary; and by passing base metal for gold. They are altogether vagabonds; and may be found in the Bellary and Dharwar Districts.

The real jugglers are a distinct people, called Yargolhs and Golhars, residing particularly in the Madras territories. These are not professional thieves, though some of them will occasionally join those by whom they are represented.

3. Haggal Kaikya Korneah Kaikhari.

a are thieves, thieving hy day in always expressive and sometimes good-looking faces. As good wives and true, they are as remarkable as the Pindari females were otherwise. The Lambanis do not intermarry with other people, and live in no fixed abodes.

Much of the above account concerning the Lambanis was written by Colonel (then Captain) Harvey, in 1848, hefore the Government had brought the tribe into order.

9. Waddar.

Excavators of quarries, wells, and so forth, and diggers of earth generally. They sell pickaxes and shovels, and raise mud walls; but many are entirely robbers, both by day and night—by day on the highways, and by night in gangs in dwelling-houses. They are said to wound, and commit murder, on such occasions. Some join the Kul-Korwahs in burglary. The tribe, however, has not heen sufficiently inquired into, for some whole families are known to subsist by honest livelihood, and separate themselves from the robber clans, called Sanki Waddar and Man Waddar. The clan designated as Bhandt Waddar, excavates quarries, makes and sells mill-stones, and is not addicted to robbery.

10. Ganti Chor, called also Uchli.

These are the uthai-girs, or shoplifters and pickpockets of Northern India. They are permanently located in certain villages and districts, but periodically sally forth, attended by their wives and children, on their pilfering trade, frequenting bazars, fairs, and other crowded assemblages, where they desterously contrive to cut off pockets, to snatch away ornaments from women and children, and to carry off clothes and other goods exposed for sale in shops and stalls. They practise by day, and do not rob at night, or on the highway. Those in the Dekhan are said to have sprung originally from the Waddars.

. 11. Bedar.

These are in the Southern Mahratta country what the Ramûsis are in the Dekhan, and the Vasis are in Northern India. They live in villages in general service as sepoys, or as cultivators and labourers. They are also Wattandars in the capacity of village Talwârs, Naiks, Hallabs, Shetsannadis, and village watchmen generally shut many are nevertheless secretly gang robbers and highwaymen. They are also styled Panch Galla. They have yet to be properly inquired into.

12. Jat.

The same as the Multan in Northern India, and the Kammi in the Carnatic.

These are Mahomedans. Large bodies of them are in the service of the Dessai of Kittûr. Ostensibly they take service, and cultivate lands; but anlong robbers they are known to he altogether thieves, burglars, gang robbers, horsestealers, cattle stealers, and highwaymen, and are stated to have been so from long decent. They frequent the Southern Mahratta country and the Nizam's domi mons. The tribe needs to be further investigated.

13 Chappar, or Chappah Band

Some of the tribe are Mahomedans, while others are Telingis and Kougahs They reside in fixed villages, puticularly in the valley of the Krishna, in the neighbourhood of Churulgt and Müdibelul They periodically sally forth, and utter counterfeit coins, in making and passing which they are most expert and cunning. They spread about everywhere in the Madras and Bomhry Presidencies, and in the Nizum's dominions, penetrating even into Northern India.

11 Ramûst

Village watchmen In addition to their regular village duties, they under take to track all robhers, fuling in which, they used, according to old enstom, to make good half the amount of the value of the property plundered, and to be able to do which, they would go and rob some one else While watchmen and cultivators, they are secretly gang robhers, highwaymen, and burglars, and often commut murder when engaged in robbery. They exist everywhere in the Nagar and Poon Districts. They are of a different tribe from the Bedars already noticed, although similarly employed, and like them, hereditary robbers.

The Ramusis are separated into two great branches, styled respectively Chawan and Jadu, each of which is divided into a number of clans, as follows —

There are two other minor snb-divisions of the Ramusis, to the north of the Nira River, namely:—

1. Rorai, of Sanaurai. | 2. Gûrgûl.

Forty years ago this tribe inhabited one bundred and fifty six villages in the Kattau District, and fifty-one in the small district of Pabal, north of Poona. The Ramusis hold the position of hereditary village watchmen in many villages in the Bombay Presidency. In right of their office they occupy certain portions of land rent-free, hesides receiving wages and various kinds of perquisites. "The measures that were usually adopted under the Peshwh's government, on occasion of a robbery taking place," says Captain Mackintosh, "have undergone some modification under that of the British. When a robbery occurred in a village the Ramasi Rakhwaldar (watchman) was immediately sent for, and informed of the dictinumstance; and whether a door had been broken open, or a wall scaled or undermined, the watchman became responsible to the owner for the value of the stolen property that had been carried off, unless the act had been perpetrated by a Darorah, or a considerable hody of armed mcn. But the will of the agents of the ruling authorities was so arbitrary and uncertain, that the Ramusis dared not relax in the slightest degree their exertions to discover the plunderers, under any circumstances. Should the watchman have failed in seizing the robber or robbers, he in general engaged to make good the loss in the course of fifteen days, or a month, if the articles taken away did not amount to any great value. But should it have been discovered that a number of persons were engaged in the affair, the Rakhwâldâr prepared to proceed in pursuit of the plunderers early in the morning, tracing them by their footmarks; and for this purpose, he was joined by the Patel, the Karbari Kulkarni, the Changla, and some other persons of anthority from the village. The watchman, taking a twig of the branch of a tree, cut it to the size of one of the footmarks for a measure; and should the gang appear to have been numerous, several measures were used. The Ramust now took the lead, accompanied by the villagers, following the track; and if the watchman and his followers could trace it—which they are singularly expert in doingin a satisfactory manner, into the boundary of the adjoining village, the inbabitants of that village were obliged to repair to the boundary. These persons, for their own satisfaction, traced back the footmarks of the robbers for a short distance into the adjoining fields; and when they returned to the boundary, the different measures that had been used for measuring the footmarks were carefully and formally handed over to them, as they were obliged to prosecute the search immediately. And in this manner it was followed up from village to village. A

Ramusi and a Whar from the first village continued with the parties until the rob bers or the property were discovered, or all hopes of success had been ahan doned (a)

Captain Mackintosh, in his History of the Ramûsis, gives a graphic and de tailed account of the habits and exploits of this during tribe. They formerly hved to the south of the Neera River, but settled among the Pûrandar hills, on the north hank of that river, upwards of two hundred years ago, and in the seventeenth century fought bravely on the side of Sevajee, in his wars with the Mahomedan powers The Ramûsîs, being securely settled in the Pürandar Dis trict, moved northwards, to the east of the Syadri range of hills, and passing between Junir and Panir, took up then abodo m Kanur Pathar Descending the hills, to the south of the Pera River, and extending themselves in the country around Sangamnair and Akola, they entered the Sinur District, and approached the city of Nassik Meanwhile, they scattered themselves about the tract of country east of Parandar, between the Neera and Bheema In conjunction with the Koh trahe they seized upon the Purandar fort, which they held for a time, and were eventually expelled in 1803, by the assistance of troops sent by the British Resident of Poona Their lands were escheated until 1818, when the Peshwa became hostile to the British Government, and as they then offered to aid him in his conflict with the English, the Peshwa restored to them their forfeited lands

The Holgah Ramûsis are distinct from the Pûrandar Ramûsis above described They inhalist the country north of the Bheema, and have extended themselves along the banks of the Seena, in the Ahmedingar District. They affirm that they came originally from the Carnatae, to the south of the Krislina, probably Dharwar. The dialect spoken by them is sprinkled with Canarese words. In taking an oath, they swear by the sacred Tulis plant, and not by the Bel tree, like the Purandar Ramûsis. They are divided into thirteen claims, as follows—

All these clans intermarry with one another. They seem to hold little or no social intercourse with the Parandar Ramasts, and will not eat the food prepared by them, a feeling reciprocated by the latter. The habits and pursuits, however, of the two tribes are similar.

15. Kathkari.

These inhabit the Attaveessy, and Northern Konkan. They are manufacturers of catechu, which is produced by the destructive distillation of the Khair tree. They also make charcoal, collect gums, and frequently take service as farm helpers, though in this they are inconstant, leaving their employment without reason, and sometimes without wages. They are nomadic during the fine season, In the rains, they settle down in small huts near villages, and cultivate gourds of kinds, and some little rice. Towar appears to be their residence during the rains. As soon as the crops are housed, they resort to the jungle, and make charcoal. They are not admitted to the rights of Hindus. The women wear large strings of white and other beads about their necks; and though not so industrious as the men, are still to be found working as labourers for the Kumbis. They commit petty thefts of grain, fowls, and other things; and occasionally rob a benighted villager of his clothes. The number of this tribe is small. They seem to be allied to the Dher; but, nevertheless, keep themselves apart from this race, and will not cut food with them. They are squalid, lazy, and reckless; and indulge in disgusting practices. "They readily eat snakes, blood-suckers, and lizards, the blackfaced monkey, and jackals; in fact, devour all sorts of vermin." They are inve-The tribe is divided into four branches or clans, as follows:terate drunkards.

All these class intermarry. The highest in rank is the Helumn; and the lowest the Sindhi (a).

16. Katori.

An aboriginal race of very diminutive men, infesting the hills and wilds of Northern Koncan, and known as Maila Bheels. They are incorrigible robbers and highwaymen, pretending to sell firewood, forage, charcoal, and wild honey, and to be willing to labour. They are of low caste; and are not allowed to reside within any village. There is always great mortality among them whenever they become imprisoned.

17 Pardhi

These often reside in villages, and are village watchmen like the Ramūsis Such persons pretend to be the peaceable portion of the tribe of Pardins, well-known as travelling shikaris, snaring and selling game, and hving by the proceeds They have mutchlocks, swords and spears, and hunt large game. But they are bold and very indefatigable robbers, clinhing over the highest walls. They are to be found in Kbundesh and Berar. They go long distances to commit robberies, and it is said that they often attack and plunder treasuries.

18 Rheel

* Like the Ramüsts, these hve in villages as watchmen, hut rob and there as often as opportunities offer. They inhabit Kbandesb and the billy ranges beyond. Those located between the Tapit and the Supüra hills, north of Surit, are known as Wahiwibs or Wasawibs, and are great robbers.

19 Uchli Kaikhan

Another branch of the Kaikhari trihe, and like the Ucilis hefore noticed, are bazir thieves and pickpockets. Then homes are in villages, like the Gam Kaikharis. They attend fairs and bazars, and contrive in the crowd to snatch away ornaments and other property. Both men and women are so employed, and even their children. They travel about on such excursions, and are to be found in the Poona and Sattara Districts.

20 Bamptı

A well known class of petty theres They look like Mahrattus, and reside principally in villages, where they have fields As a pretence only, when on their expeditions they assume the garb of Brahmans, and visit brizars, and such crowded places, in the same manner as the Uchits They have the presumption to sit near Brahmans, and other respectable persons, at their shops, while conversing with whom they adroitly manage to appropriate anything valuable that may be within reach They alight also where trivellers may be, sit and talk with them, and then pilfer them in the same way They infest the country about Merich, Tasgam, Kholapore, Sholapore, Poona, and Sattara, and are the expertest of light fingered gentry

21 Bangar

Live in villages, and cultivate lands Eight or ten of them, magnificently dressed, repair in a body to the great fairs or markets, with rings on their fingers, and valuable necklaces around their necks. One or two of the gang pretend to be Sahūcars, and seemingly as such establish their booth next to that of some merchant, and like him display hales of fine and valuable cloths. Then the leader of the gang, taking with him plenty of ready money, and accompanied hy his people, repairs to the shop of some cloth merchant, and appears to wish to make large purchases of cloth. This leads the merchant to open his bales, in looking over the contents of which the visitor dexterously contrives to pass down to his associates, who stand near, yet seem not to belong to him, one or two piece-goods from every hale he inspects, which they pass on to others placed at intervals in the bazar. Meanwhile, the pretended merchant officiously packs up each hale, so that the real owner does not know what may have been extracted therefrom till, perhaps, two or three days after. These people travel ahout in this manner in the Sholapore and Akalkot countries, the Nizam's territories, and elsewhere.

2. Tin-nâmt.

A class of thugs, of the caste of those Gosains who mark their foreheads with three streaks of paint, indicating that they are Tin-nami, or three-named Gosains, a peculiar race of religious mendicants, who have three names. They dress scantily, like some of the Gosains, holding a cane in one hand, and an alms dish in the other, a hag hanging over the shoulder. They answer all enquiries hy declaring that they are going to Kashi, or Rameshwar, or are returning therefrom. They will live for several months in some large town, observing what Sahûcârs are in the habit of despatching bullion to other places; and when the Karrias, called in Bombay, Angrias, or men entrusted with the conveyance of such treasure, sally forth therewith, they follow them, and ingratiating themselves into confidence, often manage, like the more regular thugs, to strangle and kill them. They dispose of the corpses in round holes, the regular thugs using oblong ones; which is the chief distinguishing feature between them. Over these graves they will remain for several days, cooking their food there; and at length, when all signs of the earth cracking or sinking, where the interment has been made, have been carefully corrected, they depart with their hooty. These people are said to travel in all directions, and to be met with everywhere; but although Colonel Harvey has often met men of this tribe, such as they are, or seem to be. yet he has not bad any cause to helieve that the men above described really now exist. All his approvers say, however, that they still occasionally murder solitary travellers, in the way just described, when they are natives of a distant province, and are not likely to be missed.

23 Gand Bigarî

A class of thugs dressed like Gosuns in clothes of a turmeric colour . They wander about with court baskets, containing expressed oils, and other liquid drugs, which they sell They travel in bodies of from ten to twenty persons, and hve in tents They are said to practise thuggee, after the fashion of those I'm namis who pretend to he Gand Bigaris and vendors of drugs

24 Mana Ramusi.

These, like the Ramusis, reside in villages as watchmen, and have village claims on which they subsist. But they are also gang robbers, hurglars, and highwaymen, and are very dexterous in colouring and passing off brass and other metals for gold They belong to the Sattara, Poona, Kholapore Moghelas, and other countries, and have been discovered to be thorough discorts

The Mungs of the province of Kholapore have, in all ages, says Licutement Barr, of the Kholapore Infantry, ' attained an unenviable notoriety for their wild untameable habits, for their great cunning and hardiness, and for their predilection for outrage and robbery Feeding on carrion and such game and wild fruits as the country afforded, hving as outcasts from the haunts of their fellowmen, hated by all, and bitterly persecuted at times by the reigning authority-when their services were not in requisition to fill the coffers of the State-this tribe has been thrown into a condition of the most abject want and deplorable misery '(a)

These Mangs are divided into three branches -

1. Nada Mang

Holad Mang 3 Rackwaldar Mang

25 Per Mana

These are Mangs who, like the Dhers, reside outside of villages make ropes of leather and hemp, beat tom toms, and are Watandars But they are also addicted to robbery and other crimes, for which they are well known They reside principally in the Sholapore District, but they are also found in the Ahmednigur, Poona, Suttari, Kholapore, and other countries

26 Garodi Mang

Wanderers, showmen, jugglers, and conjurors They are also robbers, and gun information of good places in which to rob, by performing, as alie dy described, before Sahûcars and other rich persons They do not, however, roh on the highways, or dig into houses like common burglars. They are to be met with everywhere. The Bhat or Khanjar dacoits of Northern India are said to have heen originally a branch of this tribe.

27. Ari Madgar Mang.

Like the Per Mangs, these live outside of villages. They are tanners and shoeniakers, and also, it is said, robbers. They are found in Sholapore, Pandar-pore, Ahmednagar, and the Nizam's territory.

28. Chattargatti.

Picture painters. They have pois or books full of all kinds of pictures and portraits, which they go about showing, while, at the same time, chaunting verses in explanation of the story or tradition of cach. By this means they contrive to gain information of good places in which to commit robberies, and which, associated with Bagris, and often with the Deccan Kaikharis, they commit at night accordingly. They are also burglars, but, as such, never go armed, except with a long stick. They infest the Northern Koncan.

29. Bangria.

Wanderers, pretending to be fishermen, darners of woollen blankets, beggars, and breeders and sellers of huffaloes. They are in fact robbers and burglars; and are often associated with the Chattargattls, in whose company they travel ahout. The Bagria dacoits of Northern India are not the same people below the Ganga river,—that is, in Koncan, Sawant Wari, and Goa. These Bangrias are called Thikurs, and are not believed to rob in those tracts.

Bangria is the name of one portion or branch of the Koncan Kolis; or rather of a large family of them, the head of which is the present Rajah of Towar. Bamilia is another family name.

30. Daurt Gosain, or Mend Jogi.

A class of religious mendicants, some of whom are vagahonds, while others have fixed residences. They wander about in bodies begging alms, and beating the dawra, or peculiar drum by which they are recognized and are named after. They are both gang robbers and hurglars, and are found everywhere.

31. Jost.

Wanderers, beggars, and fortune tellers, pretending not only to divine the future, but also venturing to say what have already been the histories of those they begule By these means they gam access to the houses of respectable and wealthy persons, and plan their robbernes accordingly, which they commit at night. On such occasions they often associate with the Dairi Gosams They use only lithus or sticks They are also called Bûrbûrkis, from an instrument which they play when in honest disguise

32 Mahratta Banjari

Dwell in villages, serve as watchmen, and eultivate fields. Most of them are gang robbers, hurglars, and horse stealers. As mounted highwaymen, they often rob treasure, or convoys of goods, in the day time. They keep good horses, and reside chiefly in the Nizam's territories, where they are also called. Kobs.

33 Takkân

Mahomedan vagabonds, travelling in gangs They are professedly manufacturers of chalks, or granding stones, and hreeders of donkeys, but in reality are gang rohhers and hurglars During the hot weather some of their gangs visit tho Koncan In the rainy season, they keep about the neighbourhood of Ahmed nagar and Bala Ghat

34 Kolhâtt

Wanderers, hut some, for the sake of greater secrecy, reside in villages, and serve as watchmen. 'Their women are prostitutes, hut are not the same women more generally known as Kolâtnis, the common dancing women of the Dekhan They keep packs of dogs for hunting. They are, however, great dacoits and highwayanen, hut are not hirighters. They are, however, great dacoits and highwayanen, hut are not hirighters. They are, however, great dacoits and highwayanen, but are not hirighters. They are, however, great dacoits and highwayanen, but are not hirighters which was the Berars and Khandesh The Kolhâti dacoits are properly the Dâkhar kolatis, eating pigs, and pretending to live by making and selling combs made of bones, hut differ from the Son Chiris, who, both men and women, walk on stilts, dance on ropes, and exhibit themselves as tumblers, and so forth

35 Pakınlar

Live in villages, and have the appearance of common Mahratta Kunbis Ostensbly they are menders of millstones, like the Kaikharis, night guards, and shikaris, or lunters, hut strictly speaking they are gaing robhers, hurglars, and highwaymen By going about pretending to mend chalkes, they gain their in formation as to what houses to attack and plunder. They infest khandesh, Berar, and Moghalai. They use spears, matchlocks, and swords

36. Bhat

These are the Khanjars of Gondwana, and the Sausis or Sausiyas of Northern India. They are the most desperate of all dacoits, and wander ahout the Dekhan as though helonging to the Gujerati Dombaris, or showmen. They are a very hold people; and their time for committing a gang robhery, whether upon the house of a large merchant or hanker, or upon a government treasury, is invariably nightfall.

37. Kálbhila.

These travel about in the disguise of Jogis and Gosains, selling medicines, and accompanied by their ponies, asses, and bullocks. Their women are dressed like those of the Bhats. They are gang robbers, and gain their information by going about as vendors of medicinal dregs, and as heggars. After committing a robbery, they quickly hury their booty, and disperse. Two or three months afterwards they contrive to recover the plunder, which is then taken to their encampment, and divided. Their arms are spears. They are found in Berar and Berarhattt.

38. Pardâst. Newatt.

Wandering Mahomedans. They take service with merchants as scrops; and after some time a gang is assembled, and their masters are robbed. They often likewise commit hurglary. They infest Northern India, Malwa, and Gujerat.

70 Haridas

This tribe is connected with the Chattargattis Some of them form a part of the establishment of a Mahratta family, and are its story tellers reading and chaunting katlas or pleasant tales, for the immement of its members. It is related of Sevajee, that he was very fond of attending the assembles of these katha readers. It is a favourite Mahratta pastime, and the advent of a Handas to a village is builed with much pleasure, and he is listened to by a large audience till often a late bour. They wander about in small parties, yet are not robbers.

71 Pharlu An

A wandering tribe of Vahomedan wrestlers and gladintors. They are very athletic, and perform a markable feats in gymnastics, sword exercise, and so forth Wany are also expert at all kinds of tricks and displays of legerdemain. Their children are very intelligent and angle. The tribe is bonest (a)

72 Bagdt

These wander over the country from Aholapore to Chinchnee, a distance of thirty niles. In that tract they are a very small community of less than fifty persons, who originally came from Inchulkurunjee. Some of the tribe are found also at Bawra, hoorundwar, Azra, and in other places. Their occupation is to sell fish and marking nuts, and to mend blankets. They are professedly Hindus, and worship Musoba. The Bagdis do not intermirry with other tribes. They purchase their wives, and practise polygumy. All residing in the same village are under the authority of a head man, called Mehrir.

73 Balsantosh

The head quarters of this tribe are at Chikoree, Belgaum, Rookree, and Inchnikurumjee, hut members of the tribe are found at Belkihal, about the kho lapore territory, and in other regions. They have no recognized head. Thus social customs are peculiar; they pay money for their wives, practise bigamy, and hury their dead. The favourite deity worshipped by them, is Goraknath; but they are in the habit of carrying about with them a figure of the goddess Satwäi. As professional beggars, they lead a vagahoud life; and endeavour to gain admission into the houses which they visit, under the promise of their being able to procure the gratification of every wish, whether for children, or for success in any enterprise. Working on their credultry, they induce them to leave their houses, in order to purchase certain articles which they pretend to need. During their absence they steal anything that falls in their way, and make off.

74. Beldar.

The tribe roams about the districts of Sattara, Belgaum, Kholapore, and Nepanee, and other parts of the Dekhan. One of their principal places of resort, especially in the rainy season, is the village of Nandgaum, in Sattara. Some of their clans are under the authority of head-men; others not so. Bigamy is allowed in the tribe, and wives are paid for. The dead are buried, not burnt. The estensible occupation of the Beldars is to quarry stones, and manufacture hand-mills; but they pursue other and more congenial enterprises. They are often seen at fairs and great festivals, and on the hanks of rivers where multitudes of people are accustomed to hathe. Here, while their performances attract general attention, their children pilfer in all directions. As opportunity offers, they commit robberies and other crimes. The religion of the tribe is a species of Hinduism, Venkoba heing the deity commonly worshipped. They do not intermarry with other tribes.

75. Garûdi.

Snake-charmers, jugglers, and the like. They are scattered over the whole of the Dekhan, but keep themselves separate from all other tribes. They indulge in bigamy, and give money for their wives. The tribe bas no uniform custom in regard to funeral rites, and sometimes bury, and sometimes burn, their dead.

76. Bhâts.

The Bhâts are a well known class of Hindns in most parts of India, whose occupation is that of reciting and singing the achievements and praises of chiefs and of all those who employ them. In Sattara, Meeroi, Bombay, Surat, Kholepore, and other districts of the Dekhan, there is a wandering tribe of Bhâts, who are both minstrels and beggars. They have no recognised head. They practice polygamy. Their principal deities are Shiva, Marûtt or Hanûmân, and Vithoba

77 Bhandû Kumhâr

Their chief place of residence is Punala in Kholepore, but the tribe is sent-tered about in various districts of the Dekhan. They gain a livelihood by the manufacture and sale of mud images. Polygamy is allowed in the tribe. Ther wives are obtained by the payment of money. The bodies of their dead are burned. The Bhandûs acknowledge the authority of a head man. They do not intermatry with other tribes.

78 Dasri

. These are found at Bombay, Belgaum, and other erties of the Dekhan, but their principal seat in the runy senson is Begapore. They are lingamists, and obtain their wives by the payment of money. Unlike most Hindus, they bury their dead. The Dasris are by profession play actors and show men. They hold no social intercourse with other tribes.

79 Dharad

A low Mahomedan tribe residing chiefly at Peta Punala in Kholepore They pay great concration to Pirs or Mahomedan saints Like Hindu castes generally the Dhawads do not intermarry with other tribes. They practise polygamy, and give payment for their wives There is a head man of the tribe. In occupation they are iron smelters.

80 Dombari

A wandering tribe with no fixed home. They go from place to place in the districts of Poona, Sattara, Belgaum, Sawunt Warce, and the adjacent tracts Some are Hindus, worshipping Yelloha and Yelluma, and some are Mahomedans, paying reverence to pirs, jet they have one held who exercises authority over the tribe, and untermarry only among themselves. Polygamy is practised, and mone, is given for the wives. They have a had notoriety for premoting the prostutution of their women.

81 Durgi Marji Walle

This tribe is known in Bomhry, Satture, Rholepore, and in some parts of the Carnatic, where the head man resides — In the rainy season their chief place is Beejapoor. They exhibit idols to the people whom they visit, and beg alms, and their favourite deities are Lakhshmi and Hanuman. The tribe keeps itself aloof from all others. Their dead are huried.

82. Downi Gosáni.

These wander over large tracts of country, including Sattara, Belgaum, Kholepore, the Carnatic, Meeruj, Jumkhundee, and other parts of the Dekhan, as well as in Koncan. They give money for their wives, and sometimes have two, but no more. Like most of these tribes, they bury their dead. They profess to be Hindus, and worship Nathdeo. Some persons of the tribe sell needles, shells, and so forth. Others beat a peculiar drum called downt, and beg.

The Gosavis steal the crops off the fields; and also commit thefts, burglaries, and gang and highway robberies. They likewise are accustomed to assume various disguises, in order to procure information for the successful commission of their depredations. They have no permanent lodging, but go among the villages, encamping in the jungle near to water, where they sit under the shade of thick cloths erected for the purpose. At night their weapons are kept ready for use; but in the day time they are unarmed. They cat fish, fowls, and the flesh of goats, wild cats, foxes, and the like, but not the flesh of cattle. Some of the tribe acknowledge a head-man; others do not.

83. Ghisart.

The Ghisaris visit parts of the Kholepore territory, Meeruj, and various places in the Dekhan. They speak of themselves as Rajpoots, and chiefly worship the god Jotiba. Their trade is that of blacksmiths. If they can afford it, they prefer to burn their dead; if not, they bury them.

84. Gole.

The head-quarters of the tribe are at Chikoree, Nepance, and adjoining tracts during the rainy season; but they are seen throughout the year in other districts, such as, Badanee, Meeruj, and other parts of the Dekhan. They sell drugs, glass-beads, and so forth, and beg; and are prone to enter unoccupied bouses and carry away what they find there. The Goles are Hindus, and worship Venkoba and Yelluma. They practise bigamy, and bury their dead.

85. Gopal.

These too are Hindus, and worship Basudeo. They are found about Kholepore and the Dekhan, and get their living by begging. The tribe is under the authority of a chief. Its members do not intermarry with other tribes. They give money for their wives, and are allowed to have two if they choose.

86. Gatî Chorî.

The Gatis are professional pick-pockets and shop-lifters. They frequent the Kholepore territory, and the Dekhan generally; but their chief place of residence is Danolee, in Kholepore. There is a head-man over the tribe, which holds no social intercourse with other tribes. They are permitted to have two wives, who are obtained by the payment of money; and they bury their dead. As Hindus they worship Yelluma.

87 ILI.E.

These belong to the Koh race They traverse the villages of the Carnatic and the Dekhan, especially the neighbourhood of Hookeree; but the original state of the tribe is Shirhuttee, a village in the Belgaum District. They practic higanay, and pay for their wives. By profession the Helvis are beggars and fortune-tellers. The habits of some of them are very peculiar. Dressing themselves in quaint and gaudy clothes they ride out on righty ornamented hullocks, and riding up to a house profess to be able to tell the names of all the immates without any previous knowledge of them, together with the names of all their ancestors in an unbroken line for many generations. While engaged in this task they acquaint themselves with the doors and passages of the house, and afterwards, in company with the Mangs and Ramāsis, plunder it. There is a head-man for directing the affairs of the tribe, which does not intermarry with other tribes.

bury their dead, and keep themselves separate from other tribes. Their principal deities are Kam and Vithoha.

90. Kharkharmundi.

These visit Bombay, Sattara, Dharwar, and Kholepore, especially in the villages of Tullasee and Yemgay. They are beggars. Their chief deity is Margoba. They have no recognized head, yet are a distinct tribe, and are exclusive on the marriage question.

91. Komtt.

Wanderers about the Carnatic and the Dekhan, their bead-quarters being at Pundburpore in the rainy season. Adomed with thick necklaces, made of beads of the Tulsi tree, they frequent fairs exhibiting a stick surmounted by a brown eloth flag, small wooden castanets, and other instruments. While in the act of reciting prayers in the temples, or among the crowd, or whenever the opportunity occurs, they cut away the pocket of the unwary bystander with considerable dexterity. Another trick is, to sit on the ground in places frequented by pilgrims, with patches of cloth tied around their limbs, which they pretend be diseased, and at the same time chaunt their prayers, and beg. Then seizing a happy moment, they snateb up whatever is at band, and suddenly make off. Osteusibly, they are beggars, yet sometimes they have various articles for sale, such as, glass-beads, lookingglasses, curious stones, and the like. Many again carry about with them certificates setting forth that their tongues have been cut out by robbers; and on looking into their mouths no tongues are visible as they have been drawn away for the moment. Moreover, as objects of charity they are admitted into the bouses of benevolent persons, and being there they make observatious of their condition in view of house-breaking at some future time. They bury their dead.

92. Korrt.

These are found in the Kholepore territory, in places below the Ghauts, Sawunt Warce, Rajapore, and in parts of the Dekbau. Entering villages under the pretence of selling brooms, baskets, and so forth, they obtain information regarding houses and property, to be afterwards made use of in burglaries. They also pilfer any article which comes in their way. Some are employed as musicians. As Hindus they worship Hanuman and Venkoba. They practise polygamy, and pay for their wives. The tribe keeps aloof in its marriages from all other tribes.

93 Kalsutra

This tribe winders over a wide tract of country, extending from Northern India to the Dikhan. In the rainy season their favourite resort is Walwa in Sattara, and the Putwurdhun territory. They support themselves by exhibiting pupper shows and assuming various disguises. They are partly Hindus and partly Mahomedans, yet do not associate with other tribes. The Kalsutins are content with one wife. There is no recognized head of the tribe.

94 Lamant

Ramdoorg, the country below the Ghauts, and Gujerat are frequented by this trihe. In the ramy senson they retire to the jungles. They are sellers of salt, dry coriander seed, and so forth, yet are ready for the commission of thefts and highway robbenes when opportunity favours. They worship Venktesh, pay for their wives, and hurn their dead. The tribe obeys a recognized head

95 The Mahrath Nat Tribe

These people assume the disguise of Dasn'um Gosavis, who are traders Having obtained information respecting some traveller who is in possession of valuable property, they meet him at his halting place on the road, and inquiring his destination declare their intention of proceeding to the same place. Having distinct the first thing and increasing drug iningled with his food, and while he is under its influence, rob him, and decamp. In this manner they commit many robberies, and occasionally murders, on unfrequented roads. They have also a triek of swindling people by promising to show them treasures ludden by their ancestors. After digging for some time, they declare that the treasure has fled to mother spot. Thereupon, goats, fowls, himes, and other things are given for the purpose of enabling them to perform ceremonies for everything possible has been squeezed from their dupes, they perform some uninearing rites, and manage to quit the premises.

The tribe has a recommed herd who lives at a village called Nateypote.

They wander about Sangke, Meruj, and the Dekhan generally, and pass the runy season in Sattara. Some of them are permitted to have two wives. They bury their dead

96 Watt Wad

A tribe frequenting Dharwar, Sanglee, Meeruj, and adjacent districts, but their chief places of resort are Sangowday, Dutwar, and other villages in khole pore. Their occupation is, to sink wells and to remove earth; but they are addicted to shop-lifting and to picking of pockets, and indulge in the trickery for which the Beldars have made themselves notorious. They are higamists, pay for their wives, and bury their dead. The original seat of the tribe is said to be Tylungun. It internarries with only one other tribe, namely the Godiwad, or Kalwad. These people are commonly called Waddars. They worship Venkoha.

97. Nadi Mana.

One of the Mang tribes, yet not intermingling with other tribes. They are found in Kholepore and other districts; and are workers in leather.

98. Nad Lakhshmi Walli.

These are supposed to be either Mangs or Mhars. They wander ahout Sattara, the Carnatic, and the Dekhan; hut their original seat is Becjapoor. The trihe is a branch of the Kolt family; but does not internarry with other tribes. Their practice is to hury their dead. They put on long coats, called zugas, besmear their forcheads with koonkos, allow their hair to grow luxuriantly, and with flutes in their hands, hollow hrass rings, filled with small pieces of stone, on their thumbs, and flourishing long whips, they stand before houses, dance, play upon their flutes, shake their thumbs, and pretend to beat their hacks with their whips. A great noise is produced, and a crowd of spectators is collected. As the performance goes on, the wives and children of the tribe mingle in the crowd, seize any article in the house or near it left unguarded, and make off.

99. Nakadoltachai Wyad.

These quacks wander about with hags hanging from their shoulders containing cocoanut shells filled with different drugs. Although these drugs are of inferior quality, they pass for good and efficacious medicines with the ignorant, who come to them for advice. If an invalid happen to live by himself, they endeavour to persuade him to suffer them to reside with him for a time, for the purpose of giving him suitable medicine. After remaining some time and ascertaining the state of his house and the extent of his property, they give information to their companions, and on an appointed night the house is robbed, and the gang decamp. The tribe is scattered over Dharwar, Sattara, and the Carnatic; and some of them travel as far as Benares. They bury their dead, like most of these tribes.

SEC. I—THE SINDHI TRIBES, SEC. II—THE SEEDEL OR SLAVE RACES OF SCINDE. SEC. III.—THE MEMON CLANS. SEC. IV.—THE KHWAJA CLANS. SEC. V.—THE MOHANA CLANS.

SECTION L-THE SINDHI TRIBES.

The races inhabiting Scinde are numerous and diverse. Many are altogether of foreign origin, and are immigrants from Arabia, Persia, Beloochistan, Afghanistan, and the Indian Peninsula. "The Sindbi Proper," remarks Lieutenant Burton, "is a stronger, more robust, and more muscular man than the native of Western India. His hands, feet, and ancles, have none of that delicacy of formation observable among the nations that inhabit the broad lands lying on the other side of the Indus. The Sindhi, in fact, appears to be a half breed between the Hindu, one of the most imperfect, and the Persian, probably the most perfect, specimen of the Caucasian type. His features are regular, and the general look of the bead is good. The low forebead and lank hair of India are seldom met with in this province. The heard, especially among the upper classes, is handsome, though decidedly inferior to that of Persia or Afghanistan. . In morale be is decidedly below his organization; his debasement of character being probably caused by constant collision with the brave and bardy hill tribes who bave always treated him as a serf, and by dependency upon Hindu shroffs and banyans, who have robbed and impoverished him as much as possible. He is idle and apathetic; unclean in his person, and addicted to intoxication; notoriously cowardly in times of danger; and proportionably insolent when he has nothing to fear. He has no idea of truth or probity; and only wants more talent to be a model of treachery. His chief occupations at present are cultivation, fishing, hunting, and breeding horses, camels and sheep" (a). The Sindhi does not dress so well as Hindus ordinarily do. He wears a peculiar cap, which is said to be not unlike an English hat inverted. This is worn by all classes, except those of a sacred character, who wear the turban. In religion, the Sindhis are Mahomedans.

The Sindhis are great gamblers, and play chess and hackgraminon, games with cards, dice, cowies, and pice, and others in which skill or chance, or both combined, are required. Men, women, and children delight in such intertainments, in which often quarrels and disputes arise, especially from the cheating to which all are prone. The Sindhis are also fond of kite flying—a fivourite diversion with Hindus,—and also of pigeon flying, cock righting, run righting, and wrestling.

Sindhi women are of fairer complexion and of larger features than Hindu women, but are not so delicitly formed. They are very ignorant, and two of them can either read or writt. "The usual Moslem prejudice against femalic adjustion is strong in Scinde. In manners the Sindhi female wants the mildness of the Indian, and the viviety of the Afghra and Persian. She is rather grave and sedate than otherwise in society. She is fond of play, and can cheff with formidable devicerty. Sindhi women are most indecent in their language, especially in abuse. They have very few expressions peculiar to their sex, but deliberately select the worst words used by the men. They are fond of drinking liqueurs and the different preparations of hemp. Intoxication is always the purpose of their potations. Many of them take smulf, and almost all smoke tobacco." (a) Altogether the characters and habits of Sindhi women are more repulsive than attractive.

The list of these tribes, clais, and great families is long, but is of importance and interest by reason of its completeness. The list arranged alphabetically, as originally drawn up by Lieuten int it. F. Birton, to whom great credit is due for the exceeding care he took in compiling it, is as follows.—

SECTION II.—THE SEEDEE OR SLAVE RACES OF SCINDE.

In former times, many slaves were imported into Scinde from Muscat and other parts of Arabia. These were from Zanzibar, Momhas, Ahyssinia, and other countries of Africa. The slaves were introduced into families of the wealthy classes, and generally intermarried among themselves. They were a degraded race, of vicious habits. Occasionally, they rose to some distinction; for example, Siddee Hosh Mahomed was the favourite attendant of Shere Mahomed. Most of the hetter class of slaves adopted the Hanifi form of Mahomedanism. Sometimes, though not often, slave women married Sindhi bushands. Their half-caste children are called Guddo; and quadroons, that is, the children of a half-caste woman married to a Sindhi husband, are termed Kambrani. The descendants of these slaves are commonly designated by the term Seedee, a corruption of Saiyid. They are divided into upwards of twenty principal tribes as follows :-

SECTION III .- THE MEMON CLANS

Respecting these, Lieutenant Burton makes the following interesting observations :-" Many Memons," he states, "are found settled in Scinde, especially about Hyderahad, Sehwan, and Kurrachee. They doubtless were originally Kutchee Hindus, who became Moslems, and probably emigrated to Scinde during the Kalhora rule. Their avocations are trade, agriculture, and breeding camels. Their dress is that of the Scindee; and their faith that of Ahu Hanifi. Some of them are very learned men; and they have done more than any other class to introduce the religious sciences into this country. They have either abandoned, or never adopted, the heresy so common among their hrethren in Bombry, namely, the system of depriving the females of their pecuniary rights in wills and inher tances. The Scinde Memon always adheres to the word of the Koran, leaving one fourth of his property to his wife if he has no issue by her, and one eighth, should he have issue. His daughter moreover claims half the portion of property allowed to a son. No class of people in Scinde is more highly spoken of than the Memon. (a)

The word Memon is a corruption of mumin a behaver. Many learned men have sprung from the Memons in Scinde

SECTION IN -THE KHWAJA CLANS

The tradition prevalent among these class is that they came originally from Persia. They are attached to the Ismachych heresy and yet differ from the Mahomedans of this creed in that while the latter behave in seven Imams they consider that the Imams should appear in unbroken succession, and consequently one exists among them even at the present time. They are heterodox Shiahs The Nhw yas are a small community, and are chiefly found at Kurrachee. These people have no mosques in Scinde, but perform their religious services in a house specially fitted up, called Lano. The Sumin Kâris perform the ceremonies at their marriages and funerals. In their dress the Nhw yas appear like Sindhis, yet they disapprove of the dark blue colour, the most popular hue in Seinde, and prefer red or white. They are accustomed to shave their heads, leaving a small tuft of huir on each temple.

SECTION V -- THE MOHANA CLANS

These were formerly Huidus, but have become converts to the Minomedian faith. They are fishermen, and reside chiefly by the shores of the lakes of Manchar, Mamyar, and Kinjur. The Mohanas are of very dark complexion, and of a singular cast of countenance. They have a character for gross immorality, yet outtoardly they are religious, masmuch as they diligently observe the cere monies and duties pre-cribed by the Mahomedian creed, and also some of i Hindiu origin, such as the worship of the Indius under the name of kinvaya khizi, which is periodically propitated by an offering of rice in carthen pots covered with red cloth (b). The Mohana clans are numerous, and are controlled by lie id men styled of mix mursu.

The greatness and prosperity of tribes and families, succeeded by their decay and ruin, are no where more strikingly illustrated than in Scinde, where illustrious tribes of former ages are now in ignoble poverty (a). Scinde was the carliest Indian conquest made by Mahomedan invaders, yet their rule over that country, though at one time firm and resolute, gradually became weak and impotent, and eventually gave place to a succession of dynasties in which at one time a Hindu element, at another, a Mahomedan, predominated.

I.—The Sâmmâ and Sûmrâ Tribes.

These tribes inhabit the country beyond Tatta. Here they are a mild and inoffensive people (b). The Samma and Samra Rajpoots were rulers in Scinde in ancient times. The Samma reigned from the middle of the eleventh century to 13-40, and were overthrown by the Sammas who governed Scinde till about the year 15-21, when they were subdued by Shah Beg Arghun, whereupon many of the tribe field to Cutch and settled among their brethren, already there. Their descendants are now labourers and cultivators; and are divided into seven tribes, as follows:—

1. Jamûtri. 2. Arab Gadûr.

3. Shûrû. 6. Warah.

The Arab Gadûrs are reputed to be descended from the Koreish tribe of Arabia Tradition states, moreover, that they have resided in Lus from the time of Omar, the third Caliph

II - The Nûmria Tribe

These are principal inhabitants of the province of Lus They are descended from the uncient Samm and Sumra tribes (a) The population of the southern and central divisions of the district of Kurrachee, is largely composed of Numrias and Johns, the latter being an offshoot of the former The Númrias are of Rappoot origin The first famous man of the tribe was Ihrahim Burfat, who flourished about two hundred years ago His grandson, Izzat Khan, an energetic and ambitious chieftain, got possession of Beyla and the province of Lus The tribe is divided into the following clans -

III .- The John Tribe.

Though descended from the Nûmrias, they formerly were at frequent feud with them. In their disputes they commonly came off victorious. Their first Chief of note was Jam Bejor. The Jokias are a martial people, possessing great courage and activity. Their aquiline nose and noble bearing give them a striking appearance. "They are held in high repute," says Major Preedy, "not only in Seinde, but throughout Kattiawar and Gujerat, and even in the Nizan's territory, for their courage and fidelity; and it is computed that there is seldom less than half the tribe absent from Seinde in the employ of these several governments. The present Jam estimates the absentees at six thousand. the Jokias and Nûmrias have conducted themselves well since they came under British rule, and have in many ways proved themselves useful subjects. Both tribes have abundance of cattle, which are their chief source of wealth. The ranks of our city police are almost entirely recruited from them, and the Kalmatis, a few of whom reside among the Jokias" (a). The tribe bas many sub-divisions or clans, the principal of which are the following:—

Principal Johiu clans with their places of abode.

- 1. The Tabir clan (to which the Jam belongs), inhabiting Mulleer.
- 2. The Musa clan, inhabiting Malmooaree and the Runn Pettyanee.
- 3. The Bandija clau, do, Guddap.

- 9. The Amirka clan, do. Kuddejee and Gaggur.
- 10. The Lamani clan, do. Mulleer,
- 11. The Powhar clan, do. Malleer and Guddap (b).

IV.—Lumrî Tribe.

A branch of the Jokia tribe. The latter, bowever, keep themselves aloof from them because of their intermarriages with the Beloochees.

V .- The Chuta Tribe.

The Chûtâs claim descent from the Sûmra Rajpoots, who ruled over Scinde from the middle of the eleventh century to the beginning of the fourteenth.

(a) Report of Major Preedy, Collector of Karrachee, on the Hilly Regions to the west of the Karrachee District. Selections from the Bombay Overrament Records, No. 35, New Series, pp. 12, 13.

They have probably occupied that part of the country in which they are now found from the period in which the Sumris were subdied by the Summ's through the assistance of Allu ud din, the emperor of Delhi. They inhalist the country on both sides of the Huob. On their north are the Brahm tribes of Mingals and Khedrahis, on the east they we bounded by the Keertur, Mehee and Mol hills, on the west by the Pubb hills, and on the south, by the Kund and Vehrab streams on the left and right hanks of the Hubb.

They are a pastoral race and care little for the cultivation of the soil Throughout the whole of their country only three or four places show any signs of agriculture. The Chûtâs are smaller in stature than Sindhis of the plams yet wear the same kind of dress with this difference that they are more partial to the use of the turban and the leathern sandal thru the Sindhis.

* The houses of the Chutas are of peculiar construction Turning round the corner of a hill or arriving at the top of some small eminence, in the hollow beneath carefully sheltered from the wind, is a collection of cight or ten huts of the rudest kind, occasionally clustered together without any attempt at order, though more generally drawn out in regular line. At the brek of eich are piled up carpets, quilts coarse bluil ets, bedsteads, matting, holsters, camel saddles, and an infinite variety of articles which they have a particular foundness for displaying in this fashion, but which are rarely brought into use, except on occasions of a betrothal or sueing in marriage, when the amount of dowry to be expected is calculated by the display that can be made of articles of the nature inferred to These huts are uniformly constructed of matting or coarse blankets drawn over a rough framework of steeks, and are either rounded in form life the tilt of a waggon, the ends of the blankets being in this case drawn together and fastened to the ground by pegs, or are square or rather oblong:

These people hear a had character for quartelling and theft. A proverb cuculates among the neighbouring tribes respecting them. This is 'chitta hula', signifying that the Chuta is a rogue—an epithet, it seems, they well deserve. Formerly, great ammosity subsisted between the Chut'is and all other tribes, and often serious disputes arose in consequence.

This tribe is divided into fourteen clans as follows -

1 Butanî 4 Marcho 2 Nathâuî 5 Uthm int

3 Sidikâni 6 Tûrânî

The Barejohs are professional heggars, acknowledged and countenanced by all the other clans. The Ganjohs and Bandejohs are inserted in this list because they hold intercourse with the tribe, and apparently are somewhat connected with it; and yet it is doubtful whether they really belong to the tribe. They may, probably, have sprung from the Brabuis (a). The entire tribe is far from numerous; and perhaps does not exceed three thousand persons.

VI.—The Afghan Tribes.

Some Afghan tribes have been in Scinde for a long period, inhabiting for the most part Hyderabad and the northern division of the province. They are a bold and hardy race, with a finer physique than that presented by the ordinary inhabitants of the country. Many are possessed of land. In former times, the Afgbans frequently invaded Scinde, and were always successful in such enterprises. "In appearance," says Licentanate Burton, "they are a large and uncommonly handsome race of people, perfectly distinct from the common Sindhis, whom they regard as quite an inferior breed. The women are not inferior to the men in personal appearance" (b). It is supposed that a considerable number of the Afghans now inhabiting Scinde are descendants of those who accompanied Sirdar Madad Khan Nurzye, in his invasion of the country in 1781, with the intention of restoring the Kalhoras to the government which they had lost.

VIII -The Kalhora Tribe

Former rulers in Seinde, who were dispossessed by the Talpurs after governing the province successfully for nearly fifty years, during which time they had reached, says Lieutenant (now Sir Lewis) Pelly, "to judge from their architectural remains and sites, a degree of civilization and taste nowhere discernible among the dwellings of their conquenors" (6)

In his work on the listory of Scinde Lieutenant Burton has given the following succinct account of the various rulers of that province from early times down to the present —

IX-Ancient Rulers of Scinde

- A D 711 Scinde previously ruled by Hindus, but conquered by the Moslems at this date

X.—The Jat Tribe.

A miserable and degraded race, with an expression of countenance indicative of great ignorance and stupidity. They are said to be a branch of the Jit or Jāt tribe formerly occupying the country in the upper part of the Indus, and were converted to Mahomedanism on the overthrow of the Hindu rulers of Scinde. They possess large herds of cattle, and also cultivate the soil. They are little attached to any fixed spot, but wander about the country. Indeed, those who have settled down in villages, being ashamed of their old name, have adopted others, by which they are now known, while the term Jāt is now only applied to othese clans and families which still indulge their roving propensities and rear cattle.

The tribe, therefore, has many subdivisions, some of which are as follows :--

1.	Darodgarh.	9.	Kalaru.
2.	Kohawar.	10.	Magasi.
3.	Jûnejah.	11.	Mir-jat.
4.	Wagyan (a).	12.	Parhiyar.
5.	Babbur.	13.	Sanjarani.
6.	Bhati.	14.	Siyal.
7.	Jiskani.	15.	Solangi (b).
8.	Joya.	- 1

The Jats are chiefly found at Kakralo, Jati, Chediyo, Maniyar, Phulajee, and Johi. Socially, they are all low in rank, and possess no family of distinction among their clans.

These Jâts are in habits and appearance essentially different from the Jâts of Gujerat. See the section on the Jât tribe among the cultivator tribes and castes of that province.

An Afghan race, inhabiting the country around their chief town of Kajjak, in the Seebee District. They are an independent tribe.

XII .- The Barozht Tribe.

An independent tribe, also inhabiting the Seebee District. Their chief town is Koork. They are a strong and energetic people.

" XIII - Tribes of Kutchee

These are "the Magzis, and other branches of the great family of Rind, various clans or families of Brahuts Jâts, Khosas, Jamalis, Jettois, Mâclis, the border tribes, the Dûmbhis, and Jakrânis, and the distinct and peculiar tribe of Khyhiris The Magzis adjoin the Chandris in British Science The Jats, Khosas, Jamâlis, Jettois, Machis, Umrânis, Ramdânis, &c, compose the mass of the peasantry of the country, and are dispersed all over the province '(a)

XIV -The Khetranî Tribe

An independent tribe beyond Bruish territory. They are a distinct people, and yet intermarry both with Afghans and Beloochees. They also form alliances with the Bhūgti tribe. They are a quiet agricultural people, hving, in a hilly region, which is nevertheless sufficiently productive to satisfy their wants. Their country lies to the north of the Bhūgtī territory, and is about one hundred and twenty miles in length, and seventy in hreadth. Its chief town is Barkhan, about one hundred and sixty miles to the north east of Shikarpore. Above them again are the Afghan and Murri tribes, and to the east, the Lashiri and Gürcham tribes. There is very little communication between the Khetrānis and the inha bitants of Scinde. See a further account of this tribe in the chapters on the Tribes of Deri Ghazi Khan.

XV-The Abra Trube

A large tribe engaged in agriculture. They have an extensive settlement at Lurkhana. In former times they formed a part of the Kalhona army

XVI-The Labori Trabe

A tribe found in the district of Chandool ah (b)

XVII -The Hakrah Tribe

A tribe inhabiting the district of Chandookah

XVIII - Chayrah Tribe

XX.-The Baroi Tribe.

An agricultural and pastoral tribe interspersed among the Nûmris, with whom they are at constant feud.

XXI.-The Kurayshis, or Siddikis.

These are descendants of Abubekr, and are somewhat numerous. As the Kurayshis are of the Koreish trihe, the Farukis, who are of the posterity of Umar, are embraced in it (a).

XXII.—The Alaxis.

Descendants of Ali by his wives, excepting the famous Fatima. They are Shiahs.

XXIII .- The Abbasis.

These are descended from Abbas, and are very numerous in Scinde (b).

XXIV .- The Saiyids.

Both branches of the Saiyids, the Hasani, and the Husaini, are numerous in Scinde. They are mostly of the Shiah or Rafizi sect of Mahomedans, and are divided into four great branches or clans, as follows:—

1. Bokhart.

3. Shirazt.

2. Mathart.

4. Lekhiravi.

The Saiyids have been in Scinde nearly two hundred years. Some of them have great influence in the province by reason of their learning. The Kalhora rulers supported the Saiyids liberally; but their successors, the Talpurs, Pahanogh Shiaha, paid them less attention, and were less disposed to bestow upon them the large sums to which they had been accustomed.

XXV .- The Bhatia Tribe.

An enterprising and laborious people, engaged in trade and commerce. They and the Lohânâs have in their hands the greater portion of the trade of he country.

THE BELOOCHEES

The Beloochees have come from Beloochistan and settled in Seinde. They have often been confounded with the Sudhis, yet in reality the differences between the two races are considerable. "The Belooch, as contrasted with the Sindhi," says Lieutenant Burton, "is a far superior being: fairer in complexion, more powerfully formed, of more hardy constitution, and, when intoxicated, sufficiently brave in hattle. He has his own ideas of honour, despises cowardiee, and has no small share of national pride. At the same time, he is addicted to intoxication, debauched in his manners, slow in everything except the eunning of a savage, violent and revergeful. His manners are rough in the extreme. His amusements are chiefly field sports and drinking; and his food is coarso and distasteful" (a). The Belooch women delight in intrigue. Some can read a little Persian and Sindhi.

The Beloochees of Scinde belong to the Hanifi sect of Islam; and affirm of themselves that they are descended from Arabs of Aleppo. They are an ignorant people; take little interest in the study of books; and are passionately fond of field sports, looking with something like contempt on the pursuits of literature, and regarding such occupation as effeminate and unmanly. It is not remarkable, therefore, that they possess no literature besides ballads and songs.

Before the British rule commenced in Scinde the Beloochee chiefs formed a species of military aristocracy like that of the Normans in England under the earlier types of the feudal system. This social superiority lasted throughout the whole of the Talpur period; but was soon radically altered when the country passed into our hands.

The following is a list of the principal tribes and class of Beloochees inhabiting Scinde, some of which are described with more or less detail in other parts of this chapter.

I proceed to give some account of a few of these tribes.

I.—The Mazart Tribe.

This tribe is found on the right bank of the Indus, between Mithenkot and Boordeka, a district lying partly in Upper Scinde, and partly and chiefly in the Punjab. The tribe was formerly very predatory in its habits, and plundered the boats on the Indus, stole cattle, made inroads into the hilly country, was ever ready to engage in petty warfare with its neighbours, and would sometimes cross the Indus and enter the Bhawulpar territory for this purpose. They are a hrave and fearless people, and number from five to ten thousand persons. For a fuller account of the tribe, see Part I, Chapter VI, on the Tribes of Dera Ghazi Khan and its Borders.

II -The Bûrdi Tribe

This is a much smaller tribe than the preceding. The Bûrdis inhabit the tract of country, called after them, Boordeka, on the right bank of the Indus, hetwisen Mazari, on the north, and the Scinde canal, on the south, yet only a portion of the tribe reside here, others are scattered about Scinde and Kutch, under the authority of their clueß. "The habits of the tribe," says Major John Jacob, "were formerly wholly predatory, and up to 1847, the Bûrdis made frequent marauding inroads on their neighbours in Kutchee, and in the hills, as well as in Scinde'. This officer in that year destroyed the 'whole confederacy of plunderers in the British border' including the Bûrdis and other tribes. He disarmed the population of this district, cut roads through the jungle, and adopted other vigorous measures for the complete subjugation of the predatory tribes. The consequence of this vigorous policy was that in a short time the country became most orderly and peaceable, and the people quietly settled down to agricultural and pastoral pursuits (a)

III -The Khosa Tribe

The Khôsas are reputed to be an Ahysaman race

Some have even connected their name with 'Cush'. They are a numerous tribes not confined to any one tract, but are scattered about the frontiers of Seinde and in the eastern districts of Beloochistan. Some are agriculturists, but formerly many were addicted to plunder, and were wild and lawless in their labits. See Part. I, Chapter VI, on the Tribes of Dera Ghazi Khan, for further information on this tribe

IV -The Jettoî and Jamalı Tribes

Two numerous Belooch tribes of Upper Scinde and Kutchee They are cultivators and artizans

(a) Report on the States and Tribes connected with the Frontier of Upper Smide by Major John Jacob C E.

V.—The Dûmki and Jakrani Tribes.

Prior to the campaign of Sir Charles Napier against the predatory tribes on the Scinde frontier in 1845, the Dûmkîs and Jakrânis were a powerful and warlike people, exercising great influence over Lharce, Wuzeera, Poolajee, Chuttur and other tracts which they held, and causing infinite trouble to the British Government. They were, however, subdued together with the neighbouring tribes, and became a peaceable and industrious people. "Not a man of the Belooch settlers, the Jakranis and Dumkis," says Major Jacob, "had ever put his hand to any agricultural implement, or attempted any peaceful labour." When they were really conquered and put to work, a reform in their habits' commenced. They gradually "took to manual labour in their fields with spirit, and even pride; and are now the most hard-working, industrious, well-behaved, cheerful set of men in all Scinde." "Their numbers," he adds, "amount to about two thousand adult males; but for three years past not a man of them has been convicted, or even accused of any crime whatever, great or small ; yet soven or eight years ago they were the terror of the country, murderers and robbers to a man" (a). The Dûmkis are chiefly found in Eastern Kutchee. They are said to have come originally from Persia, and to derive their name from the river Doombuk in that kingdom. The river is also called the Doomruksuja.

VI .- The Talpur Tribe.

A Beloochee race, who entered Scinde in the beginning of the last century; and became soldiers in the service of the Kalhora rulers, whom they plotted against and overthrew in the year 1786. They then banished the Kalhoras, and seized the reins of government.

VII .- The Chandia Tribe.

This tribe formerly occupied the larger portion of the Chandookah Parganah in Upper Scinde, and gave their name to the district. They are now chiefly confined to its western division at the foot of the hills, a barren land imperfectly irrigated. The Chandias are poor, and consequently envious of the prosperity of their neighbours. They are a scattered people (b).

VIII .- The Lashari and Gürchari Tribes.

Independent tribes inhabiting the small hilly barren tract lying between the Khetrânt country and Mooltan. They are shepherds and herdsmen. For a detailed account of these tribes, see Part I, Chapter VI, on the Tribes of Dera Ghazi Khan and its, horders

IX-The Bhûgti Tribe

An independent tribe inhaliting the fully region to the south of the Khetrant territory. Their chief town is Deyrd. They are a Belooch race. Their country is for the most part rugged and barren, but affords in some places good pasturage, while the valleys are fertile. Formerly, the Bhūgtis were a warlike and inarauding people, and when the British army occupied. Afghanistan, seized the convoys on their way thither, and rendered the communications between that country and India so hazardous, that a force was sent to suidue them and other tribes which united with them in the same guilty enterprise (a)

X -The Marri Tribe

The most powerful of the independent tribes beyond the Scinde frontier "Their country extends from the neighbourhood of the Bolan Pass, on the west, to the Bhâgu and Khetrânt territory, on the east, ahout one hundred miles, and from Surtoff, on the south, to the Afghan territory, on the north, a distance of about eighty miles. This tract is for the most part barren and hilly, but it contains many extensive valleys and fertile spots. Through it runs the Narra river, a considerable stream, which rising far northward in the Afghan territory enters the plain at Seebee, waters that fertile district, and thence flows through the whole province of Kutchee. Its waters occasionally reach Scinde, and join with those of the Indus at Khyree Ghuree" (b). The chief town of this tribe is Kahan, which contains about five hundred houses of sun humt brick and mild. The Marris were formerly entirely devoted to plunder and robbery, until they were brought into some kind of order through the instrumentality of Sir C. Napier This tribe is more fully pourtrayed in Part I, Chapter VI.

XI -The Lagar Tribe

The largest and most powerful tribe among the Beloochees in Scinde Like Beloochees generally they are a fine martial race, "with a Jewish cast of counterance, aquiline nose, high forehead, and large expressive eyes. In stature they are somewhat above the middle height, and their make bespeaks more activity than muscular strength. They are a rapacous, vindictive, and dissolute set, and appear to possess few good qualities" (a) A long and more detailed account of this tribe is given in Part I, Chapter VI.

XII -The Karmuûts Tribe

A Belooch tribe on the Indus

XIII - The Jamali Tribe

A Belooch tribe settled on the borders of the desert They are exceedingly poor, the unpromising nature of the soil damping any desire they might have to cultivate it. In Chandookah they are chiefly found at Khyrah Gurhee.

THE HINDU TRIBES AND CASTES OF SCINDE

The Hindus of Scinde occupy a very different position in that province from that which they occupy in India generally. Indeed they have been justly described as being to the other tribes and races of Scinde what the Mahomedans are to the Hindu community in India. They have chiefly come from the Punjah Among them are none of the low caste and outcast tribes found everywhere else in the Indian Pennasula. The Hindus are not landowners in Scinde, but devote themselves exclusively to trade, and religious and caste duties. Although Mahomedans are now so numerous in Scinde, and Mahomedanism is the paramount religion, yet even as late as the seventeenth century the Hindus were ten times more numerous than their conquerors, and Hindusim was the dominant faith.

I -The Brahmanical Tribes

The Brahmans of Scinde are mostly of two tribes, called severally, Pokarno and Sarsadh

1 The Pokarno Tribes

There are worshippers of Maharaj, said to be an avutâr or incarnation of Vishnu, yet who this Vaharaj represents among the incarnations, it is difficult to say. They do not intermining with the Sarsadhs, to whom they consider themselves superior. They dress much like soucars or common traders, and wear a turhan generally of red colour. The Pokarnos are more intelligent than the Sarsadhs. Many are acquainted with Sanskrit literature, and devote them suffices to astrology, casting horoscopes, and the like. They also direct the reli gious duties of other Hindus of the province. None of these Brahmans are of high caste, as is manifest from the fact, that, if opportunity offers, they will readily engage in trade.

2. The Sarsadh Tribe.

The word Sarsadh is a corruption of Sarsat, which is derived from Saraswatiya, indicating that these Brahmans originally came from the neighbourhood of the Saraswati river. The religious tenets of this trike differ greatly from those professed by the Pokarnos. The latter pay their devotions to Vishnu, while the Sarsadhs are worshippers of Shiva and his wife, known as Durgā, Parbatt, Kāli, Singhawāni (hon-rider), Bhawāni, and so forth. They cat the flesh of deer, kids, and sheep, also fish, and some kinds of wild birds, and therefore are regarded as less pure than the other tribe. Their dress is like that of the Pokarnos; but they prefer a white turhan. They study Sanskrit and Gurmukhi writings, and make little profession to astrology. Most of the places in Scinde frequented by pilgrims, such as, Hinglaj, the Maklee hills, near Tatta, Dhara Tirth in the Lukkee hills, near Schwan, are sacred to Bhawāni, and consequently are connected with the Shaiyite form of Hinduism.

II .- Kshatriyas.

There are very few Kshatriyas or Rajpoots in Scinde. They are generally followers of Nanak Shah, and study only Gurmukhi hooks. They are chiefly engaged in trade, and so are looked upon as banyas or banyans. These Kshatriyas will eat meat, but only when killed in a certain fashion, called jhatlo, by one stroke of a sword across the neck of the animal, while the words 'bol khalsa, wah guruki fath,' are pronounced.

III.—The Vaisyas.

There are five trihes of the great Vaisya caste in Scinde. The most important are the Lohana or Lohano, a large and very important trihe, with many subdivisions, and the Bhatio. They are devoted to trade, and carry on most of the commerce of the province. So numerous is the Lohano tribe, that it may be said to embrace the principal portion of the Hindus of Scinde.

The Lohânos wear the jouce, or sacred thread, but nevertheless are not strict Hindus like the Vaisyas of Benares and many other places of India. They drink spirits, and eat meat and fish. Some are worshippers of Vishmu, others of Shiva and his Sakti; others worship the Indus; and others still are attached to the Sikh religion. Their worship is irregular, and is generally conducted in the Panjâbi dulect The Lohânos are Government servants, incicliants, shop keepers, 1271 culturists, and so forth Some of them wear the Mahomedan costume, and allow their heards to grow long, unlike Hindus, and like Mahomedans, cat meat hought of the latter, and drunk water from the hands of persons of inferior caste, a custom repudiated by most Hindus. The Anuls, or Government officials, who everywhere belong to the Lohâno caste, are reputed to be a crafty, deceifful, scheming race. "They are held by no oath, fear no risk, and show no pity when in pursuit of gain, they heatate not to forge documents, scals, and orders, for the most trifling advantage, show a determined fondness for falsehood, and unite the utmost patience in suffering to the greatest covardice in action." (a) The merchants and shop keepers are a sharp, clever people. They carry on a great trade in cloth, while their hanking transactions are very extensive. They commonly affix to their names the titles or designations of Mal, Chand, Ran, Ram, Das, Lâl, and so forth. The Lohânos are also found scattered about Afghanistan, Beloochistan, and the eastern parts of Central Asia

The Hindu and Mahomedan creeds are strangely intermingled in Scinde A Hindu will place himself under Michomedan instruction, and a Michomedan inder Hindu "The Imâm or visible head of a hranch of the Ismaeliyeh heresy has a number of Hindu followers, who reverence him, and pay the usual sum (one eighth of their gains), as if they belonged to the same caste. So also the same phis or saints huried in different parts of the country, are not only respected by individuals of both religions, but, moreover, the Hindus will have one name for each, and the Moslems another. Thus the former venerate the river god under the name of Jenda Pii, whereas the latter call him Khwija Khisr. So also Udhero Lil becomes Shaibh Tahir., Lalu Jasraj is converted into Pir Wangho (Maggar Pir), Rajah Bhartart is called LAI Shahbaz. And of course the Hindus claim those worthies; most probably with more justice than the Moslems, who have merely altered the names for their own purposes. Contrary to the prictice of high caste men in India, here we find that Hindus who have been foreibly made Moslems, and compelled to he circumensed, to say the Kalma, attend the mosque, and ext the flesh of the cow, can be admitted into their original dharma or (religion) by going through certain ceremomes, and priving lughly for the linxing" (b)

IV -The Sudras

All the Sudra crates in Scinde wear the janeo or sacred thread over the shoulder, and exhibit the tilal or sacred mark on the forehead, thereby making pretension to a religious superiority over the same castes in other parts of India. The Sudras are few in number. The principal are the following:-

1. Wâhan.

These sell roasted grain of various kinds. In Persian they are termed Nakhadpâzis. In Northern India they are called Bhûnjas.

2. Sonaro or Targar.

Jewellers. These are a respectable people. Some are wealthy. The Scinde women wear a great profusion of jewels.

Khâtî.

Dyers. An extensive caste in Scinde, for the reason that the clothes of both Mahomedans and Hindus are commonly of coloured cloth. Some reside in towns; But generally the Khatis prefer to live at a distance from them, for the convenience of dyeing.

4. Sochi.

. Shoemakers. They purchase the tanned leather of the Mahomedan mochis or tanners.

5. Hajam.

Barbers. Though of Scinde extraction they come generally from the neighbourhood of Jeysulmere, and wear the dress of their own country.

These are the chief Sudra castes. They are worshippers of Shiva. They are known by certain caste appellations affixed to their names, such as, Teju Wâhan, Parsa Sonâro, Hara Khati, Khatta Sochi.

V.—Religious Mendicants.

1. Shanasi.

This is the same as the Saniyast of other parts of India. They wear a turban, and reddish-coloured clothes. They are sorecrers, and sell charms. The Shanasis do not marry. They worship Shiva. Many have come from Cutch and other neighbouring provinces. It is said, that "they are usually depraved characters, who cat fiesh and fish, and will even drink wine and spirits."

Jogî.

They also wear reddish-coloured clothes like the Shandsi, but a cap instead of a turban. Their places of abode are styled Astan. They have the curious hahit of making a large hole in the lobes of their ears, and hence are styled 'hâna phâr,' or ear splitters. When dying the Jogt is not permitted to he down, but is placed in a sitting posture, leaning forward on a wooden pillow. "Tor the Jogis tomh," says Lieutenant Burton, "they dig a pit, fill it half full of salt, place a mattock in the corpse's hand, and then seat it upon the layer of salt, in the position called patrole, or closs legged, with the arms resting on the wooden pillow. Salt is then again thrown over the body, and earth above it. Some great men of the caste have a tomb of bricks, and a lump lighted before it." (a)

3 Gosam

In appearance he resembles the Shanasi, and although few in number, has many disciples in the country. At death his body is commonly thrown into the water

t Ogar

He resembles the Jogi He 'carries a lat of hollow stick, fastened by a thread round the neck, and invariably blows through it before undertaking any action whatever' There are few Ogars in Seinde

These mendicant castes do not wear the sacred thread. They are all Sharvites. At death their bodies are burned, while those of other Hindus are hurnt.

On the customs observed by the Hindus of the Seinde in performing the funeral obseques of their dead, Lieutenant Burton furnishes the following graphic account "No one is allowed to die in lus bed, otherwise one of the innles of the family, who has attended upon the deceased, hecomes in a state of impurity, and must visit some well known tirth (place of pilgrimage), as for instance, Narayensar in Qutch, Dhara Tirth, &c The sick man, when near death, is placed upon a chanpo, tepan, or poto (that is, a spot besmeared with cowdung), and when in last agony, Ganges water, sherbet of Tulis leaves, &c, must be poured into his mouth. If the dying man be rich, copious alms are then distributed to the poor, but if not sufficiently wealthy, a little wheat and gliec is considered sufficient. The mouriners then bring seven pieces of pure wood, as that of the tamarisk tree, to make up the acharm or bier. Immediately upon this jowaristiks are placed, then some white thâdi cloth, next, a layer of cotton, then a piece of bafta, fine cotton cloth, and lastly, the corpse, in a Lafan, a kind of throud. Over the body a shawl, a piece of kinkab, muskrů, gubadan, or khadbof, heroud.
